Key Talking Points

- Ten Thousand Villages creates Long-Term Relationships that provide stability and work with dignity for artists
- Fair trade provides hope and opportunity, especially for women that are often not valued in developing countries

Fair Trade Facts

- Ten Thousand Villages works with 130 artisan groups in over 35 countries. These artisans cover South America, Asia and Africa.
- We receive new products every month.
- Ten Thousand Villages started in 1946 out of the trunk of Edna Ruth Byler's car and is one of the largest and oldest fair trade retailers in the US.

- Ten Thousand Villages Pittsburgh was started through the efforts of the Pittsburgh Presbytery following a mission trip to Malawi. We are celebrating 17 years!
- Ten Thousand Villages Pittsburgh is staffed by 60 volunteers, some of whom helped to open the store 17 years ago.
- There are many organizations that certify and provide accountability to both cooperatives and organizations working in fair trade. Some of these are:
  - o The World Fair Trade Organization
  - o The Fair Trade Federation
  - o Fair Trade Labeling Organization
  - o FairTrade USA
- Fair Trade is about more than the price paid for the product. It also considers gender equality, environmental standards, and capacity building.
- Fair trade helps to preserve cultural traditions and creates a market for unique, handmade items that can't be found anywhere else.
- Ten Thousand Villages has a YouTube Channel where you can see videos of the artisans demonstrating their craft and talking about how fair trade has changed their lives.
- Fair trade is not charity.

February New Items

$39, Vietnam

There's something so special about these tiny cups. The design is all hand-painted—not made from a decal like other cups you might see with such a sophisticated imagery.

Drinking espresso from a big mug just doesn't cut it. If your [daughter/mom] is making espresso at home, it's important to have the right sized cup. This set of two is presented beautifully in this gift box making it even more special. Plus, these cups are both dishwasher and microwave safe, perfect for use in the home.

$59, India

Product Focus (HTS)- Succulents are really popular choices for terrariums because they are really easy to take care of. I just love the simple, modern design of this terrarium. It would look so nice with a few succulent plants growing inside.

Artisan Focus (CEG)- The maker group that produces this piece is called Noah's Ark. They are based in the city of Moradabad, India, which is famous for its long history of metalworking. Skills like welding are passed down from father to son in small workshops around the city.

$8, Philippines

Perfect for the environmentally conscious consumer, this hot mat is created using recycled materials by the Women's Multipurpose Cooperative in Baguio City, Philippines. An innovative process turns old newspapers into new products by wrapping the paper into coils and forming them into spiraled triangle shapes. These triangles are joined with thread and/or glue and starched. Product has been tested and should stand up to heat and moisture that comes with average use.

Artisan Stories

Moses Kirimi of Kaki Creations in Nairobi, Kenya

- Moses is a skilled artisan that has pieces in the National Museum of Kenya in Nairobi
  - Moses didn't feel that art was something that should be exclusive. He started Kaki Creations specifically to train those that were living in the slums.
  - He did not start his organization with the idea of "fair trade" specifically, but he treated the workers with respect and planned for their success.
  - When an artisan is accepted into their workshop he lives on site during the training and receives an up front salary. Moses says this is important because he can't expect the future artist to remember anything and do his best if he is still worrying about his meals and basic needs.
  - They craft and paint figures using Jacaranda wood, a fast growing light wood in Kenya.
- ### Lombok Pottery in Lombok, Indonesia
- All the members of this artisan group are women. As members they are able to receive dividends along with their salary.
  - The pottery is hand formed, not thrown, and fired in the traditional way by burning coconut and rice husks over them

- The women prefer to make large pieces!
- Their pieces are food safe and oven safe
- Many of their pieces feature birds on them. The women saw birds catching sips of water out of the pieces that were drying in the sun and were inspired

Ele Agbe Company in Accra, Ghana

- This organization was started by a woman named Comfort.
- She works with three different groups, specifically in different regions of the country.
- Shea Butter is called Women's Gold, because this is something that all women can make and earn income from.
- Shea butter is used for everything in Ghana, from a sprained ankle to wrinkles to cooking.
- Shea nuts are usually dangerous to collect and purchased in town through the market. Ele Agbe has their own grove of shea trees, allowing them to grow their own safely.
- The artists create the shea from harvest to finished product in one day to ensure the quality of their product.
- Our Shea Butter is a combination of all three groups Comfort works with. A husband and wife make the jars, the women in Northern Ghana make the shea butter, and the jar is topped with a bead from the jewelry shop.

