A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

The assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on November 22, 1963 left a psychic wound on America that is with us still today. Few Americans then or now accept that a lone, inconsequential gunman could bring down a president and alter history. In that breach, a culture of conspiracy has arisen that points to sinister forces at work in the shadows. Drawing upon rarely seen archival footage and interviews with key participants, Oswald's Ghost takes a fresh look at Kennedy's assassination, the public's reaction to the tragedy, and the government investigations that instead of calming fears lead to a widespread loss of trust in the institutions that govern our society.

Jim Lehrer hosts By the People: Citizenship in the 21st Century, a documentary featuring some of America's most talented and influential leaders debating the rights and responsibilities of citizenship. The one-hour special will show highlights of the Dialogues in Democracy project that By the People is undertaking in partnership with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. A major focus of the broadcast is the By the People convocation that took place in Williamsburg, Virginia, from November 8 through 11, with the goal of creating thoughts for a new "Declaration of Citizenship in the 21st Century." The convocation brought together a diverse group of approximately 50 influential Americans, reflecting diverse perspectives. Among the participants were: Nathan Baxter, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Central Pennsylvania; David Davenport, former president of Pepperdine University; Lisa Madigan, Illinois Attorney General; Leo Melamed, Chairman Emeritus, Chicago Mercantile Exchange; Robert Moses, founder of The Algebra Project; Craig Newmark, founder of Craigslist; and Indianapolis 500 driver Janet Guthrie.

NOVA brings the history of this frosty subject to life with historical recreations of great moments in low-temperature research and interviews with noted historians and scientists, including Simon Schaffer of the University of Cambridge, and Nobel laureates Eric Cornell and Carl Wieman of the University of Colorado at Boulder and Wolfgang Ketterle of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Part Two, "The Race For Absolute Zero," picks up the story in the late 19th century, when researchers plunged cold science to new lows as they succeeded in reaching the forbidding realm at which oxygen and then nitrogen liquefy. The master of this technology was Scottish chemist James Dewar, who pursued the holy grail of the field--liquefying hydrogen at minus 253 C, just 20 degrees above absolute zero. When he succeeded, he faced the unexpected and even more daunting challenge of liquefying the newly discovered gas helium at a mere 5 degrees above absolute zero. However, he had a talented competitor--Danish physicist Heike Onnes--and the ensuing race to the bottom of the temperature scale was as zealous as the contemporaneous race to the Earth's poles. The end of the 20th century produced another low-temperature contest. No one had ever seen an exotic form of matter called a Bose-Einstein condensate, which only forms at temperatures vanishingly close to absolute zero. But new techniques developed in the 1990s by Daniel Kleppner at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology set the stage for a race to create this truly bizarre substance--and with it win the latest heat in the quest for cold.

"When they passed out talent," Broadway star Carol Channing says of composer and lyricist Jerry Herman, "Jerry stood in line twice." Herman wrote the words and music for some of the greatest Broadway musicals ever mounted, including "Hello, Dolly!," "Mame" and "La Cage aux Folles." "Words and Music by Jerry Herman" uses insightful on-camera interviews, behind-the-scenes rehearsal sessions, rare photographs and never-before-seen archival footage of original Broadway performances to create a warm, humorous and moving portrait of a living theater legend. Five years in the making, this documentary by award-winning filmmaker Amber Edwards chronicles Herman's rapid rise from witty, topical off-Broadway revues during the 1950s to his first Broadway hits in the 1960s ("Milk and Honey," followed quickly by the record-breaking "Dolly" and then "Mame") through the less successful shows of the 1970s ("Dear World," "Mack & Mabel" and "The Grand Tour") to his triumphant return in 1983 with "La Cage aux Folles," which made social and political history.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

The booming Hispanic population in political swing states is creating opportunities and headaches in both political parties as they try to court the Latino vote. NOW on PBS travels to Florida just weeks before its important primary to examine Republican tactics to win over Hispanic Americans. A fifth of Florida's residents are Hispanic, and Republicans are scoring points on traditional issues of faith and national security. But at the same time, they're frustrating Latinos with what many of them see as harsh anti-immigrant rhetoric.

A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

The assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on November 22, 1963 left a psychic wound on America that is with us still today. Few Americans then or now accept that a lone, inconsequential gunman could bring down a president and alter history. In that breach, a culture of conspiracy has arisen that points to sinister forces at work in the shadows. Drawing upon rarely seen archival footage and interviews with key participants, Oswald's Ghost takes a fresh look at Kennedy's assassination, the public's reaction to the tragedy, and the government investigations that instead of calming fears lead to a widespread loss of trust in the institutions that govern our society.

Jim Lehrer hosts By the People: Citizenship in the 21st Century, a documentary featuring some of America's most talented and influential leaders debating the rights and responsibilities of citizenship. The one-hour special will show highlights of the Dialogues in Democracy project that By the People is undertaking in partnership with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. A major focus of the broadcast is the By the People convocation that took place in Williamsburg, Virginia, from November 8 through 11, with the goal of creating thoughts for a new "Declaration of Citizenship in the 21st Century." The convocation brought together a diverse group of approximately 50 influential Americans, reflecting diverse perspectives. Among the participants were: Nathan Baxter, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Central Pennsylvania; David Davenport, former president of Pepperdine University; Lisa Madigan, Illinois Attorney General; Leo Melamed, Chairman Emeritus, Chicago Mercantile Exchange; Robert Moses, founder of The Algebra Project; Craig Newmark, founder of Craigslist; and Indianapolis 500 driver Janet Guthrie.

The Iowa caucuses make history and are history. Now it's up to New Hampshire. We are here in the Granite State, on the road tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "They said this day would never come. They said our sights were set too high. We are one nation. We are one people. And our time for change has come." John Edwards said, "The status quo lost and change won." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is a great night for Democrats. Today we're sending a clear message that we are going to have change and that change will be a Democratic president in the White House in 2009." Unprecedented turnout. A call for change in both parties. Mike Huckabee said, "Tonight what we have seen is a new day in American politics. And tonight it starts in Iowa, but it doesn't end here. It goes to all the other states and ends at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue." Mitt Romney said, "You win the silver in one event, it doesn't mean you're not going to come back and win the gold in the final event, and that we're going to do." In the end, change trumped experience, and Iowa voters sent the campaign to New Hampshire with a bounce, and a few political casualties. The political world, upside down. We look at why, how, and what happens next with Dan Balz of The Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, John Harwood of CNBC and The New York Times and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

There is only one word to describe this week: wow. We'll have a few more words, too, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We sure showed them what a comeback looks like." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Let's give America the kind of comeback that New Hampshire has just given me." Talk about a shock to the system. New Hampshire voters deliver a message to the pollsters and the pundits: we'll make up our own minds, thank you. So the scramble begins anew. Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "The Air Force have a saying that says that if you're not catching flak, you're not over the target. I'm catching the flak. I must be over the target." Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "I believe that it's time to send somebody to Washington who will actually get the job done." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am still fired up and ready to go." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "Two races down, 48 states left to go." A remarkable week in American politics defines a remarkable race for president. Covering the campaign: Peter Baker of Washington Post, James Barnes of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time magazine.

Part One, "The Conquest of Cold," opens in the 1600s when the nature of cold and even heat were a complete mystery. Are they different phenomena or aspects of some unified feature of nature? Are they added to a substance or qualities of the substance itself? The experiments that settled these questions helped stoke the Industrial Revolution, which exploited such fundamental insights as that heat always flows from hot to cold.

Part Two, "The Race For Absolute Zero," picks up the story in the late 19th century, when researchers plunged cold science to new lows as they succeeded in reaching the forbidding realm at which oxygen and then nitrogen liquefy. The master of this technology was Scottish chemist James Dewar, who pursued the holy grail of the field--liquefying hydrogen at minus 253 C, just 20 degrees above absolute zero. When he succeeded, he faced the unexpected and even more daunting challenge of liquefying the newly discovered gas helium at a mere 5 degrees above absolute zero. However, he had a talented competitor--Danish physicist Heike Onnes--and the ensuing race to the bottom of the temperature scale was as zealous as the contemporaneous race to the Earth's poles. The end of the 20th century produced another low-temperature contest. No one had ever seen an exotic form of matter called a Bose-Einstein condensate, which only forms at temperatures vanishingly close to absolute zero. But new techniques developed in the 1990s by Daniel Kleppner at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology set the stage for a race to create this truly bizarre substance--and with it win the latest heat in the quest for cold.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

It was hailed by the New York Times as "surgery of the soul," a groundbreaking medical procedure that promised hope to the most distressed mentally ill patients and their families. But what began as an operation of last resort was soon being performed at some fifty state asylums, often to devastating results. Little more than a decade after his rise to fame, Walter Freeman, the neurologist who championed the procedure, was decried as a moral monster, and lobotomy one of the most barbaric mistakes of modern medicine. American Experience presents "The Lobotomist," the gripping and tragic story of an ambitious doctor, the desperate families who sought his help, and the medical establishment that embraced him. From award-winning producers Barak Goodman and John Maggio (The Boy in the Bubble, The Fight), this one-hour film features interviews with Dr. Freeman's former patients and their families, his students, and medical historians, and offers an unprecedented look at one of the darkest chapters in psychiatric history.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News.

If you thought New Hampshire scrambled the field, wait till you hear what happened since. Tonight on "Washington Week," the Democrats make nice. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We're all family in the Democratic Party." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What we want to do is make sure that we focus on the issues." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "I'm proud of the fact that we have a woman and an African American who are very, very serious candidates for the presidency." But not for long. Mr. Bill Clinton said, "Don't be accusatory with me. I had nothing to do with this lawsuit." As voters prepare to go to the polls in Nevada and South Carolina, every candidate is scrapping for every advantage. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "This is a pivotal election. You know that a lot of nasty things are going on. Ignore that kind of stuff." Gov. Mitt Romney said, "And it is time finally to recognize that an insider will never be able to turn Washington inside out." Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "If I had all the polls and consultants and focus groups and all the television ads and the headquarters and everything that some of these other guys had, I might be as far behind as some of them are." And all turn their eyes to a previously neglected subject, the state of the economy, as Republicans and Democrats actually talk of working together. Pres. George W. Bush said, "The economy has a solid foundation, but that there are areas of real concern." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "We hope to work in a bipartisan way for an initiative that is targeted, that is timely, and is temporary." President Bush was also abroad this week promising to achieve peace in the Middle East within a year. A lot happening this week. We have the reporters covering it. Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, John Harris of Politico, John Maggs of National Journal and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News.

It was hailed by the New York Times as "surgery of the soul," a groundbreaking medical procedure that promised hope to the most distressed mentally ill patients and their families. But what began as an operation of last resort was soon being performed at some fifty state asylums, often to devastating results. Little more than a decade after his rise to fame, Walter Freeman, the neurologist who championed the procedure, was decried as a moral monster, and lobotomy one of the most barbaric mistakes of modern medicine. American Experience presents "The Lobotomist," the gripping and tragic story of an ambitious doctor, the desperate families who sought his help, and the medical establishment that embraced him. From award-winning producers Barak Goodman and John Maggio (The Boy in the Bubble, The Fight), this one-hour film features interviews with Dr. Freeman's former patients and their families, his students, and medical historians, and offers an unprecedented look at one of the darkest chapters in psychiatric history.

With the primary season underway, America is focused on whether the next president will be Democrat or Republican. Meanwhile, within the Democratic Party another struggle is unfolding. NOW on PBS reports on a rift between progressives who believe the party has sold out its liberal values and centrists eager to capture a broad swath of the more conservative voters. It's a struggle that is taking place at all levels of government. In Maryland, six-term incumbent Al Wynn is facing a tough challenge from newcomer Donna Edwards. According to Edwards, Wynn has sold out to big business and the Bush agenda, including a vote for the war in Iraq and the 2005 energy bill. Wynn says his challenger is naïve and doesn't understand that there are choices in politics between compromise and doing nothing. Fueling candidates like Edwards are the foot soldiers of the progressive battle--bloggers and other political outsiders like Matt Stoller of OpenLeft.com who are drumming up national support on the Internet. Maria

Hinojosa speaks with the candidates and Matt Bai, author of "The Argument: Billionaires, Bloggers, and the Battle To Remake Democratic Politics."

If you thought New Hampshire scrambled the field, wait till you hear what happened since. Tonight on "Washington Week," the Democrats make nice. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We're all family in the Democratic Party." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What we want to do is make sure that we focus on the issues." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "I'm proud of the fact that we have a woman and an African American who are very, very serious candidates for the presidency." But not for long. Mr. Bill Clinton said, "Don't be accusatory with me. I had nothing to do with this lawsuit." As voters prepare to go to the polls in Nevada and South Carolina, every candidate is scrapping for every advantage. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "This is a pivotal election. You know that a lot of nasty things are going on. Ignore that kind of stuff." Gov. Mitt Romney said, "And it is time finally to recognize that an insider will never be able to turn Washington inside out." Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "If I had all the polls and consultants and focus groups and all the television ads and the headquarters and everything that some of these other guys had, I might be as far behind as some of them are." And all turn their eyes to a previously neglected subject, the state of the economy, as Republicans and Democrats actually talk of working together. Pres. George W. Bush said, "The economy has a solid foundation, but that there are areas of real concern." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "We hope to work in a bipartisan way for an initiative that is targeted, that is timely, and is temporary." President Bush was also abroad this week promising to achieve peace in the Middle East within a year. A lot happening this week. We have the reporters covering it. Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, John Harris of Politico, John Maggs of National Journal and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News.

With the primary season underway, America is focused on whether the next president will be Democrat or Republican. Meanwhile, within the Democratic Party another struggle is unfolding. NOW on PBS reports on a rift between progressives who believe the party has sold out its liberal values and centrists eager to capture a broad swath of the more conservative voters. It's a struggle that is taking place at all levels of government. In Maryland, six-term incumbent Al Wynn is facing a tough challenge from newcomer Donna Edwards. According to Edwards, Wynn has sold out to big business and the Bush agenda, including a vote for the war in Iraq and the 2005 energy bill. Wynn says his challenger is naïve and doesn't understand that there are choices in politics between compromise and doing nothing. Fueling candidates like Edwards are the foot soldiers of the progressive battle--bloggers and other political outsiders like Matt Stoller of OpenLeft.com who are drumming up national support on the Internet. Maria Hinojosa speaks with the candidates and Matt Bai, author of "The Argument: Billionaires, Bloggers, and the Battle To Remake Democratic Politics."

