Politics and Government: History	True Weekly Constitutional	The (Book) Battle of Wallauga	The Constitution protects the individual right of parents to raise and educate their children as they see fit. It also protects the free speech rights of teachers and students. And, embedded in that, is the important concept of academic freedom, which makes the courts reluctant to second-guess the educational choices of teachers. Sometimes, all of these rights and interests seem to conflict, and the result is a struggle over the banning of a book - perhaps from a public school library or from the school's curriculum. Author and journalist Katherine Stewart of Wallauga High School in Boone, North Carolina	Sunday, April 06, 2014	3:00 PM	03:00
Politics and Government: History	True Weekly Constitutional	Jemmy and Jeffy's Big Adventure	A friendship for the ages. One of the most important intellectual collaborations in human history. Fifty years of harmonious cooperation on profound issues of government and philosophy. Lewis & Clark? Nah, they just wandered in the wilderness. Lennon & McCartney? Nah, but we have to admit that Lennon was quite a philosopher, at least when he wasn't high. We're talking about Jemmy & Jeffy, a/k/a James Madison and Thomas Jefferson. They weren't much for roughing it, and neither wrote any songs that we know of, but their lifelong friendship produced some of the most important ideas in American constitutional history. Professor Jeffry Morrison of Regent University and the James Madison Foundation tells us all about it.	Sunday, April 13, 2014	3:00 PM	03:00

Politics and Government: History	True Weekly Constitutional	The Good News Club	The Good News Club is an after-school program run by evangelical Christians. A few years back, the Supreme Court ruled that public schools who had denied access to the Club for fear of violating the Establishment Clause had actually violated another part of the First Amendment, the Speech Clause. In essence, the Court said that all groups, religious and non-religious, were constitutionally entitled to equal access to public facilities - otherwise, the government would be regulating their speech based upon its content. Author and journalist Katherine Stewart thinks that the Supreme Court got it wrong: the Good News Club, or rather, the public schools that now allow it on campus, are indeed violating the Establishment Clause, she believes. And whether you agree with her or not, she makes some interesting arguments and tells a compelling story.	Sunday, June 29, 2014	3:00 PM	03:00