Lucy from Namayiana in Oloshoibor, Kenya

- A group of Maasai women, that when asked, have been doing beadwork "since the first Maasai was born."
- The women have become self-sufficient, including learning how to repair and drive a van that was on their property.
- More than 100 families are involved and fair trade allows them to pay for food, clothing, and school fees.

Silence in Kolkata, India

- Silence started with 4 artisans in 1977 and now employees 140 artisans and has won 2 international awards for their work with the disabled.
- All of the artisans are disabled, 60% are deaf and 40% are physically disabled.
- In India the only option they would normally have is to become beggars.
- Workers are able to earn income and gain insurance. During training they are housed at the workshop, but as they become self-sufficient move to normal commercial housing.
- We receive greeting cards and candles from Silence, as well as all the tealights in our candleholders.

Candelas La Luciernaga in Tegucigalpa, Honduras

- This cooperative is the project of a local Women's Organization dedicated to the empowerment and welfare of women and includes a shelter for abused women and children.
- Because of their work they face a lot of adversity and have suffered 3 suspicious fires. Because of consistent fair trade purchases they have been able to rebuild and continue to help women.

Steeltown Entertainment Project

Carl Kurlander, President/CEO Steeltown Entertainment Project

412-251-0890 www.steeltown.org

Hello and welcome to Our Issues Pittsburgh - I'm your host Shelley Duffy. Today I'd like to welcome Carl Kurlander, President/CEO of Steeltown Entertainment Project.

Welcome!

How did Steeltown Entertainment Project get started?

Formed in 2003 by civic leaders and some of the top producers, directors, writers, from LA and New York with Pittsburgh roots and civic leaders here, Steeltown Entertainment Project is a non-profit that began with the belief that Pittsburgh has what it takes to become a world class player in the entertainment industry. Over the last decade, through its innovative programs and activities, Steeltown has helped Pittsburgh build a thriving movie and television industry by training young people, supporting the independent film community here, co-financing movies and TV shows, and promoting Pittsburgh as one of the best places to make movies and TV.

Steeltown began when "St. Elmo's Fire" screenwriter and "Saved by the Bell" producer moved back to his hometown for what he thought would be a one year Hollywood sabbatical to teach at the University of Pittsburgh. Instead, he ended up on Oprah for all things moving to Pittsburgh, and ended up a lightning rod for others who had left Pittsburgh to work in the entertainment business.

In 2002, Kurlander ended up writing an op-ed "Pittsburgh's Next Industrial Revolution: Entertainment" which asserted that for too many years this region's biggest export was not steel, but talent which made billions for cities like New York and L.A. and that Pittsburgh had done a great job incubating this talent, but had untapped resources which could be used to make a new industry here.

In 2003, the Steeltown Entertainment Project hosted the "Pittsburgh Entertainment Summit" which brought back what the Post-Gazette called the greatest assemblage of talent and hustle ever assembled to the Fred Rogers Studio where folks like "Chicago" director Rob Marshall, "300" producer Bernie Goldmann, and "Two and a Half Men" director Jamie Widdoes declared that Pittsburgh was Hollywood's best kept secret.

Well, 13 years later, thanks to the efforts of many including the Steeltown Entertainment Project, that secret is out and Pittsburgh has become a leading regional production center, but Steeltown believes this is just the beginning.

Tell us about the some of the ways in which Steeltown helps build an entertainment industry here.

Steeltown really looks at the whole ecosystem here—we are helping train and nurture young talent through our Youth and Media Program, support the independent film community locally their our Steeltown Indie program, and work with organizations like the Film Office and others to help promote Pittsburgh as a leading player in the film and TV business.

We even co-finance projects such as “The Chair” which was a Starz TV series which followed two directors making different movies from the same script. That project brought together partners like “Good Will Hunting” producer Chris Moore, Pittsburgh’s own Zach Quinto who was Spock on “Star Trek” and his production company, Point Park University, and WQED. It ended up winning the 2015 Director’s Guild Award and Television Critic’s Award for Best Reality Series.

Why did Steeltown feel that was an important project to invest in?

Many movies shoot here, and we have great crews and are very film friendly, and they have a great experience. But we don’t have a stake in the projects. Even the Pittsburgh stories like “Me, Earl, and the Dying Girl”, and “Concussion”, shot here, but all the profits go elsewhere.

Steeltown and our partners are co-owners of “The Chair” and not only did it do a great job showcasing the city and the film community here, it also has returned residuals which we can invest in other projects.

Plus, as a stipulation of our investment, more local crew was hired, particularly students and alum for Point Park. We have done this before with a project called “R.L. Stine’s “Don’t Think About It” and that project not only helped get the film industry going here back in 2006, but it is in profit and has helped us do other good work here.