If you thought New Hampshire scrambled the field, wait till you hear what happened since. Tonight on "Washington Week," the Democrats make nice. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We're all family in the Democratic Party." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What we want to do is make sure that we focus on the issues." Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "I'm proud of the fact that we have a woman and an African American who are very, very serious candidates for the presidency." But not for long. Mr. Bill Clinton said, "Don't be accusatory with me. I had nothing to do with this lawsuit." As voters prepare to go to the polls in Nevada and South Carolina, every candidate is scrapping for every advantage. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "This is a pivotal election. You know that a lot of nasty things are going on. Ignore that kind of stuff." Gov. Mitt Romney said, "And it is time finally to recognize that an insider will never be able to turn Washington inside out." Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) said, "If I had all the polls and consultants and focus groups and all the television ads and the headquarters and everything that some of these other guys had, I might be as far behind as some of them are." And all turn their eyes to a previously neglected subject, the state of the economy, as Republicans and Democrats actually talk of working together. Pres. George W. Bush said, "The economy has a solid foundation, but that there are areas of real concern." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "We hope to work in a bipartisan way for an initiative that is targeted, that is timely, and is temporary." President Bush was also abroad this week promising to achieve peace in the Middle East within a year. A lot happening this week. We have the reporters covering it. Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, John Harris of Politico, John Maggs of National Journal and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The feds try to fix the economy and showdown time in two critical states, South Carolina and Florida, on "Washington Week." Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The stimulus package will put money in the hands of hard working Americans." Sec. Henry Paulson said, "I'm looking forward to working with the Senate and working with the House to get a package as soon as possible because, again, speed is of the essence." There's nothing like a crashing stock market, a housing slump, and slipping consumer confidence to get Republicans and Democrats to the table. But will the new economic rescue plan do the trick? On the campaign trail, the Democrats squabble. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I did not mention his name." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Your husband did." She replied, "Well, I'm here. He's not." He answered, "Okay, well, I can't tell who I'm running against sometimes." While Republicans seek peace. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "All these are good people who are running here and I respect them." Which side has the tougher challenge? The voters are speaking, candidates are falling by the wayside, and the answer is no more clear. Covering the week, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Wayne Washington of The State newspaper, Michael Duffy of Time magazine and Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News.

FRONTLINE reports from the lawless Pakistani tribal areas along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border and reveals how the area has fallen under the control of a resurgent Taliban militia, which uses it as a launching pad for attacks on U.S. and coalition forces in Afghanistan. Despite the presence of more than 70,000 Pakistani troops, the Taliban has claimed two tribal agencies, North and South Waziristan, as Taliban republics. The area, off limits to U.S. troops by agreement with Pakistan's president and long suspected of harboring Osama bin Laden and his deputy Ayman al-Zawahiri, is now considered a failed state. President Pervez Musharraf tells FRONTLINE reporter Martin Smith that Pakistan's strategy, which includes cash payments to militants who lay down their arms, has clearly foundered. In a region little understood because it is closed to most observers, FRONTLINE investigates a secret front in the war on terror.

"The Road Home" focuses on stories of participants' ancestors in the early 20th century, including the tragic account of Tom Joyner's great-uncles, who were executed in 1915 for a crime that evidence suggests they did not commit, and Bliss Broyard's stunning discovery about the identity of her father - renowned New York Times critic Anatole Broyard - at the time of his death. "A Way Out of No Way" continues to trace the guests' lineages back through the late 1800s to the Civil War, featuring such stories as that of Chris Rock's great-great-grandfather, a black Civil War veteran who was twice elected to the South Carolina State Legislature, and Don Cheadle's great-great-grandparents, who, as Chickasaw Freedmen, struggled to build lives for themselves in Oklahoma after being excluded from the tribal rolls.

On January 8, 1902, a commuter train traveling through a tunnel in New York City's Grand Central Depot ran into another train, killing 17 people. An engineer's innovative response to the crisis gave birth to one of America's greatest establishments: Grand Central Terminal. By 1947, over 65 million people had traveled through the station. Today, it is one of New York's most famous spaces and a living monument to the nation's great railway age.

Temporary workers and independent contractors make up nearly a third of the U.S. workforce, and represent a growing asset to companies who rely on freelance flexibility. But corporations are using the designation "freelancer" to avoid paying health care and other benefits, even though many of these workers put in the same hours as their covered counterparts. NOW looks at the effect of this tactic on the lives and personal economy of freelance workers. We also examine an Enterprising Idea to help independent workers manage their personal needs, including benefits, networking and investment help. Freelancers Union, founded by former labor lawyer and MacArthur grant recipient Sara Horowitz, provides a safety net for over 60,000 workers, but how is it viewed by the traditional labor movement?

We have seen them dressed in costumes and dancing at circuses, living solitary lives at zoos or giving our children a thrill with a ride on their back. But the largest land animals live a life that is completely foreign to us when left to their own in the wild--one complete with battles and births, kidnappings and camaraderie. More than fifteen years ago, Martyn Colbeck began to document in film and photos the lives of African elephants. For the better part of two decades, he has grown particularly close to the elephant matriarch, Echo, and her close-knit family, who have never failed to astonish, amuse, and inspire him.

Each year, a small shorebird that winters on the southern tip of South America must make a 10,000-mile journey to its nesting grounds in the Arctic -- one of the longest migrations on earth. The pocket-sized long distance traveler times its migration precisely to coincide with the annual spawning of one of earth's most ancient creatures. Horseshoe crab eggs in the Delaware Bay fuel the little bird's epic journey to the Arctic...but recently, bird numbers have started to crash. The story of the red knot and the horseshoe crab is a living example of how every species is interconnected -- each one important, no matter how big or small.

Only four days until the Super Tuesday primaries. A race that began with more than a dozen candidates is down to just a handful, and some of each party's biggest names - Ted Kennedy, Arnold Schwarzenegger - have made their choices. Who knew things could get so exciting. I'm here in Los Angeles with 1,000 of my closest friends, tonight on "Washington Week." The Democrats are all sweetness and light. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "And you know, it did take a Clinton to clean after the first Bush and I think it might take another one to clean up after the second Bush." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I don't think the choice is between black and white or it's about gender or religion. I don't think it's about young or old. I think what is at stake right now is whether we are looking backwards or we are looking forward." The Republicans, not so sweet, not so light. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "What does that mean? What does that mean, we don't want them-" Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) replied, "It means a timetable for until we leave." Gov. Romney said, "Listen, senator, let's-" Anderson Cooper said, "Let me jump in, because the quote that I have-" Gov. Romney said, "Is it not fair, is it not fair to have the person who's being accused of having a position he doesn't have be the expert on what his position is?" The field just keeps on shrinking. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said "It's time for me to step aside so that history can blaze its path." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "It is time now for Barack Obama." While the big endorsements keep rolling in, the race for president transformed as voters in 22 states head for the polls this Tuesday. Who will be left standing? We assess the state of this unexpected and unpredictable campaign year with Peter Baker of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Stick a fork in it, the Republican race is done - kind of. The Democratic race is most definitely not. We look at the ups, the downs, and the spoils of Super Tuesday, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "We're turning out to be a scrappy little team." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "There's not a lot of time to catch your breath, so we are full speed ahead." For the Democrats, the neck-and-neck campaign continues. For Republicans, the choice gets clearer after Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA), who spent $50 million of his own money, drops out. He said, "Frankly, in this time of war, I simply cannot let my campaign be a part of aiding a surrender to terror." And the troops settle on a nominee. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said "We must get used to the idea that we are the Republican Party frontrunner for the nomination." But grudgingly. He continues, "On the issue of illegal immigration, a position which-" "Boooo" responds the crowd. And Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) forges on. He said, "I know how hard it is to get in and sometimes it's even harder to get out." The results, the challenges ahead, the money, candidates trying to seal the deal. We look at the current state of the race with four reporters who stayed up late Tuesday night. Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and Michael Duffy of Time magazine.

We are in sunny Florida for the next in our series of election year road-shows. More drama, more questions. We'll try to answer them all tonight on "Washington Week." The frontrunner, Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), said, "We have now won East and West, North and South, and across the heartland of this country we love." The candidate in search of a firewall, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), said, "I'm tested. I'm ready. Let's make it happen." And the likely Republican nominee, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ), said, "My friends, I promise you, I am fired up and ready to go." Which one had the best week? The campaigns head to the next big tests in Wisconsin, Ohio, Texas, and Pennsylvania. But what about the loose ends like Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR)? He commented, "You stay and you keep playing until the last second of the clock has sounded." And Michigan and Florida? We are here in Florida looking for some of the answers with Jim Barnes of National Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News, Jeanne Cummings of Politico and Todd Purdum of Vanity Fair.

Are politicians listening to middle-class families on the edge of economic collapse? Leading up to the Super Tuesday primaries, polls indicate that the economy ranks as the number one issue on the minds of Americans, beating out immigration, global warming, even terrorism. NOW on PBS heads to America's heartland -- Illinois -- to investigate rampant anxiety among America's middle class. How did families on the edge of financial collapse get to this point, and which presidential candidate do they think can restore economic hope and stability?

Only four days until the Super Tuesday primaries. A race that began with more than a dozen candidates is down to just a handful, and some of each party's biggest names - Ted Kennedy, Arnold Schwarzenegger - have made their choices. Who knew things could get so exciting. I'm here in Los Angeles with 1,000 of my closest friends, tonight on "Washington Week." The Democrats are all sweetness and light. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "And you know, it did take a Clinton to clean after the first Bush and I think it might take another one to clean up after the second Bush." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I don't think the choice is between black and white or it's about gender or religion. I don't think it's about young or old. I think what is at stake right now is whether we are looking backwards or we are looking forward." The Republicans, not so sweet, not so light. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "What does that mean? What does that mean, we don't want them-" Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) replied, "It means a timetable for until we leave." Gov. Romney said, "Listen, senator, let's-" Anderson Cooper said, "Let me jump in, because the quote that I have-" Gov. Romney said, "Is it not fair, is it not fair to have the person who's being accused of having a position he doesn't have be the expert on what his position is?" The field just keeps on shrinking. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said "It's time for me to step aside so that history can blaze its path." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "It is time now for Barack Obama." While the big endorsements keep rolling in, the race for president transformed as voters in 22 states head for the polls this Tuesday. Who will be left standing? We assess the state of this unexpected and unpredictable campaign year with Peter Baker of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Stick a fork in it, the Republican race is done - kind of. The Democratic race is most definitely not. We look at the ups, the downs, and the spoils of Super Tuesday, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "We're turning out to be a scrappy little team." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "There's not a lot of time to catch your breath, so we are full speed ahead." For the Democrats, the neck-and-neck campaign continues. For Republicans, the choice gets clearer after Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA), who spent $50 million of his own money, drops out. He said, "Frankly, in this time of war, I simply cannot let my campaign be a part of aiding a surrender to terror." And the troops settle on a nominee. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said "We must get used to the idea that we are the Republican Party frontrunner for the nomination." But grudgingly. He continues, "On the issue of illegal immigration, a position which-" "Boooo" responds the crowd. And Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR) forges on. He said, "I know how hard it is to get in and sometimes it's even harder to get out." The results, the challenges ahead, the money, candidates trying to seal the deal. We look at the current state of the race with four reporters who stayed up late Tuesday night. Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and Michael Duffy of Time magazine.

We are in sunny Florida for the next in our series of election year road-shows. More drama, more questions. We'll try to answer them all tonight on "Washington Week." The frontrunner, Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), said, "We have now won East and West, North and South, and across the heartland of this country we love." The candidate in search of a firewall, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), said, "I'm tested. I'm ready. Let's make it happen." And the likely Republican nominee, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ), said, "My friends, I promise you, I am fired up and ready to go." Which one had the best week? The campaigns head to the next big tests in Wisconsin, Ohio, Texas, and Pennsylvania. But what about the loose ends like Gov. Mike Huckabee (R-AR)? He commented, "You stay and you keep playing until the last second of the clock has sounded." And Michigan and Florida? We are here in Florida looking for some of the answers with Jim Barnes of National Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News, Jeanne Cummings of Politico and Todd Purdum of Vanity Fair.

William "Buffalo Bill" Cody's legendary exploits helped create the myth of the American West -- one that endures today. In 1883, he transformed himself into a master showman, creating and starring in a world-famous traveling show that brought the "real" Wild West to life. Part circus, part history, "Buffalo Bill's Wild West" toured for three decades, playing to enthusiastic crowds across the United States and Europe. Richard Ben Cramer narrates.

To some, he was one of America's greatest heroes: a brave and loyal guide who laid out a path for the westward-moving nation, an Indian tracker who could follow any trail, and a fearless warrior featured in dozens of best-selling novels. But to others, Christopher "Kit" Carson was a villain who waged a merciless crusade against Native Americans. In the end, his contradictions would define his legacy -- and tell the true story of how the West was won. American Experience premieres "Kit Carson," from Emmy Award-winning director Stephen Ives (New Orleans, Las Vegas: An Unconventional History, Seabiscuit). The 90-minute documentary draws upon rich archival materials, original recreations, and interviews with authors Hampton Sides and Sally Denton, Western historian Paul Hutton, Navajo historian Harry Walters, and more, to reveal the many facets of a complex and controversial figure who became a legend in his own lifetime.

Pete Seeger helped introduce America to its own musical heritage, devoting his life to using the power of song as a force for social change. Standing strong for deeply-held beliefs, Seeger went from the top of the pop charts to the top of the blacklist and was banned from American commercial television for more than 17 years. This determined singer/songwriter made his voice heard and encouraged the people of the world to sing out along with him. Now almost 90, Seeger continues to invigorate and inspire the musicians who help tell his story--including Joan Baez, Bruce Springsteen, Natalie Maines, Tom Paxton, Arlo Guthrie, and others.

Will a Bush Administration effort open hundreds of thousands of acres of public land to private development? Signed by President Bill Clinton in 2001, the Roadless Area Conservation Rule protects nearly 60 million acres of the country's national forest lands from most road building, mining and logging. Over the last seven years, the Bush administration has tried to amend or repeal the landmark regulation to give states more flexibility. NOW travels to southeast Idaho to investigate how a proposed change in the rule threatens to open thousands of acres of pristine public lands to private development. In the report, NOW speaks to representatives from the ranching, environmental, and mining communities, as well an administration official. Who gets to control the fate of Idaho's vast roadless forests? Find out how you can help shape the answer.

Countdown to Texas and Ohio. The charges, the countercharges and the warm-up to the general election campaign, this week on "Washington Week." The candidates are taking their best shots. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As you may have noticed, I'm not the youngest candidate in the race. I am the most experienced and I think I have the judgment necessary to lead." Sen. Hillary Clinton said (D-NY) said, "Celestial choirs will be singing and everyone will know we should do the right thing and the world will be perfect." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When I hear George Bush saying that he didn't think we're in a recession, then it's a sign that we have a Washington that is out of touch." But is time running out? Voters are worried about healthcare, jobs, and the economy. Which candidate will best answer those questions? Tuesday may tell the tale. Covering the week, Ohio native Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Texas native Gebe Martinez of Politico, and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Humans have had a unique relationship with raptors, nature's aerial killing machines, for more than four thousand years, first through the ancient sport of falconry, and, more recently, as scientists and engineers have turned to these mighty birds--from golden eagles, red-tailed hawks, and turkey vultures, to great gray owls and the peregrine falcon--as the inspiration for the latest in aircraft design. Using the tricks and tactics of raptors as their model, engineers have devised fighter jets with unprecedented maneuverability and stealth.

Out of an Ice Age emerged one of our most majestic creatures -- the polar bear. From its brown bear ancestry, the predator evolved to be a master of a harsh and unwelcoming ice kingdom. Intelligent, adaptable and fierce, the polar bear learned how to survive in a place that offers few comforts to any creature. But now that very environment is in flux. And so is the polar bear's fate. The Arctic is changing. As temperatures slowly rise and the ice recedes, the shore is getting further away. Food sources that the polar bear have come to rely on are becoming less plentiful. In this changing climate, the polar bear is already showing signs of distress. While polar bears struggle, opportunistic grizzlies fare well, as they benefit from the melting Arctic's effects on its ecosystem. While the grizzly moves into newly opened territories, the polar bear can only wait for the freezing of its one-time kingdom. If the changing world proclaims the grizzly the new king of the Arctic, what will become of the polar bear?

Long ago in the age of dinosaurs, a volcano in eastern China erupted and buried a host of strange creatures in ash, creating exquisite fossils that preserved a big surprise--many dinosaurs were covered in feathers. In The Four-Winged Dinosaur, NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.

At a research site in Fongoli, Senegal, a female chimpanzee breaks off a branch, chews the end to make it sharp, then uses this rudimentary spear to skewer a tasty bushbaby hiding inside a hollow tree. The footage represents an astonishing breakthrough for primate researchers: It's the first time anyone has documented a chimpanzee wielding a carefully prepared, preplanned weapon. But it's only the latest in a slew of extraordinary new findings about ape behavior. The more researchers learn about the great apes -- chimpanzees, bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans -- the more evidence they find of creative intelligence. What, then, is the essential difference between us and them? "Ape Genius," a NOVA-National Geographic special, explores that provocative question and examines research that is illuminating the ape mind.

Will a Bush Administration effort open hundreds of thousands of acres of public land to private development? Signed by President Bill Clinton in 2001, the Roadless Area Conservation Rule protects nearly 60 million acres of the country's national forest lands from most road building, mining and logging. Over the last seven years, the Bush administration has tried to amend or repeal the landmark regulation to give states more flexibility. NOW travels to southeast Idaho to investigate how a proposed change in the rule threatens to open thousands of acres of pristine public lands to private development. In the report, NOW speaks to representatives from the ranching, environmental, and mining communities, as well an administration official. Who gets to control the fate of Idaho's vast roadless forests? Find out how you can help shape the answer.

Momentum, one Democrat has it, another could use it. Plus, John McCain and the lobbyists, and Castro resigns this week on "Washington Week." Who can be your president? Take your pick. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I am better prepared to be the president and commander-in-chief that we need right now." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What I believe was the single most important foreign policy decision of this generation - whether or not to go to war in Iraq - I believe I showed the judgment of a commander-in-chief." For Democrats it's which claim to believe. The stakes are crystal clear. Former Pres. Bill Clinton said to voters, "If she wins Texas and Ohio, I think she'll be the nominee. If you don't deliver for her, I don't think she can be. It's all on you." While they battle it out, the likely Republican nominee squared off on another front. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) stated, "At no time have I ever done anything that would betray the public trust nor make a decision which in any way would not be in the public interest and that would favor anyone or any organization." What do John McCain's Washington connections tell us about how government works and how it doesn't? And nearly half a century after he claimed power, Cuba's Fidel Castro resigns. What happens next? Covering the week, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek, and Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio.

Countdown to Texas and Ohio. The charges, the countercharges and the warm-up to the general election campaign, this week on "Washington Week." The candidates are taking their best shots. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As you may have noticed, I'm not the youngest candidate in the race. I am the most experienced and I think I have the judgment necessary to lead." Sen. Hillary Clinton said (D-NY) said, "Celestial choirs will be singing and everyone will know we should do the right thing and the world will be perfect." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When I hear George Bush saying that he didn't think we're in a recession, then it's a sign that we have a Washington that is out of touch." But is time running out? Voters are worried about healthcare, jobs, and the economy. Which candidate will best answer those questions? Tuesday may tell the tale. Covering the week, Ohio native Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Texas native Gebe Martinez of Politico, and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Will a Bush Administration effort open hundreds of thousands of acres of public land to private development? Signed by President Bill Clinton in 2001, the Roadless Area Conservation Rule protects nearly 60 million acres of the country's national forest lands from most road building, mining and logging. Over the last seven years, the Bush administration has tried to amend or repeal the landmark regulation to give states more flexibility. NOW travels to southeast Idaho to investigate how a proposed change in the rule threatens to open thousands of acres of pristine public lands to private development. In the report, NOW speaks to representatives from the ranching, environmental, and mining communities, as well an administration official. Who gets to control the fate of Idaho's vast roadless forests? Find out how you can help shape the answer.

Momentum, one Democrat has it, another could use it. Plus, John McCain and the lobbyists, and Castro resigns this week on "Washington Week." Who can be your president? Take your pick. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I am better prepared to be the president and commander-in-chief that we need right now." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "What I believe was the single most important foreign policy decision of this generation - whether or not to go to war in Iraq - I believe I showed the judgment of a commander-in-chief." For Democrats it's which claim to believe. The stakes are crystal clear. Former Pres. Bill Clinton said to voters, "If she wins Texas and Ohio, I think she'll be the nominee. If you don't deliver for her, I don't think she can be. It's all on you." While they battle it out, the likely Republican nominee squared off on another front. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) stated, "At no time have I ever done anything that would betray the public trust nor make a decision which in any way would not be in the public interest and that would favor anyone or any organization." What do John McCain's Washington connections tell us about how government works and how it doesn't? And nearly half a century after he claimed power, Cuba's Fidel Castro resigns. What happens next? Covering the week, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Eamon Javers of BusinessWeek, and Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio.

Countdown to Texas and Ohio. The charges, the countercharges and the warm-up to the general election campaign, this week on "Washington Week." The candidates are taking their best shots. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As you may have noticed, I'm not the youngest candidate in the race. I am the most experienced and I think I have the judgment necessary to lead." Sen. Hillary Clinton said (D-NY) said, "Celestial choirs will be singing and everyone will know we should do the right thing and the world will be perfect." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "When I hear George Bush saying that he didn't think we're in a recession, then it's a sign that we have a Washington that is out of touch." But is time running out? Voters are worried about healthcare, jobs, and the economy. Which candidate will best answer those questions? Tuesday may tell the tale. Covering the week, Ohio native Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Texas native Gebe Martinez of Politico, and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Long ago in the age of dinosaurs, a volcano in eastern China erupted and buried a host of strange creatures in ash, creating exquisite fossils that preserved a big surprise--many dinosaurs were covered in feathers. In The Four-Winged Dinosaur, NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.

And you thought maybe it was going to be over? We'll tell you why the 2008 presidential campaign may just be beginning. This week on "Washington Week:" the big rebound. Responding to applause, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you, Ohio. We're going on, we're going strong, and we're going all the way." She breaks her losing streak after Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) fails to close the deal. But then there's the math. Obama said, "No matter what happens tonight, we have nearly the same delegate lead as we did this morning and we are on our way to winning this nomination." The Democrats deadlocked. Who has the momentum? Who has the money? Who has Michigan and Florida? Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "We've got a major train wreck." All those questions are answered on the Republican side as Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) officially clinches the nomination. He said, "My background and my judgment allow me to do the thing that's most important for America: to inspire a generation of Americans to serve a cause greater than their self-interest." President George Bush is on board. He said to McCain, "I wish you all the best and I'm proud to be your friend." Will that help or will it hurt? Deciphering the week: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Should telecommunication companies receive retroactive immunity for their role in helping the government eavesdrop on American phone calls and e-mails? As Congress and President Bush duel over the answer to that question, NOW on PBS interviews a whistleblower with exclusive insight into the role played by one of those companies. Also, NOW goes back to Vermont to check in with Wynona Ward, the founder of Stopping Domestic Violence Will Travel. A truck driver with a law degree, Ward travels around Vermont in her mobile law office providing legal services to victims of domestic violence trapped by both abuse and rural isolation.

Why does the United States remain one of the few developed countries to allow children to play with toys that some scientists say may cause infertility in boys? The toys in question contain substances called phthalates (pronounced "thal-ates"). While the European Union has banned these substances in products meant for children, there is powerful resistance from the chemical and toy industries to doing the same here. NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels from California, where citizens have successfully gotten the state to pass a ban on phthalates in children's toys, to New York City's prestigious Toy Fair, and to Washington, D.C., to uncover some answers.

Big debates over big issues that could have a direct effect on your life, this week on "Washington Week." Fasten your seat belts: high gas prices, collapsing credit, and big Wall Street bailouts. A consumer said, "Everybody is watching the price of gas. Nobody is talking about the price of a gallon of milk. I got two kids and a gallon of milk is almost $5." Pres. George W. Bush said, "In the long run our economy is going to be fine. Right now we are dealing with a difficult situation." The nation's economy is rocking and rolling but not in a good way. Who pays the price? Sooner or later the presidential candidates will have to deal with all that, but first they've got an election to win. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) spent the week wading in and through one of the nation's most confused and painful debates - race. He said, "The anger is real. It is powerful. And to simply wish it away, to condemn it without understanding its roots only serves to widen the chasm of misunderstanding that exists between the races." Did Obama manage to change the subject from the topic of his controversial pastor? Can he keep his critics at bay? And will a last-minute Bill Richardson endorsement help? For Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) the answer to those questions may come in Michigan and Florida. She said, "We won't achieve universal health care. We won't end the housing crisis and get the economy moving again unless we win in Michigan and Florida in November." The Democratic primary by the numbers. And at the Supreme Court, gun control: front and center. Is an outright weapons ban constitutional? The arguments pro and con. Covering the stories this week: David Wessel of The Wall Street Journal, John Harris of Politico, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times.

The Outer Banks of North Carolina are a slim and moving line of sand in the open Atlantic. Many travelers think they know these islands, but south of Ocracoke Inlet there rises a luminous bar of sand 60 miles in extent, with no roads, no bridges and no hotels. These are the wild beaches of Cape Lookout - one of the few remaining natural barrier islands in the world. At once an exaltation and elegy, "Ribbon of Sand" profiles this seascape and the transitory islands that are doomed to disappear. Meryl Streep reads excerpts from Rachel Carson's writings.

Big debates over big issues that could have a direct effect on your life, this week on "Washington Week." Fasten your seat belts: high gas prices, collapsing credit, and big Wall Street bailouts. A consumer said, "Everybody is watching the price of gas. Nobody is talking about the price of a gallon of milk. I got two kids and a gallon of milk is almost $5." Pres. George W. Bush said, "In the long run our economy is going to be fine. Right now we are dealing with a difficult situation." The nation's economy is rocking and rolling but not in a good way. Who pays the price? Sooner or later the presidential candidates will have to deal with all that, but first they've got an election to win. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) spent the week wading in and through one of the nation's most confused and painful debates - race. He said, "The anger is real. It is powerful. And to simply wish it away, to condemn it without understanding its roots only serves to widen the chasm of misunderstanding that exists between the races." Did Obama manage to change the subject from the topic of his controversial pastor? Can he keep his critics at bay? And will a last-minute Bill Richardson endorsement help? For Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) the answer to those questions may come in Michigan and Florida. She said, "We won't achieve universal health care. We won't end the housing crisis and get the economy moving again unless we win in Michigan and Florida in November." The Democratic primary by the numbers. And at the Supreme Court, gun control: front and center. Is an outright weapons ban constitutional? The arguments pro and con. Covering the stories this week: David Wessel of The Wall Street Journal, John Harris of Politico, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times.

Why does the United States remain one of the few developed countries to allow children to play with toys that some scientists say may cause infertility in boys? The toys in question contain substances called phthalates (pronounced "thal-ates"). While the European Union has banned these substances in products meant for children, there is powerful resistance from the chemical and toy industries to doing the same here. NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels from California, where citizens have successfully gotten the state to pass a ban on phthalates in children's toys, to New York City's prestigious Toy Fair, and to Washington, D.C., to uncover some answers.

In 1897, Robert Peary returned to New York from his latest Arctic expedition with five Eskimos for study at the American Museum of Natural history. Anthropology regarded the Eskimos as a rare species. Within months, four of the Eskimos died, leaving a young boy, Minik, alone in a foreign land. This program offers a thought-provoking look at the intersection of race, culture and the budding science of anthropology at the turn of the 20th century.

Who wins and how? That's the question facing all three campaigns. We explain why, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I know there are some in Washington and there are some in the media who want this race to be over. Well, I disagree." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "If I've got the American people behind me, then I fear no man and I fear no woman." The Democratic primary campaign - is it turning into a death match? And if it does, who really wins? The trends, the scenarios for victory, the issues. What are we learning from these candidates about the topics voters care about, like the economy? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "In this crisis, as in all I may face in the future, I will not allow dogma to override common sense." Sen. Obama said, "George Bush called this the ownership society. But what he really meant was you're on your own society." Sen. Clinton said, "The last time we had fiscal responsibility, a balanced budget and a surplus, it was a Democrat in the White House." The big plans, the big games, the unforced errors. We look at them all with the reporters covering the week:

Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, James Barnes of National Journal, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Could a new effort to fight global warming save money and create jobs at the same time? NOW looks at a city-wide plan in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to make all its buildings more energy efficient. Up to 80 percent of emissions in many urban cities comes from buildings. Cambridge hopes that this unprecedented effort to green its buildings will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 10 percent in just five years, the equivalent of taking 33,000 cars off the road. If every major city in America took the same approach, it would have a significant impact on the carbon footprint of the United States -- and it would generate tens of millions of new "green" jobs.

Who wins and how? That's the question facing all three campaigns. We explain why, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) stated, "I know there are some in Washington and there are some in the media who want this race to be over. Well, I disagree." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "If I've got the American people behind me, then I fear no man and I fear no woman." The Democratic primary campaign - is it turning into a death match? And if it does, who really wins? The trends, the scenarios for victory, the issues. What are we learning from these candidates about the topics voters care about, like the economy? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "In this crisis, as in all I may face in the future, I will not allow dogma to override common sense." Sen. Obama said, "George Bush called this the ownership society. But what he really meant was you're on your own society." Sen. Clinton said, "The last time we had fiscal responsibility, a balanced budget and a surplus, it was a Democrat in the White House." The big plans, the big games, the unforced errors. We look at them all with the reporters covering the week: Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, James Barnes of National Journal, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

In 1897, Robert Peary returned to New York from his latest Arctic expedition with five Eskimos for study at the American Museum of Natural history. Anthropology regarded the Eskimos as a rare species. Within months, four of the Eskimos died, leaving a young boy, Minik, alone in a foreign land. This program offers a thought-provoking look at the intersection of race, culture and the budding science of anthropology at the turn of the 20th century.

Could a new effort to fight global warming save money and create jobs at the same time? NOW looks at a city-wide plan in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to make all its buildings more energy efficient. Up to 80 percent of emissions in many urban cities comes from buildings. Cambridge hopes that this unprecedented effort to green its buildings will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 10 percent in just five years, the equivalent of taking 33,000 cars off the road. If every major city in America took the same approach, it would have a significant impact on the carbon footprint of the United States -- and it would generate tens of millions of new "green" jobs.

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

Cleveland rocks and so does this political campaign. We're here to find out why here in northeast Ohio this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Thank you" to the crowd. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thank you, thank you" to his supporters, and Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you so much" to hers. The presidential candidates have come and gone and will return again. States like Ohio are too important to ignore. Next door in Pennsylvania this week, the Democrats were preparing for the long haul. Sen. Clinton said, "Let me tell you something, when it comes to finishing the fight, Rocky and I have a lot in common. I never quit, I never give up, and I know that we're going to make it together." Sen. Obama replied, "We've got to remember, "Rocky" was a movie, and so is the idea that somebody can fight for working people and at the same time embrace the broken system in Washington." While Republican John McCain set out across the country to reintroduce himself to voters. His announcer referred to him as "John McCain, the American president Americans have been waiting for." The issues are as thorny as ever, the economy and the war. Who has the best ideas, the best strategy, and the most money to survive the next big test? We assess that this week with Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

The war in Iraq, rhetoric and reality, plus new help for homeowners, and the week in presidential politics, this week on "Washington Week." The administration says the news in Iraq is good. Gen. David Petraeus said, "There has been significant but uneven security progress in Iraq." But not good enough to pull out anytime soon. The generals want to freeze troop levels. Pres. George Bush said, "General Petraeus says he'll need time to consolidate his forces and assess how this reduced American presence will affect conditions on the ground. And I've told him he'll have all the time he needs." The response on Capitol Hill, not so good. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "He is just dragging this out so he can put it at the doorstep of the new president of the United States." But Congress has at least one other immediate concern: how to signal to strapped American taxpayers that they're serious about fixing the economy. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "If we could put up as much as $30 billion of your money on this kind of a deal, can't we get the same kind of commitment when it comes to 8,000 people every day losing their homes?" Meanwhile out on the campaign trail, Hillary Clinton's rough week from Mark Penn to Bill Clinton. We explain why. Covering the week, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, James Kitfield of National Journal, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

In the animal world females often call the shots. But their decisions may be surprising. In an effort to understand the mating game, NATURE follows biologist Chadden Hunter, PhD, through the Simien Mountains of northern Ethiopia, as he observes a troop of geladas, close cousins of baboons. He found that in gelada society females make all the decisions about mating, even though males are twice their size. The males are evaluated on everything from body heat to baby sitting skills. And once selected, no male gelada can ever rest on his laurels. Another male is always auditioning for his job. You'll also see female barn swallows that choose a male by the color of his chest and encounter a robotic sage grouse that is helping researchers learn about this species' elaborate courtship displays.

As the population ages, many adult children are grappling with an unprecedented social, cultural, economic, and personal revolution as they transition into the primary caregiver role for their aging parents. Caring for Your Parents is a moving film that draws much-needed attention to this universal reality, underscoring today's struggle to keep parents at home, tensions between siblings, and the complexity of shifting caregiver roles through an intimate look at five American families. In the end, the documentary contends successful caregiving requires one primary ingredient--love.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

Four in five Americans say the U.S. health-care system needs "fundamental" change. Can the U.S. learn anything from the rest of the world about how to run a health-care system, or are these nations so culturally different from us that their solutions would simply not be acceptable to Americans? FRONTLINE correspondent T.R. Reid examines first-hand the health-care systems of other advanced capitalist democracies -- UK, France, Germany, Switzerland, Japan, and Taiwan -- to see what tried and tested ideas might help us reform our broken health-care system.

The war in Iraq, rhetoric and reality, plus new help for homeowners, and the week in presidential politics, this week on "Washington Week." The administration says the news in Iraq is good. Gen. David Petraeus said, "There has been significant but uneven security progress in Iraq." But not good enough to pull out anytime soon. The generals want to freeze troop levels. Pres. George Bush said, "General Petraeus says he'll need time to consolidate his forces and assess how this reduced American presence will affect conditions on the ground. And I've told him he'll have all the time he needs." The response on Capitol Hill, not so good. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "He is just dragging this out so he can put it at the doorstep of the new president of the United States." But Congress has at least one other immediate concern: how to signal to strapped American taxpayers that they're serious about fixing the economy. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "If we could put up as much as $30 billion of your money on this kind of a deal, can't we get the same kind of commitment when it comes to 8,000 people every day losing their homes?" Meanwhile out on the campaign trail, Hillary Clinton's rough week from Mark Penn to Bill Clinton. We explain why. Covering the week, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, James Kitfield of National Journal, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Cleveland rocks and so does this political campaign. We're here to find out why here in northeast Ohio this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Thank you" to the crowd. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thank you, thank you" to his supporters, and Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you so much" to hers. The presidential candidates have come and gone and will return again. States like Ohio are too important to ignore. Next door in Pennsylvania this week, the Democrats were preparing for the long haul. Sen. Clinton said, "Let me tell you something, when it comes to finishing the fight, Rocky and I have a lot in common. I never quit, I never give up, and I know that we're going to make it together." Sen. Obama replied, "We've got to remember, "Rocky" was a movie, and so is the idea that somebody can fight for working people and at the same time embrace the broken system in Washington." While Republican John McCain set out across the country to reintroduce himself to voters. His announcer referred to him as "John McCain, the American president Americans have been waiting for." The issues are as thorny as ever, the economy and the war. Who has the best ideas, the best strategy, and the most money to survive the next big test? We assess that this week with Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

Four in five Americans say the U.S. health-care system needs "fundamental" change. Can the U.S. learn anything from the rest of the world about how to run a health-care system, or are these nations so culturally different from us that their solutions would simply not be acceptable to Americans? FRONTLINE correspondent T.R. Reid examines first-hand the health-care systems of other advanced capitalist democracies -- UK, France, Germany, Switzerland, Japan, and Taiwan -- to see what tried and tested ideas might help us reform our broken health-care system.

Cleveland rocks and so does this political campaign. We're here to find out why here in northeast Ohio this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Thank you" to the crowd. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thank you, thank you" to his supporters, and Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you so much" to hers. The presidential candidates have come and gone and will return again. States like Ohio are too important to ignore. Next door in Pennsylvania this week, the Democrats were preparing for the long haul. Sen. Clinton said, "Let me tell you something, when it comes to finishing the fight, Rocky and I have a lot in common. I never quit, I never give up, and I know that we're going to make it together." Sen. Obama replied, "We've got to remember, "Rocky" was a movie, and so is the idea that somebody can fight for working people and at the same time embrace the broken system in Washington." While Republican John McCain set out across the country to reintroduce himself to voters. His announcer referred to him as "John McCain, the American president Americans have been waiting for." The issues are as thorny as ever, the economy and the war. Who has the best ideas, the best strategy, and the most money to survive the next big test? We assess that this week with Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

The war in Iraq, rhetoric and reality, plus new help for homeowners, and the week in presidential politics, this week on "Washington Week." The administration says the news in Iraq is good. Gen. David Petraeus said, "There has been significant but uneven security progress in Iraq." But not good enough to pull out anytime soon. The generals want to freeze troop levels. Pres. George Bush said, "General Petraeus says he'll need time to consolidate his forces and assess how this reduced American presence will affect conditions on the ground. And I've told him he'll have all the time he needs." The response on Capitol Hill, not so good. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "He is just dragging this out so he can put it at the doorstep of the new president of the United States." But Congress has at least one other immediate concern: how to signal to strapped American taxpayers that they're serious about fixing the economy. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "If we could put up as much as $30 billion of your money on this kind of a deal, can't we get the same kind of commitment when it comes to 8,000 people every day losing their homes?" Meanwhile out on the campaign trail, Hillary Clinton's rough week from Mark Penn to Bill Clinton. We explain why. Covering the week, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, James Kitfield of National Journal, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

In June 2007, as the American military surge reached its peak, a band of National Guard infantrymen who call themselves "The Bad Voodoo Platoon" was deployed to Iraq. To capture a vivid, first-person account of the new realities of war in Iraq for FRONTLINE and ITVS, director Deborah Scranton ("The War Tapes") created "a virtual embed" with the platoon, supplying cameras to the soldiers so they could record and tell the story of their war. The film intimately tracks the veteran soldiers of "Bad Voodoo" through the daily grind of their perilous mission, dodging deadly IEDs, grappling with the political complexities of dealing with Iraqi security forces, and battling their fatigue and their fears.

Cleveland rocks and so does this political campaign. We're here to find out why here in northeast Ohio this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Thank you" to the crowd. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thank you, thank you" to his supporters, and Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Thank you so much" to hers. The presidential candidates have come and gone and will return again. States like Ohio are too important to ignore. Next door in Pennsylvania this week, the Democrats were preparing for the long haul. Sen. Clinton said, "Let me tell you something, when it comes to finishing the fight, Rocky and I have a lot in common. I never quit, I never give up, and I know that we're going to make it together." Sen. Obama replied, "We've got to remember, "Rocky" was a movie, and so is the idea that somebody can fight for working people and at the same time embrace the broken system in Washington." While Republican John McCain set out across the country to reintroduce himself to voters. His announcer referred to him as "John McCain, the American president Americans have been waiting for." The issues are as thorny as ever, the economy and the war. Who has the best ideas, the best strategy, and the most money to survive the next big test? We assess that this week with Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

The war in Iraq, rhetoric and reality, plus new help for homeowners, and the week in presidential politics, this week on "Washington Week." The administration says the news in Iraq is good. Gen. David Petraeus said, "There has been significant but uneven security progress in Iraq." But not good enough to pull out anytime soon. The generals want to freeze troop levels. Pres. George Bush said, "General Petraeus says he'll need time to consolidate his forces and assess how this reduced American presence will affect conditions on the ground. And I've told him he'll have all the time he needs." The response on Capitol Hill, not so good. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "He is just dragging this out so he can put it at the doorstep of the new president of the United States." But Congress has at least one other immediate concern: how to signal to strapped American taxpayers that they're serious about fixing the economy. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "If we could put up as much as $30 billion of your money on this kind of a deal, can't we get the same kind of commitment when it comes to 8,000 people every day losing their homes?" Meanwhile out on the campaign trail, Hillary Clinton's rough week from Mark Penn to Bill Clinton. We explain why. Covering the week, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, James Kitfield of National Journal, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time magazine.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

Unable to make ends meet, many families in western Nepal have been forced to sell their daughters, some as young as six, to work far from home as bonded servants in private homes. This week NOW travels to Nepal where we meet the Nepalese Youth Opportunity Foundation, which is trying to break the cycle of poverty and pain with an "Enterprising Idea." They're providing desperate families with an incentive to keep their daughters: a piglet or a goat that can ultimately be sold for a sum equivalent to that of their child's labor. The organization says it has brought thousands of girls home to live with their families, but many cultural and political challenges still stand in their way. This is part of NOW's continuing series on innovative and sustainable solutions to world problems. What we call "Enterprising Ideas."

In April 1945, the largest battleship ever built set out on the ultimate suicide mission. With its crew of 3,000, Battleship Yamato, the pride of Japan's fleet, sailed to a solo confrontation with the 1500-strong United States Navy. Attacked by a swarm of U.S. dive bombers, the battleship sank within minutes. A NOVA team discovers the wreck and retells the Yamato's extraordinary saga through the eyes of the few Japanese crew who survived the sinking and are still living today. State-of-the-art CGI animation shows viewers what the colossal battleship was like in all its glory at the time of its launching. The program opens a dramatic perspective on the great age of battleships and why it ended so abruptly with the Yamato's disastrous sinking.

Health care costs in Pennsylvania are 11 percent higher than the national average and rising twice as fast as the average wage. The state legislature is debating a plan backed by Governor Ed Rendell to provide benefits to hundreds of thousands of Pennsylvanians, but there's disagreement over who's going to foot the bill. This week NOW gets insight on the problem and its proposed solution from a wide range of Pennsylvanians, including small business owners, legislators, a suburban family, and a packaged dessert company headquartered in Philadelphia that employs over 800 people. But the problem is bigger than Pennsylvania. With 47 million Americans uninsured and so many feeling the pinch of soaring coverage costs, can this Philadelphia experiment make a difference in the national crisis?

Pennsylvania, the pope, and the death penalty, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "During the course of the last few days, she's said I'm elitist, out of touch, condescending." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "What we have to do as Democrats is make sure we get enough votes to win in November." The fur is flying. Sen. Obama said, "You just got to kind of let it - you know." The Pennsylvania primary is days away and the stakes are crystal clear. What does each candidate have to do? And will Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) benefit from Democratic infighting? He said, "They're going to raise your taxes by thousands of dollars a year and they have the audacity to hope you don't mind." A man who knows a thing or two about hope did make it to the White House this week - Pope Benedict XVI. He said to the crowd, "God bless America." He's praying for U.S. Catholics, plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical death penalty case. Covering these stories, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

"Show of Force" -- The mission really kicks off when the Nimitz arrives in the Gulf. The conditions are extreme: flight deck personnel endure temperatures hovering around 120 degrees, while the pilots undertake grueling six-hour missions over Iraq. The F-18s are mounted with infrared cameras, enabling them to serve as the "eyes in the sky" to support the troops on the ground. Some of the pilots are frustrated that they're not dropping bombs because, as they describe it, that's what they've been trained to do. The aircraft carrier's role and effectiveness in this particular war are questioned. Meanwhile, the strike group searches for terrorists on small dhows and intercepts cargo ships to search for weapons and bomb-making materials. "Groundhog Day" -- After two months in the Gulf, one day starts to become indistinguishable from the next. The airwing still hasn't dropped a single bomb, which is frustrating for some on board. The only relief comes from a port call in Bahrain, where some sailors relax by the pool, while others visit a mosque and learn about Muslim culture. The Princeton, one of the escort ships in the Nimitz strike group, loses a man overboard; an intense search to find the lost sailor ensues.

Pennsylvania, the pope, and the death penalty, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "During the course of the last few days, she's said I'm elitist, out of touch, condescending." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "What we have to do as Democrats is make sure we get enough votes to win in November." The fur is flying. Sen. Obama said, "You just got to kind of let it - you know." The Pennsylvania primary is days away and the stakes are crystal clear. What does each candidate have to do? And will Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) benefit from Democratic infighting? He said, "They're going to raise your taxes by thousands of dollars a year and they have the audacity to hope you don't mind." A man who knows a thing or two about hope did make it to the White House this week - Pope Benedict XVI. He said to the crowd, "God bless America." He's praying for U.S. Catholics, plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical death penalty case. Covering these stories, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Did she win or did he lose? The metrics of victory. Plus, Petraeus' promotion, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "The American people don't quit and they deserve a president who doesn't quit either." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Now it's up to you, Indiana. You can decide." Pennsylvania decided exactly nothing. But what did it tell us? Who voted? Who didn't? What worked? What backfired? Who has the cash to continue and what might yet come back to haunt the frontrunner? And while the Democrats attack each other, the Republican stiff arms his friend, the president, on Katrina. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Never again will a disaster of this nature be handled in the terrible and disgraceful way that it was handled. Never again." General David Petraeus moves up and out. Plus, the latest on Syria's secret nuclear ambitions. Health care costs in Pennsylvania are 11 percent higher than the national average and rising twice as fast as the average wage. The state legislature is debating a plan backed by Governor Ed Rendell to provide benefits to hundreds of thousands of Pennsylvanians, but there's disagreement over who's going to foot the bill. This week NOW gets insight on the problem and its proposed solution from a wide range of Pennsylvanians, including small business owners, legislators, a suburban family, and a packaged dessert company headquartered in Philadelphia that employs over 800 people. But the problem is bigger than Pennsylvania. With 47 million Americans uninsured and so many feeling the pinch of soaring coverage costs, can this Philadelphia experiment make a difference in the national crisis?

Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "What we have to do as Democrats is make sure we get enough votes to win in November." The fur is flying. Sen. Obama said, "You just got to kind of let it - you know." The Pennsylvania primary is days away and the stakes are crystal clear. What does each candidate have to do? And will Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) benefit from Democratic infighting? He said, "They're going to raise your taxes by thousands of dollars a year and they have the audacity to hope you don't mind." A man who knows a thing or two about hope did make it to the White House this week - Pope Benedict XVI. He said to the crowd, "God bless America." He's praying for U.S. Catholics, plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical death penalty case. Rev. Jeremiah Wright: Bill Moyers interviews the Reverend Jeremiah Wright in his first broadcast interview with a journalist since he became embroiled in a controversy for his remarks and his relationship with Barack Obama. Wright, who retired in early 2008 as pastor of Trinity United Church of Christ in Chicago, where Senator Obama is a member, has been at the center of controversy for comments he made during sermons, which surfaced in the press in March.

"Rites of Passage" -- The last day in the Gulf is the last chance to drop bombs before the Nimitz heads home. The jets take off, laden with ordnance, and return hours later, still carrying the same bombs. As the Nimitz crosses the equator, the entire ship takes part in the Crossing the Line Ceremony, an ancient maritime ritual. In the middle of flight operations, a storm arises in the South Indian Ocean. The deck pitches violently, turning the already dangerous task of landing on the carrier into a nail-biting, heart-pounding drama. "True Believers" -- This episode explores the many expressions of faith onboard the USS Nimitz: faith in self, faith in one's shipmates, faith in the mission of the ship and the president's call to arms. The major religious groups on board are Catholic and Protestant, but there also is a coven of Wiccans, as well as a Pentecostal group whose newest member is challenged by the duality of his beliefs and the temptations of liberty as the ship drops anchor in Perth, Australia.

Pennsylvania, the pope, and the death penalty, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "During the course of the last few days, she's said I'm elitist, out of touch, condescending." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "What we have to do as Democrats is make sure we get enough votes to win in November." The fur is flying. Sen. Obama said, "You just got to kind of let it - you know." The Pennsylvania primary is days away and the stakes are crystal clear. What does each candidate have to do? And will Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) benefit from Democratic infighting? He said, "They're going to raise your taxes by thousands of dollars a year and they have the audacity to hope you don't mind." A man who knows a thing or two about hope did make it to the White House this week - Pope Benedict XVI. He said to the crowd, "God bless America." He's praying for U.S. Catholics, plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical death penalty case. Covering these stories, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

"Super Secrets" -- The ship's location and itinerary are classified. Details of how the nuclear reactor works are top secret. Many aspects of life on a nuclear aircraft carrier are hush-hush. Dating and sex aboard ship are strictly forbidden, but according to one sailor, with 5,000 people on board, relationships are "inevitable," resulting in a "don't ask, don't tell" policy that applies to relationships as well as sexual orientation. When the Nimitz pulls into Hong Kong for a four-day port call, a scandal dramatically alters the lives of two sailors. As the ship departs, the crew learns their itinerary has changed. The captain announces that they are heading for Korea, but the crew can't share this information with their families back home...because it's a secret. "Squared Away" -- Mentoring and camaraderie are what hold the ship together. But life on deployment is stressful for everyone aboard, and there can be considerable friction between enlisted personnel and their superiors. Port calls allow sailors to blow off steam, but they don't relieve all the pressure. In Guam, a young sailor coming to terms with his upbringing can't play by the rules and is forced out of the Navy. From Guam, the Nimitz sails through the Straits of Malacca, past Singapore to Kuala Lumpur, the last liberty call before the long haul to the Persian Gulf.

"All Hands" -- On a bright May morning, 5,000 sailors and Marines bid farewell to their loved ones before the mammoth USS Nimitz pulls out of Coronado, California, and sets a course for Hawaii and beyond. Among the men and women who live and work on board are an airman who describes the ship as a small town; a pilot who considers the ship a powerful instrument of diplomacy; a sailor who questions "why we're fighting to defend someone else's freedom when we barely have our own"; a cook who dishes out 15,000 meals a day; and an airman who has just learned that his girlfriend is pregnant. "Controlled Chaos" -- The men and women of the USS Nimitz live beneath the runway of a major airport. They sleep on the roof of a nuclear power plant. It's a perilous environment. Their only bulwark against danger and chaos is to bond with their units on board the ship. The "Shooters," who launch the jets, have a "Circle of Trust;" the Ordies (ordnance personnel) pride themselves on being a "mafia;" the F-18 squadrons -- the Black Aces, the Hoboes and the Marine Red Devils -- are tight fraternities.

"Show of Force" -- The mission really kicks off when the Nimitz arrives in the Gulf. The conditions are extreme: flight deck personnel endure temperatures hovering around 120 degrees, while the pilots undertake grueling six-hour missions over Iraq. The F-18s are mounted with infrared cameras, enabling them to serve as the "eyes in the sky" to support the troops on the ground. Some of the pilots are frustrated that they're not dropping bombs because, as they describe it, that's what they've been trained to do. The aircraft carrier's role and effectiveness in this particular war are questioned. Meanwhile, the strike group searches for terrorists on small dhows and intercepts cargo ships to search for weapons and bomb-making materials. "Groundhog Day" -- After two months in the Gulf, one day starts to become indistinguishable from the next. The airwing still hasn't dropped a single bomb, which is frustrating for some on board. The only relief comes from a port call in Bahrain, where some sailors relax by the pool, while others visit a mosque and learn about Muslim culture. The Princeton, one of the escort ships in the Nimitz strike group, loses a man overboard; an intense search to find the lost sailor ensues.

In April 1945, the largest battleship ever built set out on the ultimate suicide mission. With its crew of 3,000, Battleship Yamato, the pride of Japan's fleet, sailed to a solo confrontation with the 1500-strong United States Navy. Attacked by a swarm of U.S. dive bombers, the battleship sank within minutes. A NOVA team discovers the wreck and retells the Yamato's extraordinary saga through the eyes of the few Japanese crew who survived the sinking and are still living today. State-of-the-art CGI animation shows viewers what the colossal battleship was like in all its glory at the time of its launching. The program opens a dramatic perspective on the great age of battleships and why it ended so abruptly with the Yamato's disastrous sinking.

"The Center of the World" explores Roosevelt's family background and education, looking for clues to the coddled rich child's ascent to political success. It follows him from his very first run for political office as New York state senator through his years in Washington as assistant secretary of the navy, as he pursues the highest office in the land. This segment also tells the story of FDR's courtship of his distant cousin, Eleanor Roosevelt, and their troubled marriage, including FDR's affair with Eleanor's social secretary, Lucy Mercer. The affair, which nearly ended the marriage, encouraged Eleanor to embrace a life of her own and become politically active. The second segment, "Fear Itself," begins with Roosevelt's bout with polio at age 39 and follows his relentless struggle to rehabilitate his body and his seemingly moribund political career, and to teach himself to appear to walk. The section also paints a portrait of Eleanor Roosevelt as she makes a life of her own, developing her own political skills while keeping her husband's name before the public through her involvement in reform causes. A remarkable sequence of events leads FDR back from despair to win his party's nomination as president of the United States. Catapulted into the White House, a man who could not walk begins to lead a country crippled by the Great Depression.

His standing among the most enduring 20th-century American musical artists is without question, yet his story is rarely told beyond the tragic circumstances of his death. Enormously talented and equally complicated, Gaye created an intimate style - full of honesty, integrity, vulnerability - and, essentially, gave the world his autobiography in lyrics and melody. "The Wonderful One," "The Trouble Man," "The Prince of Soul" - he was the Motown star who challenged and changed the face of black music, embodying its evolution from roots in gospel, jazz and rhythm and blues to sophisticated pop and sexually, politically charged soul. Extensive performance footage and insight from Mary Wilson, Smokey Robinson, Gladys Knight, Mos Def, among many others, capture the tone and texture of a career that still leaves an indelible mark on the musical landscape.

America passed a grim milestone this year: One in every 100 Americans is now behind bars. This week, NOW on PBS investigates the government's trend to outsource prisons and prisoners to the private sector, and examines the controversy it's causing. We travel to Colorado, where the debate over prison privatization is boiling over. Should incarceration be incorporated?

The Democratic race tightens. Which voters and what issues could decide it all, this week on "Washington Week." At the top of the heap, the economy: Pres. George W. Bush said, "I will tell you that these are very difficult economic times - very difficult." Jobs lost, gas prices soaring and another interest rate cut. What will or can the president or the candidates do about it all? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) proposed, "Just for the summer, why don't we give the American people a little break?" The candidates spar about solutions and the Democratic frontrunner Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) tries to shake off the Jeremiah Wright controversy. He said, "It contradicts everything that I'm about and who I am." Surrogates play their part. Former Democratic Party leader Joe Andrew said, "I'm announcing that I'm going to support Senator Barack Obama for president of the United States of America." Gov. Mike Easley said about Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), "This lady right here makes Rocky Balboa look like a pansy." But can Hillary Clinton still win? She said, "I sometimes feel like the Goldilocks of this campaign." Plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical Indiana voting case. Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

"Get Home-itis" -- A six-month absence places a heavy burden on relationships. The Navy holds seminars to counsel sailors on what to expect when they return home -- and how to make the transition smooth. The "Tiger Cruise" ritual allows sailors to invite their family members aboard for the last leg of the deployment. "Full Circle" -- As the Nimitz makes its final transit from Hawaii to California, the sailors and Marines on board prepare to return to their homes and families. For those still on board, the "Tiger Cruise" provides a buffer, but there's no such transition for those who fly home early from Hawaii. As the Nimitz returns to her home port of San Diego, sailors and Marines reflect on the deployment and take stock of what they've achieved. Was the mission accomplished? There are tearful, joyful reunions at the pier.

In the 1970s, female East German athletes came out of nowhere to dominate international sport. But behind their success lay a secret, state-sponsored doping program that distributed untested steroids and male hormones to athletes as young as 12. Many of these girls had no knowledge that they were being doped, and now, as grown women (and men), their broken bodies and damaged psyches bear witness to the cruelty of a government that pursued international glory and gold at the expense of its most acclaimed citizens. "Doping for Gold" digs deep into the secretive Cold War world of East German athletes, examining what drugs were used, how they were distributed and what damage they did to many of the athletes who were forced to take them. The result creates a timely perspective on today's many doping scandals and reveals the truth behind the biggest and most horrifying state-sponsored doping program the world has ever known.

His standing among the most enduring 20th-century American musical artists is without question, yet his story is rarely told beyond the tragic circumstances of his death. Enormously talented and equally complicated, Gaye created an intimate style - full of honesty, integrity, vulnerability - and, essentially, gave the world his autobiography in lyrics and melody. "The Wonderful One," "The Trouble Man," "The Prince of Soul" - he was the Motown star who challenged and changed the face of black music, embodying its evolution from roots in gospel, jazz and rhythm and blues to sophisticated pop and sexually, politically charged soul. Extensive performance footage and insight from Mary Wilson, Smokey Robinson, Gladys Knight, Mos Def, among many others, capture the tone and texture of a career that still leaves an indelible mark on the musical landscape.

The Democratic race tightens. Which voters and what issues could decide it all, this week on "Washington Week." At the top of the heap, the economy: Pres. George W. Bush said, "I will tell you that these are very difficult economic times - very difficult." Jobs lost, gas prices soaring and another interest rate cut. What will or can the president or the candidates do about it all? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) proposed, "Just for the summer, why don't we give the American people a little break?" The candidates spar about solutions and the Democratic frontrunner Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) tries to shake off the Jeremiah Wright controversy. He said, "It contradicts everything that I'm about and who I am." Surrogates play their part. Former Democratic Party leader Joe Andrew said, "I'm announcing that I'm going to support Senator Barack Obama for president of the United States of America." Gov. Mike Easley said about Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), "This lady right here makes Rocky Balboa look like a pansy." But can Hillary Clinton still win? She said, "I sometimes feel like the Goldilocks of this campaign." Plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical Indiana voting case. Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Another big week in politics. What happens next? We're here in Philadelphia to talk about it all, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) won big in North Carolina. He said, "Thank you, North Carolina." While Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) barely won in Indiana. She said, "Thank you, Indiana. Thank you." Is this thing over? Not so says Clinton. She also said, "This is a dynamic, electoral environment." But Obama is sounding like a party nominee. He said, "We stand less than 200 delegates away from securing the Democratic nomination for president of the United States." Democrats at the crossroads, with all eyes on superdelegates, African Americans, working class white voters, and the future of the fractured party. What worked this week and what didn't? We look at the state of the race tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, and Michael Viqueira of NBC news.

"The Center of the World" explores Roosevelt's family background and education, looking for clues to the coddled rich child's ascent to political success. It follows him from his very first run for political office as New York state senator through his years in Washington as assistant secretary of the navy, as he pursues the highest office in the land. This segment also tells the story of FDR's courtship of his distant cousin, Eleanor Roosevelt, and their troubled marriage, including FDR's affair with Eleanor's social secretary, Lucy Mercer. The affair, which nearly ended the marriage, encouraged Eleanor to embrace a life of her own and become politically active. The second segment, "Fear Itself," begins with Roosevelt's bout with polio at age 39 and follows his relentless struggle to rehabilitate his body and his seemingly moribund political career, and to teach himself to appear to walk. The section also paints a portrait of Eleanor Roosevelt as she makes a life of her own, developing her own political skills while keeping her husband's name before the public through her involvement in reform causes. A remarkable sequence of events leads FDR back from despair to win his party's nomination as president of the United States. Catapulted into the White House, a man who could not walk begins to lead a country crippled by the Great Depression.

The Democratic race tightens. Which voters and what issues could decide it all, this week on "Washington Week." At the top of the heap, the economy: Pres. George W. Bush said, "I will tell you that these are very difficult economic times - very difficult." Jobs lost, gas prices soaring and another interest rate cut. What will or can the president or the candidates do about it all? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) proposed, "Just for the summer, why don't we give the American people a little break?" The candidates spar about solutions and the Democratic frontrunner Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) tries to shake off the Jeremiah Wright controversy. He said, "It contradicts everything that I'm about and who I am." Surrogates play their part. Former Democratic Party leader Joe Andrew said, "I'm announcing that I'm going to support Senator Barack Obama for president of the United States of America." Gov. Mike Easley said about Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY), "This lady right here makes Rocky Balboa look like a pansy." But can Hillary Clinton still win? She said, "I sometimes feel like the Goldilocks of this campaign." Plus the Supreme Court weighs in on a critical Indiana voting case. Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Another big week in politics. What happens next? We're here in Philadelphia to talk about it all, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) won big in North Carolina. He said, "Thank you, North Carolina." While Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) barely won in Indiana. She said, "Thank you, Indiana. Thank you." Is this thing over? Not so says Clinton. She also said, "This is a dynamic, electoral environment." But Obama is sounding like a party nominee. He said, "We stand less than 200 delegates away from securing the Democratic nomination for president of the United States." Democrats at the crossroads, with all eyes on superdelegates, African Americans, working class white voters, and the future of the fractured party. What worked this week and what didn't? We look at the state of the race tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, and Michael Viqueira of NBC news.

In the 1970s, female East German athletes came out of nowhere to dominate international sport. But behind their success lay a secret, state-sponsored doping program that distributed untested steroids and male hormones to athletes as young as 12. Many of these girls had no knowledge that they were being doped, and now, as grown women (and men), their broken bodies and damaged psyches bear witness to the cruelty of a government that pursued international glory and gold at the expense of its most acclaimed citizens. "Doping for Gold" digs deep into the secretive Cold War world of East German athletes, examining what drugs were used, how they were distributed and what damage they did to many of the athletes who were forced to take them. The result creates a timely perspective on today's many doping scandals and reveals the truth behind the biggest and most horrifying state-sponsored doping program the world has ever known.

"Get Home-itis" -- A six-month absence places a heavy burden on relationships. The Navy holds seminars to counsel sailors on what to expect when they return home -- and how to make the transition smooth. The "Tiger Cruise" ritual allows sailors to invite their family members aboard for the last leg of the deployment. "Full Circle" -- As the Nimitz makes its final transit from Hawaii to California, the sailors and Marines on board prepare to return to their homes and families. For those still on board, the "Tiger Cruise" provides a buffer, but there's no such transition for those who fly home early from Hawaii. As the Nimitz returns to her home port of San Diego, sailors and Marines reflect on the deployment and take stock of what they've achieved. Was the mission accomplished? There are tearful, joyful reunions at the pier.

Segment Length: 00:00:00

The first segment, "The Grandest Job in the World," focuses on the first two terms of Roosevelt's presidency and explores the central paradox of his presidency: that a man of privilege came to be a hero to a vast and varied coalition of ordinary Americans and a villain to members of his own social class. The episode moves inside the Oval Office to show FDR's response to the massive problems posed by the Great Depression, and out to the heartland to document how his programs and personal style - ebullient, risk-taking and surprisingly cunning - restored hope to Americans who had lost hope. This section also looks at how FDR engineered the "splendid deception" that hid the extent of his physical disability from the American people and how his relationship with his wife affected both his personal and political life. The last section, "The Juggler," is devoted to the wartime years, using FDR's remarkable correspondence with Winston Churchill to chart the calculated and even devious path by which the American president maneuvered support for England before he led his country through the greatest war in history. This segment also traces FDR's management of the war, including his growing personal ties to Churchill and his relationship with Stalin and the Soviet Union, and explores Eleanor's attempt to convince him to maintain the principles of the New Deal, despite the pressures of war.

He was a farmer, a businessman gone bankrupt, an unknown politician from Missouri who suddenly found himself president. Of all the men who had held the highest office, Harry Truman was the least prepared. But he would prove to be a surprise. The first night of "Truman" recounts his early struggles and failures as a young adult, and his undying determination to have an accomplishment to call his own. Truman's success as an army captain during World War I gave him the confidence to marry his lifelong sweetheart, Bess, and begin his path into the world of politics. When he landed the vice presidency with FDR in 1944, he had no idea that his world was about to change forever.

After Harry Truman's unlikely rise to the presidency, he would face some of the biggest crises of the century. Truman would end the war with Germany; use the atomic bomb against Japan; confront an expanding Soviet Union; and wage war in Korea -- all while the woman he adored, his wife Bess, refused to stay in the White House and play the role of First Lady. On the homefront, Truman was the first president to tackle civil rights issues for blacks -- a move that would prove controversial when campaigning for his second term. His unpredictable win over Thomas Dewey in the presidential elections of 1948 proved to Truman that he had finally separated himself from FDR's shadow. However, his second term brought another war and battles with Congress to pass health care and civil rights legislation. Exhausted after his second term, Truman relinquished the presidency and retired to Independence, Missouri, where he lived as a popular and well-loved citizen. In later years, he would receive recognition for all his accomplishments and come to be admired as a gritty American original.

In a joint project with The New York Times, FRONTLINE/World correspondent Lowell Bergman investigates the business of human smuggling across the busy ports of entry between Mexico and the United States. In Tijuana, masses of people attempt to cross illegally every day with the help of increasingly organized and expensive smugglers. Bergman explores the region to find that this illicit but lucrative business is expanding, and U.S. border agents are subject to an increased risk of corruption. He follows the dramatic story of one such corrupt U.S. border guard, the risky business he became involved in, and what the U.S. government is doing about the problem.

There are more women serving in the military than ever before, and they're in danger but not just from combat. Last year, nearly 1,400 women reported being assaulted and raped by their fellow soldiers, in some cases by their commanding officers. The shocking phenomenon is called military sexual trauma, or MST. Since NOW first aired its investigation into rape and sexual assault in the military last year, the Pentagon has released new reports in which one-third of military women say they've been sexually harassed. And the number of women reporting assault and rape has essentially remained the same even though the military says it has invested serious resources to combat the problem. This week NOW talks to women soldiers who signed up to defend their countries but instead had to defend themselves from assault and rape by their own fellow soldiers. How are these women picking up the pieces of their life after military sexual trauma?

Every so often a giant emerges on the stage of science, someone who transcends the narrow boundaries of a particular line of research and alters our perspective on the world. E.O. Wilson is such a man. In "Lord of the Ants," NOVA profiles this soft-spoken Southerner renowned for his scientific study of ants that led to his 1975 book "Sociobiology: The New Synthesis," where he put forth the notion that evolutionary principles could explain social behavior throughout the animal kingdom, including in humans. Though sociobiology was a controversial new discipline at the time, today experimental science shows that genes do play a role in aspects of human behavior. E.O. Wilson is an icon of our times: a lord of the ants who sought to explain nature on earth and who now fights for its survival through his worldwide conservation efforts. Actor and environmentalist Harrison Ford narrates this engaging portrait of a ceaselessly active scientist and eloquent writer, who has accumulated two Pulitzer Prizes among his many other honors.

After Harry Truman's unlikely rise to the presidency, he would face some of the biggest crises of the century. Truman would end the war with Germany; use the atomic bomb against Japan; confront an expanding Soviet Union; and wage war in Korea -- all while the woman he adored, his wife Bess, refused to stay in the White House and play the role of First Lady. On the homefront, Truman was the first president to tackle civil rights issues for blacks -- a move that would prove controversial when campaigning for his second term. His unpredictable win over Thomas Dewey in the presidential elections of 1948 proved to Truman that he had finally separated himself from FDR's shadow. However, his second term brought another war and battles with Congress to pass health care and civil rights legislation. Exhausted after his second term, Truman relinquished the presidency and retired to Independence, Missouri, where he lived as a popular and well-loved citizen. In later years, he would receive recognition for all his accomplishments and come to be admired as a gritty American original.

"Prince Among Slaves" is the inspiring true story of an African prince who survived 40 years of enslavement in America before finally regaining his freedom. Winner of the Best Documentary at the 2007 American Black Film Festival, the film tells the compelling story of Abdul Rahman, an African Muslim prince, through feature-film styled re-enactments directed by Andrea Kalin and Emmy-Award-winner Bill Duke; contemporary artworks, archival letters and diaries; and on-camera interviews with distinguished scholars and experts. Narrated by actor and hip-hop artist Mos Def, "Prince Among Slaves" is based on Dr. Terry Alford's biography of the same name.

Time for a reality check for Democrats and Republicans. A week of flash points, this week on "Washington Week." Gauntlets thrown down everywhere, on foreign policy. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Some seem to believe that we should negotiate with the terrorists and radicals." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "The president is exactly right." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) replied, "That's exactly the kinds of appalling attack that's divided our country and that alienates us from the world." On domestic politics - Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "Join me in helping send Barack Obama to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue." Sen. Hillary Clinton said, "I am more determined than ever to carry on this campaign." And in Congress, where Republicans are in the dumps, Rep. Tom Davis (R-VA) said, "The Republican brand name - if you were to put this on a dog food, the owners would just take it off the shelf because nobody's buying it." The outlines of the general election come into focus. Covering the week, James Barnes of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

A trip through the trippy world of exit strategies, foreign policy maneuverings, and vice presidential speculation this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "They're ready to turn the page and write a new chapter in American history. And on June 3rd we are going to bring this nomination to a close." And apparently not one minute before. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I'm going to keep making our case until we have a nominee, whoever she may be." But what's really going on. Is Hillary Clinton actually competing? Can Barack Obama afford to wait to claim the nomination? And on the Republican side, is Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) simply moving on without him especially on foreign policy? McCain said, "Senator Obama has little or no experience on these issues." And Washington's revolving doors. Do lobbyists matter? Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

The first segment, "The Grandest Job in the World," focuses on the first two terms of Roosevelt's presidency and explores the central paradox of his presidency: that a man of privilege came to be a hero to a vast and varied coalition of ordinary Americans and a villain to members of his own social class. The episode moves inside the Oval Office to show FDR's response to the massive problems posed by the Great Depression, and out to the heartland to document how his programs and personal style - ebullient, risk-taking and surprisingly cunning - restored hope to Americans who had lost hope. This section also looks at how FDR engineered the "splendid deception" that hid the extent of his physical disability from the American people and how his relationship with his wife affected both his personal and political life. The last section, "The Juggler," is devoted to the wartime years, using FDR's remarkable correspondence with Winston Churchill to chart the calculated and even devious path by which the American president maneuvered support for England before he led his country through the greatest war in history. This segment also traces FDR's management of the war, including his growing personal ties to Churchill and his relationship with Stalin and the Soviet Union, and explores Eleanor's attempt to convince him to maintain the principles of the New Deal, despite the pressures of war.

He was a farmer, a businessman gone bankrupt, an unknown politician from Missouri who suddenly found himself president. Of all the men who had held the highest office, Harry Truman was the least prepared. But he would prove to be a surprise. The first night of "Truman" recounts his early struggles and failures as a young adult, and his undying determination to have an accomplishment to call his own. Truman's success as an army captain during World War I gave him the confidence to marry his lifelong sweetheart, Bess, and begin his path into the world of politics. When he landed the vice presidency with FDR in 1944, he had no idea that his world was about to change forever.

After Harry Truman's unlikely rise to the presidency, he would face some of the biggest crises of the century. Truman would end the war with Germany; use the atomic bomb against Japan; confront an expanding Soviet Union; and wage war in Korea -- all while the woman he adored, his wife Bess, refused to stay in the White House and play the role of First Lady. On the homefront, Truman was the first president to tackle civil rights issues for blacks -- a move that would prove controversial when campaigning for his second term. His unpredictable win over Thomas Dewey in the presidential elections of 1948 proved to Truman that he had finally separated himself from FDR's shadow. However, his second term brought another war and battles with Congress to pass health care and civil rights legislation. Exhausted after his second term, Truman relinquished the presidency and retired to Independence, Missouri, where he lived as a popular and well-loved citizen. In later years, he would receive recognition for all his accomplishments and come to be admired as a gritty American original.

In a joint project with The New York Times, FRONTLINE/World correspondent Lowell Bergman investigates the business of human smuggling across the busy ports of entry between Mexico and the United States. In Tijuana, masses of people attempt to cross illegally every day with the help of increasingly organized and expensive smugglers. Bergman explores the region to find that this illicit but lucrative business is expanding, and U.S. border agents are subject to an increased risk of corruption. He follows the dramatic story of one such corrupt U.S. border guard, the risky business he became involved in, and what the U.S. government is doing about the problem.

Time for a reality check for Democrats and Republicans. A week of flash points, this week on "Washington Week." Gauntlets thrown down everywhere, on foreign policy. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Some seem to believe that we should negotiate with the terrorists and radicals." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "The president is exactly right." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) replied, "That's exactly the kinds of appalling attack that's divided our country and that alienates us from the world." On domestic politics - Sen. John Edwards (D-NC) said, "Join me in helping send Barack Obama to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue." Sen. Hillary Clinton said, "I am more determined than ever to carry on this campaign." And in Congress, where Republicans are in the dumps, Rep. Tom Davis (R-VA) said, "The Republican brand name - if you were to put this on a dog food, the owners would just take it off the shelf because nobody's buying it." The outlines of the general election come into focus. Covering the week, James Barnes of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, Michael Duffy of Time magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

A trip through the trippy world of exit strategies, foreign policy maneuverings, and vice presidential speculation this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "They're ready to turn the page and write a new chapter in American history. And on June 3rd we are going to bring this nomination to a close." And apparently not one minute before. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I'm going to keep making our case until we have a nominee, whoever she may be." But what's really going on. Is Hillary Clinton actually competing? Can Barack Obama afford to wait to claim the nomination? And on the Republican side, is Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) simply moving on without him especially on foreign policy? McCain said, "Senator Obama has little or no experience on these issues." And Washington's revolving doors. Do lobbyists matter? Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

McClellan, McCain, Michigan, and Florida - the shifting political landscape this week on "Washington Week." Tying up loose ends. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Let's make sure your delegates are seated." Democrats meet this weekend to try to settle their long-running fight. But their likely nominee is already moving on, taking political aim at John McCain. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Senator McCain doesn't want to be seen hat in hand with the president whose failed policy he promises to continue for another four years." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ), however, says it's Obama who is the riskier choice. He said, "My friends, this is about - this is about leadership and learning." And a surprise publishing bombshell offers it's own cautionary tale. Martha Raddatz said, "This is the most loyal White House. That is what this White House is famous for. This incredible loyalty." Scott McClellan said, "No one questioned my loyalty to the president when I was there." They're asking questions now. But more about the formerly loyal aide than about what his book actually says. We explore why. Covering the week, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Every so often a giant emerges on the stage of science, someone who transcends the narrow boundaries of a particular line of research and alters our perspective on the world. E.O. Wilson is such a man. In "Lord of the Ants," NOVA profiles this soft-spoken Southerner renowned for his scientific study of ants that led to his 1975 book "Sociobiology: The New Synthesis," where he put forth the notion that evolutionary principles could explain social behavior throughout the animal kingdom, including in humans. Though sociobiology was a controversial new discipline at the time, today experimental science shows that genes do play a role in aspects of human behavior. E.O. Wilson is an icon of our times: a lord of the ants who sought to explain nature on earth and who now fights for its survival through his worldwide conservation efforts. Actor and environmentalist Harrison Ford narrates this engaging portrait of a ceaselessly active scientist and eloquent writer, who has accumulated two Pulitzer Prizes among his many other honors.

The first segment, "The Grandest Job in the World," focuses on the first two terms of Roosevelt's presidency and explores the central paradox of his presidency: that a man of privilege came to be a hero to a vast and varied coalition of ordinary Americans and a villain to members of his own social class. The episode moves inside the Oval Office to show FDR's response to the massive problems posed by the Great Depression, and out to the heartland to document how his programs and personal style - ebullient, risk-taking and surprisingly cunning - restored hope to Americans who had lost hope. This section also looks at how FDR engineered the "splendid deception" that hid the extent of his physical disability from the American people and how his relationship with his wife affected both his personal and political life. The last section, "The Juggler," is devoted to the wartime years, using FDR's remarkable correspondence with Winston Churchill to chart the calculated and even devious path by which the American president maneuvered support for England before he led his country through the greatest war in history. This segment also traces FDR's management of the war, including his growing personal ties to Churchill and his relationship with Stalin and the Soviet Union, and explores Eleanor's attempt to convince him to maintain the principles of the New Deal, despite the pressures of war.

He was a farmer, a businessman gone bankrupt, an unknown politician from Missouri who suddenly found himself president. Of all the men who had held the highest office, Harry Truman was the least prepared. But he would prove to be a surprise. The first night of "Truman" recounts his early struggles and failures as a young adult, and his undying determination to have an accomplishment to call his own. Truman's success as an army captain during World War I gave him the confidence to marry his lifelong sweetheart, Bess, and begin his path into the world of politics. When he landed the vice presidency with FDR in 1944, he had no idea that his world was about to change forever.

After Harry Truman's unlikely rise to the presidency, he would face some of the biggest crises of the century. Truman would end the war with Germany; use the atomic bomb against Japan; confront an expanding Soviet Union; and wage war in Korea -- all while the woman he adored, his wife Bess, refused to stay in the White House and play the role of First Lady. On the homefront, Truman was the first president to tackle civil rights issues for blacks -- a move that would prove controversial when campaigning for his second term. His unpredictable win over Thomas Dewey in the presidential elections of 1948 proved to Truman that he had finally separated himself from FDR's shadow. However, his second term brought another war and battles with Congress to pass health care and civil rights legislation. Exhausted after his second term, Truman relinquished the presidency and retired to Independence, Missouri, where he lived as a popular and well-loved citizen. In later years, he would receive recognition for all his accomplishments and come to be admired as a gritty American original.

There are more women serving in the military than ever before, and they're in danger but not just from combat. Last year, nearly 1,400 women reported being assaulted and raped by their fellow soldiers, in some cases by their commanding officers. The shocking phenomenon is called military sexual trauma, or MST. Since NOW first aired its investigation into rape and sexual assault in the military last year, the Pentagon has released new reports in which one-third of military women say they've been sexually harassed. And the number of women reporting assault and rape has essentially remained the same even though the military says it has invested serious resources to combat the problem. This week NOW talks to women soldiers who signed up to defend their countries but instead had to defend themselves from assault and rape by their own fellow soldiers. How are these women picking up the pieces of their life after military sexual trauma?

The cosmos has a secret ingredient: a swarm of invisible particles that fills every cubic inch of space. Trillions of them zip through our bodies but we don't notice a thing. Yet without these ghostly, mysterious particles known as neutrinos, the sun wouldn't shine and the elements that make up our world wouldn't exist. NOVA tells the 70-year struggle of scientists to understand them, a tale of atom spies, secret laboratories, and mind-boggling disappearances. This is the story of a discovery that shatters scientists' understanding of what the universe is made of, and could bring us closer than ever to understanding how the universe was first formed.

The Supreme Court rocks the house, and the candidates hurl rocks at each other, this week on Washington Week. The Supreme Court rules that terror suspects at Guantanamo can challenge their detention in federal court - a big decision with legal and political implications. Pres. George W. Bush responded, "We'll abide by the court's decision. That doesn't mean I have to agree with it." Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It's a vindication for those of us who argued from the beginning that it was unwise as well as unconstitutional." But everything has political implications this year, as former Hillary Clinton backers switch sides. Standing beside Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) and his wife, Gov. Strickland said, "You're seeing here today in Columbus, Ohio, the next president and the next first lady." And as the two candidates spar over everything from taxes to gas prices, to presumed guilt by association. Obama said, "The centerpiece of John McCain's economic plan amounts to a full-throated endorsement of George Bush's policy." And also this week, a remembrance of our friend and colleague Tim Russert. Covering the week, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

The Supreme Court rocks the house, and the candidates hurl rocks at each other, this week on Washington Week. The Supreme Court rules that terror suspects at Guantanamo can challenge their detention in federal court - a big decision with legal and political implications. Pres. George W. Bush responded, "We'll abide by the court's decision. That doesn't mean I have to agree with it." Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It's a vindication for those of us who argued from the beginning that it was unwise as well as unconstitutional." But everything has political implications this year, as former Hillary Clinton backers switch sides. Standing beside Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) and his wife, Gov. Strickland said, "You're seeing here today in Columbus, Ohio, the next president and the next first lady." And as the two candidates spar over everything from taxes to gas prices, to presumed guilt by association. Obama said, "The centerpiece of John McCain's economic plan amounts to a full-throated endorsement of George Bush's policy." And also this week, a remembrance of our friend and colleague Tim Russert. Covering the week, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Meet a host of scientists and law enforcement agents who are enlisting crime-solving recruits from the natural world. Watch remarkable real-life case studies reconstructed to reveal the elegant detective work that animals and plants carry out. Flies and their maggots reveal how long a body has lain undiscovered. Microscopic pollen can match a killer to the scene of his crime. Sniffer dogs can track distant criminals and detect tiny quantities of gasoline used to mount an arson attack. Even terrorists can be snared by animal crime busters -- maggots found in the aftermath of an explosion can be analyzed for traces of chemicals, giving vital clues as to who carried out the attack.

From the beginning, honeybees have played a key role in human survival. Most fruit trees and vegetable species are entirely dependent on bees to produce, and there's no artificial replacement for natural pollination. But the bees are disappearing. Massive die-offs, first reported in November 2006, are now the subject of international emergency research as scientists race to discover the cause of this ecological disaster. Could it be a disease? Is it caused by pesticides, genetically modified foods or radiation from cell phone towers? Whatever is happening, we must solve the mystery and correct the problem soon or face unimaginable consequences.

Of the thousands of U.S. troops getting discharged from the Army each year, many who are suffering from post traumatic stress disorder and brain injuries aren't getting the vital care they need. The Army claims these soldiers have pre-existing mental illnesses or are guilty of misconduct. But advocates say this is a way for the Army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment and benefits to which they're entitled. This week, NOW travels to Fort Hood in Texas to meet traumatized soldiers fighting a new battle, this one against the army they served. Are soldiers being wrongfully discharged for honorable service?

NOW's David Brancaccio talks with the former head of U.S. Central Command, Admiral William J. Fallon, who resigned in March after a year of duty. Fallon was considered to be at odds with the Bush Administration's Middle East policy toward Iran. The former commander of U.S. military forces in the Middle East and Central Asia, Fallon was portrayed in Esquire magazine as the man in the military preventing the administration from going to war with Iran. Fallon thought his profile was twisted into a personal attack on President Bush. Esquire stood by the story. Also, political columnist and "The Uprising" author David Sirota talks about the populist movement spreading through the country. Can organizations that operate at the grassroots level create real political change?

History is made as the Democrats pick the nation's first African-American major party nominee, this week on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "Tonight we mark the end of one historic journey with the beginning of another." Barack Obama and the art of the improbable. He also said, "I believe that when all of us come together - black, white, Hispanic, Asian, Native American, young, old, men, women - there is no challenge we cannot meet, no destiny we cannot fulfill." But how tough will it be to come together? Sen. Hillary Clinton's concession came in slow motion." She said, "I understand that a lot of people are asking, "What does Hillary want? What does she want?" Well--" But other Democrats are scrambling to get onboard, even as Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) hopes to scoop up some of the spoils of partisan war. He said, "I'll reach out my hand to anyone, Republican or Democrat, who will help me change what needs to be changed." Eleven weeks to go before the party conventions begin. We look back at the primary season and ahead to the McCain-Obama battle royale, plus, today's big economic news, with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN and U.S. News and World Report, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The Supreme Court rocks the house, and the candidates hurl rocks at each other, this week on Washington Week. The Supreme Court rules that terror suspects at Guantanamo can challenge their detention in federal court - a big decision with legal and political implications. Pres. George W. Bush responded, "We'll abide by the court's decision. That doesn't mean I have to agree with it." Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It's a vindication for those of us who argued from the beginning that it was unwise as well as unconstitutional." But everything has political implications this year, as former Hillary Clinton backers switch sides. Standing beside Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) and his wife, Gov. Strickland said, "You're seeing here today in Columbus, Ohio, the next president and the next first lady." And as the two candidates spar over everything from taxes to gas prices, to presumed guilt by association. Obama said, "The centerpiece of John McCain's economic plan amounts to a full-throated endorsement of George Bush's policy." And also this week, a remembrance of our friend and colleague Tim Russert. Covering the week, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Often hailed as both the first modern scientist and the last of the ancient magicians, Isaac Newton reduced nature's chaos to a single set of mathematical laws. More than three centuries later, those laws still govern the way we analyze and forecast the motions of everything from roller coasters to comets. Besides his fundamental breakthroughs in physics, optics and calculus, Newton poured vast energy into fruitless explorations of alchemy and religion. With lively period re-creations of key moments in his career and replications of his experiments in optics and alchemy, NOVA explores how Newton became the giant upon whose shoulders all later scientists found a place to stand.

With its well-heeled mobsters and glamorous showgirls, fantastical mega-casinos and dazzling displays of neon, Las Vegas is the world's most famous monument to reckless abandon and unbridled excess. Produced to coincide with the city's 100th anniversary, this AMERICAN EXPERIENCE film traces the often surprising, endlessly entertaining history of the country's most outrageous playground: from its beginnings as a remote frontier way station to its Depression-era incarnation as the "Gateway to the Hoover Dam"; from its mid-century heyday as the gangster metropolis known as "Sin City" to its recent renaissance as the fastest growing city in the United States. The program features interviews with well-known Las Vegas insiders - Steve and Elaine Wynn, Brian Greenspun - as well as everyday citizens in search of the American dream in this corporately financed desert fantasyland. Michael Murphy narrates. Part 2 of 2.

There's nothing new in Scott McClellan's book about the propaganda campaign or the role of the press in selling the war, so why is it such big news? Journalists Jonathan Landay and John Walcott of McClatchy newspapers and Greg Mitchell of EDITOR & PUBLISHER examine the performance of the press in the lead up to the war, the reaction of the administration and the media to McClellan's book, and how the press is handling other important stories today. Also, as the contest between Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton for the Democratic nomination comes to an end, Bill Moyers sits down with Kathleen Hall Jamieson and Ron Walters to discuss how race and gender have played out in the presidential campaigns. A media analyst and recurring JOURNAL guest, Kathleen Hall Jamieson is director of the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania. Ron Walters is director of the African American Leadership Center at the University of Maryland.

NOW's David Brancaccio talks with the former head of U.S. Central Command, Admiral William J. Fallon, who resigned in March after a year of duty. Fallon was considered to be at odds with the Bush Administration's Middle East policy toward Iran. The former commander of U.S. military forces in the Middle East and Central Asia, Fallon was portrayed in Esquire magazine as the man in the military preventing the administration from going to war with Iran. Fallon thought his profile was twisted into a personal attack on President Bush. Esquire stood by the story. Also, political columnist and "The Uprising" author David Sirota talks about the populist movement spreading through the country. Can organizations that operate at the grassroots level create real political change?

Of the thousands of U.S. troops getting discharged from the Army each year, many who are suffering from post traumatic stress disorder and brain injuries aren't getting the vital care they need. The Army claims these soldiers have pre-existing mental illnesses or are guilty of misconduct. But advocates say this is a way for the Army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment and benefits to which they're entitled. This week, NOW travels to Fort Hood in Texas to meet traumatized soldiers fighting a new battle, this one against the army they served. Are soldiers being wrongfully discharged for honorable service?

During the years between 1929 and 1939, Churchill was variously described as a "maverick," a "spent force" and a "fanatic." His reactionary views about British control in India and King Edward VIII's abdication alienated him from his political peers. But the war years from 1939 to 1945 became his most famous period. This episode traces Churchill's leadership of Britain through its finest hour during the Battle of Britain to its darkest hour in 1942. His famous speeches rallied the nation, but the pressures of war forced him to make agonizing and brutal decisions. The program also explores the important relationship between Churchill and President Roosevelt.

The global middle class is expected to swell by more than 1 billion people over the next decade, with the biggest increases in China and India. While millions are being lifted out of poverty as a result, the booming middle class is also consuming more global resources. As a result, prices for everything from steel to gasoline to food are soaring. This week NOW reports from Pune, India, where college graduates are getting tech jobs, traditional families are flocking to the new mall, and professionals are hoping their new-found economic might will make their country an even bigger global player. But can America's middle-class - and the rest of the world - afford this unprecedented shift in the global economy?

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

Could this be the first half-billion-dollar election? Welcome to Atlanta, where we'll talk money, politics, and the 2008 campaign this week on "Washington Week." Al Gore said, "Take it from me, elections matter." Better late than never. Al Gore joins the 2008 political fray just as Sens. John McCain (R-AZ) and Barack Obama (D-IL) prepare to take each other on in earnest. McCain said, "I know I have to out-campaign my opponent in every respect, and so I do not underestimate. I consider myself an underdog." Obama said, "When it comes to education, Senator McCain, I believe, is out of touch with the situation of many hardworking Americans." Both sides are getting in position for political hand-to-hand combat on foreign policy, the environment, and on which one can create the most unbeatable general election organization. How are they doing? In Atlanta tonight, four Washington Week regulars: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jean Cummings of Politico, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Five thousand people live onboard the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz; they all share the same mission: maintain, arm and fly jets to deliver bombs to the big game - the war in Iraq. ANOTHER DAY IN PARADISE follows a fighter pilot described by his fellow Black Aces as "more of a lover than a warrior;" an ordnance seaman who discovered right before he departed that his new girlfriend was pregnant; and a tough-talking Marine who loves to salsa dance. The film offers a rare glimpse into the thoughts and lives of the people who are fighting America's wars.

The final episode begins with Churchill's trip to the Normandy beaches in June 1944. When victory in Europe finally came, Churchill led the celebrations, but in private, he brooded about the dangers of Stalin and communism. Two months later, he lost an election, but returned to contest the 1951 election, pledging to lead Britain in the post-war age and determined to forge a peaceful alliance between the U.S. and the USSR. One month short of his 77th birthday, he became prime minister again. The pressures of leadership quickly began to show, however, and in 1953, he suffered a severe stroke; in 1955, he resigned. The last 10 years of his life were a time for reflection. When he died in January 1965, it was the end of a remarkable life - and the end of an era.

This is a portrait of the artist Emile Norman, who, at age 88, is still working with the same passion that inspired him through seven decades of a changing art scene and turbulent times for a gay man in America. The film chronicles his early days in the San Gabriel Valley, his success in New York City, and the freedom he found in Big Sur, where he and his partner of 30 years created a haven for artists that is still growing today.

Landmark Supreme Court rulings, unity in New Hampshire, and a nuclear reversal; a lot to talk about this week on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its term with a bang, striking down a law that banned guns, and yet another one that imposed the death penalty on child rapists. How could one court do two such different things? We look at the end of the term. The Democrats kiss and make up. At a campaign event with Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We may have started on separate paths, but today our paths have merged. Today, we are coming together for the same goal: to elect Barack Obama as the next President of the United States."

Obama responded to the cheering crowd, "She rocks. She rocks. That's the point I'm trying to make." Or do they? What can Hillary Clinton do for Barack Obama? And what can he do for her? While back at the White House, a change of heart on North Korea. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Multilateral diplomacy is the best way to peacefully solve the nuclear issue with North Korea." The isolated nation no longer considered a state sponsor of terrorism. Is it no longer a nuclear threat? As the world spotlight hits China this summer, reporter Evan Osnos goes inside one of the country's most important, but least understood movements - China's underground churches. A joint project of FRONTLINE/World and the Chicago Tribune, "Jesus in China" examines the wave of Christianity that has been sweeping across the country in recent years, and the different ways the Chinese ruling party - officially atheist - is now racing to control it. Also in this hour, two more stories from a small planet, including, "Living on the Edge," producer/reporter Martin Smith's sobering look at communities around the world already devastated by global climate change, and the story of a new movement of architects out to help solve humanitarian problems through design.

Colorful close-up photography and an original music score, combined with facts about insect habitats and life cycles, offer viewers a documentary film that is at once informative and aesthetically appealing. Viewers learn about the multitude of insects in their own gardens - which ones are beneficial and which ones are destroying their vegetables, who eats whom and why. The unique aspect of this documentary is that producer Chris Korrow is both an organic farmer and a professional filmmaker, his insights coming from hard-won hours in the fields and a love for the garden ecosystem.

As the largest predator in Africa, the lion should have nothing to fear. But the king of the savannah is facing an uncertain future. While concentrating on the dwindling number of elephants and rhinos, nobody suspected the biggest of big cats was in trouble. When the number of lions turned out to be fewer than 30,000 and not 100,000 as previously estimated, it was clear that the great lion had become vulnerable. We hear from lion experts, farmers and Masai herdsmen as they explore solutions to the problems of saving lions and living with them.

This week NOW takes a look at the non-profit organization Just Price Solutions and the man behind it, Brian Cosgrove. Cosgrove identified a problem: many low or moderate income borrowers were getting steered into subprime scams because they had low credit scores. But these scores were often low because the home buyers simply didn't take out enough loans or credit cards. Cosgrove's goal was to help the millions of Americans with lower incomes purchase a home without being caught in a "subprime" nightmare, so he and his team created an online software application to measure creditworthiness differently: their track record of paying regular bills, like rent and utilities. By making it cheaper and easier to analyze creditworthiness, Just Price Solutions helps banks offer affordable mortgages to people who would otherwise be forced to pay high interest rates.

Landmark Supreme Court rulings, unity in New Hampshire, and a nuclear reversal; a lot to talk about this week on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its term with a bang, striking down a law that banned guns, and yet another one that imposed the death penalty on child rapists. How could one court do two such different things? We look at the end of the term. The Democrats kiss and make up. At a campaign event with Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We may have started on separate paths, but today our paths have merged. Today, we are coming together for the same goal: to elect Barack Obama as the next President of the United States." Obama responded to the cheering crowd, "She rocks. She rocks. That's the point I'm trying to make." Or do they? What can Hillary Clinton do for Barack Obama? And what can he do for her? While back at the White House, a change of heart on North Korea. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Multilateral diplomacy is the best way to peacefully solve the nuclear issue with North Korea." The isolated nation no longer considered a state sponsor of terrorism. Is it no longer a nuclear threat? Covering the week: Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, James Barnes of National Journal, and Peter Baker of the New York Times.

Landmark Supreme Court rulings, unity in New Hampshire, and a nuclear reversal; a lot to talk about this week on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its term with a bang, striking down a law that banned guns, and yet another one that imposed the death penalty on child rapists. How could one court do two such different things? We look at the end of the term. The Democrats kiss and make up. At a campaign event with Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "We may have started on separate paths, but today our paths have merged. Today, we are coming together for the same goal: to elect Barack Obama as the next President of the United States." Obama responded to the cheering crowd, "She rocks. She rocks. That's the point I'm trying to make." Or do they? What can Hillary Clinton do for Barack Obama? And what can he do for her? While back at the White House, a change of heart on North Korea. Pres. George W. Bush said, "Multilateral diplomacy is the best way to peacefully solve the nuclear issue with North Korea." The isolated nation no longer considered a state sponsor of terrorism. Is it no longer a nuclear threat? Covering the week: Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, James Barnes of National Journal, and Peter Baker of the New York Times.

As the world spotlight hits China this summer, reporter Evan Osnos goes inside one of the country's most important, but least understood movements - China's underground churches. A joint project of FRONTLINE/World and the Chicago Tribune, "Jesus in China" examines the wave of Christianity that has been sweeping across the country in recent years, and the different ways the Chinese ruling party - officially atheist - is now racing to control it. Also in this hour, two more stories from a small planet, including, "Living on the Edge," producer/reporter Martin Smith's sobering look at communities around the world already devastated by global climate change, and the story of a new movement of architects out to help solve humanitarian problems through design.

This week NOW takes a look at the non-profit organization Just Price Solutions and the man behind it, Brian Cosgrove. Cosgrove identified a problem: many low or moderate income borrowers were getting steered into subprime scams because they had low credit scores. But these scores were often low because the home buyers simply didn't take out enough loans or credit cards. Cosgrove's goal was to help the millions of Americans with lower incomes purchase a home without being caught in a "subprime" nightmare, so he and his team created an online software application to measure creditworthiness differently: their track record of paying regular bills, like rent and utilities. By making it cheaper and easier to analyze creditworthiness, Just Price Solutions helps banks offer affordable mortgages to people who would otherwise be forced to pay high interest rates.

AIR GROUP 16: WE CAME TO REMEMBER tells the story of the last reunion of Air Group 16 - the pilots, radiomen and gunners who served on the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington in the Pacific in World War II. The film follows the veterans and their families as they make the journey by train, plane and car to Washington D.C. for their final reunion at the dedication of the National World War II Memorial in May 2004. Through stunning archival footage, period music and dramatic first-person accounts, the film follows Air Group 16 as they tell their stories, remember their fallen comrades and accept official honors from the country they served.

In 1997, U.S. Marines patrolling the Texas-Mexico border as part of the War on Drugs shot and killed Esequiel Hernández Jr. Mistaken for a drug runner, the 18-year-old was, in fact, a U.S. citizen tending his family's goats with a .22 rifle. He became the first American killed by U.S. military forces on native soil since the 1970 Kent State shootings. Narrated by Tommy Lee Jones, the film explores Hernández's death and its torturous aftermath. His parents and friends, the Marines on patrol and investigators discuss the death of one young man and the dangers of militarizing the border.

An unemployment epidemic in the Middle East: what does it mean for America? NOW travels to Jordan to explore the implications of - and possible solutions to - having millions of young people out of work in the Middle East. Staggering unemployment rates among the region's massive youth population is fueling anger, frustration and resentment. To combat the problem, Jordan's Queen Rania has made job creation a top priority. Another initiative comes from an unlikely source: a Brooklyn, New York businessman who has set up programs across the region to give young people the real world skills they desperately need to gain employment. Both have their work cut out for them: nearly 70 million jobs are needed in the Middle East by the year 2020, according to the World Bank. Can these training programs work to stem the tide or are they just a drop in the bucket?

Granted unprecedented access to Japan's "West Point" - the National Defense Academy - WIDE ANGLE captures a remarkable view of the military's shifting role in post-war Japanese society. Since WWII, Japan's pacifist constitution has mandated a strictly defensive force. But the line between defense and offense has blurred, and Japan's military budget is now the fifth largest in the world. With troops in Iraq and sophisticated new fighter jets, Japan is reconsidering its rules of engagement. This program follows Academy cadets preparing for possible overseas deployment and meets a group of peace demonstrators - including atom bomb survivors - on a two-month march dedicated to keeping Japan's troops at home.

Filmed in the mountains of western Montana, this poignant, engrossing story focuses on an extraordinary wild stallion whose life has been recorded since his moment of birth in the wild by Emmy-winning filmmaker Ginger Kathrens. Ms. Kathrens' exceptional footage follows the striking white horse she names Cloud through a series of harrowing struggles and adventures, including expulsion from his own horse family, the rites of passage as he develops into a dominating stallion, his capture in a government roundup and subsequent release, the struggle to survive harsh winters and frequent summer lightning strikes, and the dangers posed by illegal horse shooters. As an illuminating visual record of the emergence of a natural leader, this is an unprecedented film about wild horses.

The ship's location and itinerary are classified. Details of how the nuclear reactor works are top secret. Many aspects of life on a nuclear aircraft carrier are hush-hush. Dating and sex aboard ship are strictly forbidden, but according to one sailor, with 5,000 people on board, relationships are "inevitable," resulting in a "don't ask, don't tell" policy that applies to relationships as well as sexual orientation. When the Nimitz pulls into Hong Kong for a four-day port call, a scandal dramatically alters the lives of two sailors. As the ship departs, the crew learns their itinerary has changed. The captain announces that they are heading for Korea, but the crew can't share this information with their families back home...because it's a secret.

The ship's location and itinerary are classified. Details of how the nuclear reactor works are top secret. Many aspects of life on a nuclear aircraft carrier are hush-hush. Dating and sex aboard ship are strictly forbidden, but according to one sailor, with 5,000 people on board, relationships are "inevitable," resulting in a "don't ask, don't tell" policy that applies to relationships as well as sexual orientation. When the Nimitz pulls into Hong Kong for a four-day port call, a scandal dramatically alters the lives of two sailors. As the ship departs, the crew learns their itinerary has changed. The captain announces that they are heading for Korea, but the crew can't share this information with their families back home...because it's a secret.

Granted unprecedented access to Japan's "West Point" - the National Defense Academy - WIDE ANGLE captures a remarkable view of the military's shifting role in post-war Japanese society. Since WWII, Japan's pacifist constitution has mandated a strictly defensive force. But the line between defense and offense has blurred, and Japan's military budget is now the fifth largest in the world. With troops in Iraq and sophisticated new fighter jets, Japan is reconsidering its rules of engagement. This program follows Academy cadets preparing for possible overseas deployment and meets a group of peace demonstrators - including atom bomb survivors - on a two-month march dedicated to keeping Japan's troops at home.

Through a mix of crime-lab science, archeology, and history, this NOVA/National Geographic special presents new evidence that is changing what we know about the final days of the once-mighty Inca Empire. This probing story of archeological discovery begins in a cemetery crammed with skeletons that offer tantalizing clues about a fierce 16th-century battle between warriors of the collapsing Inca Empire and Spanish invaders. Now, the long-accepted account of a swift Spanish conquest of the Inca - achieved with guns, steel, and horses - is being replaced by a more complete story based on surprising new evidence, including what may be the first gunshot wound in the Americas.

The ship's location and itinerary are classified. Details of how the nuclear reactor works are top secret. Many aspects of life on a nuclear aircraft carrier are hush-hush. Dating and sex aboard ship are strictly forbidden, but according to one sailor, with 5,000 people on board, relationships are "inevitable," resulting in a "don't ask, don't tell" policy that applies to relationships as well as sexual orientation. When the Nimitz pulls into Hong Kong for a four-day port call, a scandal dramatically alters the lives of two sailors. As the ship departs, the crew learns their itinerary has changed. The captain announces that they are heading for Korea, but the crew can't share this information with their families back home...because it's a secret.

AIR GROUP 16: WE CAME TO REMEMBER tells the story of the last reunion of Air Group 16 - the pilots, radiomen and gunners who served on the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington in the Pacific in World War II. The film follows the veterans and their families as they make the journey by train, plane and car to Washington D.C. for their final reunion at the dedication of the National World War II Memorial in May 2004. Through stunning archival footage, period music and dramatic first-person accounts, the film follows Air Group 16 as they tell their stories, remember their fallen comrades and accept official honors from the country they served.

In 1997, U.S. Marines patrolling the Texas-Mexico border as part of the War on Drugs shot and killed Esequiel Hernández Jr. Mistaken for a drug runner, the 18-year-old was, in fact, a U.S. citizen tending his family's goats with a .22 rifle. He became the first American killed by U.S. military forces on native soil since the 1970 Kent State shootings. Narrated by Tommy Lee Jones, the film explores Hernández's death and its torturous aftermath. His parents and friends, the Marines on patrol and investigators discuss the death of one young man and the dangers of militarizing the border.

Mentoring and camaraderie are what hold the ship together. But life on deployment is stressful for everyone aboard, and there can be considerable friction between enlisted personnel and their superiors. Port calls allow sailors to blow off steam, but they don't relieve all the pressure. In Guam, a young sailor coming to terms with his upbringing can't play by the rules and is forced out of the Navy. From Guam, the Nimitz sails through the Straits of Malacca, past Singapore to Kuala Lumpur, the last liberty call before the long haul to the Persian Gulf.

Since WWII, Japan's pacifist constitution has mandated a strictly defensive force. But the line between defense and offense has blurred, and Japan's military budget is now the fifth largest in the world. With troops in Iraq and sophisticated new fighter jets, Japan is reconsidering its rules of engagement. This program follows Academy cadets preparing for possible overseas deployment and meets a group of peace demonstrators - including atom bomb survivors - on a two-month march dedicated to keeping Japan's troops at home.

An unemployment epidemic in the Middle East: what does it mean for America? NOW travels to Jordan to explore the implications of - and possible solutions to - having millions of young people out of work in the Middle East. Staggering unemployment rates among the region's massive youth population is fueling anger, frustration and resentment. To combat the problem, Jordan's Queen Rania has made job creation a top priority. Another initiative comes from an unlikely source: a Brooklyn, New York businessman who has set up programs across the region to give young people the real world skills they desperately need to gain employment. Both have their work cut out for them: nearly 70 million jobs are needed in the Middle East by the year 2020, according to the World Bank. Can these training programs work to stem the tide or are they just a drop in the bucket?

Slipping and sliding, the economy can't get a grip, which is the same thing the presidential candidates are trying to do at home and abroad this week on "Washington Week." Fed. Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "I think the housing market is really the central element of this crisis." Pres. George W. Bush stated, "I think the system basically is sound - I truly do." So which is it? As big mortgage lenders flounder and major industries continue to scale back, there remained more questions than answers. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You raise taxes in a bad economy, you eliminate jobs. I'm not going to let that happen." But as one candidate starts talking about the economy, the other turns to foreign policy. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I will give our military a new mission on my first day in office: ending this war." We are covering the commander-in-chief conundrum tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

After two months in the Gulf, one day starts to become indistinguishable from the next. The airwing still hasn't dropped a single bomb, which is frustrating for some on board. The only relief comes from a port call in Bahrain, where some sailors relax by the pool, while others visit a mosque and learn about Muslim culture. The Princeton, one of the escort ships in the Nimitz strike group, loses a man overboard; an intense search to find the lost sailor ensues.

Even though he's no longer running for president, John Edwards is still a man with a mission: to cut poverty in the United States by 50 percent in 10 years. This week, NOW's David Brancaccio talks with Edwards about how he plans to achieve this ambitious goal and what role it may and should have on the upcoming presidential election. "What's happening in America today is middle class workers, people who are like my parents and my family, the family that I grew up in, they are having a terrible time," Edwards tells NOW. The current economic crisis has Edwards and his followers more committed than ever, but will their efforts gain enough momentum to make a difference?

Slipping and sliding, the economy can't get a grip, which is the same thing the presidential candidates are trying to do at home and abroad this week on "Washington Week." Fed. Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "I think the housing market is really the central element of this crisis." Pres. George W. Bush stated, "I think the system basically is sound - I truly do." So which is it? As big mortgage lenders flounder and major industries continue to scale back, there remained more questions than answers. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You raise taxes in a bad economy, you eliminate jobs. I'm not going to let that happen." But as one candidate starts talking about the economy, the other turns to foreign policy. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I will give our military a new mission on my first day in office: ending this war." We are covering the commander-in-chief conundrum tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Obama in the Middle East and Europe; McCain in the Midwest and Maine. Plus, a foreign policy reality check and new housing help, tonight, on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "The greatest danger of all is to allow new walls to divide us from one another. These now are the walls we must tear down." Barack Obama's speech in Berlin capped a very presidential looking week as he rubbed shoulders with foreign leaders and staged an international PR blitz, while back at home John McCain's criticism of the Democrat grew sharper. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Senator Obama would rather lose a war in order to win a political campaign." What new challenges await? And what are the toughest foreign policy issues either man will inherit? Plus, Congress takes a big step to ease the mortgage crisis, but not everybody's happy about it. Sen. Jim Demini (R-SC) said, "The president has decided he wants this bailout more than he wants to stand by his original position that he would veto it." We take you behind the week's stories with the reporters covering them: Michael Duffy of Time magazine, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.