Steeltown does a lot of work with young people—tell us about that?

When I grew up, I had no idea that you could make a living in film and television. What a lot of our Steeltown advisers have wanted to do was mentor a new generation. And we now have several programs that do that.

Our Steeltown Film Academy has worked in schools around the region doing in school and after school programming, teaching basic filmmaking skills. Students who have excelled in that program have been invited to join our Teen Film Crew where students get paid to make videos for various non-profits. Last summer, they did a video for "Learn and Earn" program which featured Jerome Bettis. NFL films was there and even filmed our kids filming Jerome, and that video went viral and was re-tweeted by the Mayor.

Now these incredible students we worked with are making their own show which will premiere right here on Fox in April called "The Reel Teens." The show is actually a show about the kids making the show as they explore Pittsburgh, the entertainment industry, and their futures. They have visited special effects artist Steve Tolin, covered the music festival in the Strip District, and have filmed themselves being mentored by "Two and Half Men" director Jamie Widdoes, director Antoine Fuqua's brother, Curtis Fuqua, who is a teamster on local movies, and Chris Strollo, the sound person for many of the big features which come to town.

We are also launch our seventh annual "Take A Shot At Changing The World" viral video contest where students across the region can win over $5000 in cash and prizes for their videos and this year, end up having themselves and their videos appear on "The Reel Teens" show.

Can you tell us about that and why this is so important to the students' future?

Steeltown is part of the Remake Learning network (www.remakelearning.org) here in Pittsburgh which asserts that kids today learn differently. They are growing up in a digital world—they are digital natives—and have access to more information than any generation before them. And the jobs they will have are with companies that have not even been made yet. Google and Facebook didn't exist ten years ago. The teamwork and creative problem solving which these kids learn through filmmaking can translate to many area of their life.

<http://communityvoices.post-gazette.com/arts-entertainment-living/six-degrees-of-pittsburgh/item/39902-so-your-kid-wants-to-be-in-the-entertainment-industry>

You had some great success with some of the students you have worked with.

We work with amazing young people including Hoji, a Somalian refugee who did not speak English until he was 13. He started in our Youth and Media program five years ago, and now he is a teaching artist mentoring other students at schools and on our Teen Film Crew.

And then there is Jazmin, a young woman we met at Westinghouse High School, the daughter of immigrants, who was interested in special effects. She started working in our Youth and Media program, and then met Steve Tolin who has a special effects company which has worked on "The Outsiders", "Jack Reacher", and "Dark Knight." She met Steve at the Teen Oscar party we have at the Warhol each year while he was demonstrating squib effects on how to have blood explode when people are shot in movies. She ended up apprentice and now works at Tolin Fx.

That is only a few of the stories, but every day, we are amazed by the kids we work with.

Could you tell us more about how you help Pittsburgh's independent film community?

We recognize that Pittsburgh is the home of so many talented content creators, and we want the rest of the industry to recognize this. Our Steeltown Indie program promotes these talented local folks and supports them as they create their projects. Our grants and mentorship program gives select talent monetary and ancillary support for their projects. But, more importantly, we bring them into our network where they're introduced to each other, our industry advisers, and receive mentorship from experienced professionals as well.

We also host Crew Connects where those working in Pittsburgh's incredible indie film community gather to discuss projects and make new connections for current and future productions. These events are amazing because it gives young people a chance to get their first opportunities on set and also allows an opportunity for people to move upwards in the production ranks. The entertainment industry hires based on experience, but it's so hard to get those initial jobs to get started on the pathway. Our Crew Connects are a great way to start a pathway into Pittsburgh's industry.

Our mission with Steeltown Indie is to take emerging filmmakers and turn them into our future advisers. We know Pittsburgh's up and coming talent has what it takes to make it in the entertainment industry.

What other resources does Pittsburgh have to offer?

- Animal Media Group has had incredible success. Their film Blood Brother was Sundance Film Festival Grand Jury & Audience Award winning documentary, and Crocodile Gennadiy premiered at Tribeca last year. We've partnered with Animal because they have an incredible way of finding stories and filmmakers that fill a unique niche. We're so excited about their latest film, Fursonas, and the acclaim the film is receiving. Their work really proves that Pittsburgh has talent.
- Savage Visual Effects is also on the rise. Currently, they're upgrading their offices and moving to the North Side due to all of the work they're receiving. It's exciting that a Pittsburgh company founded by a Pittsburgh native is creating the visual effects for films like Gone Girl and television shows like House of Cards.

Schell Games impresses us so much. The way they blend entertainment, gaming, and education really makes an impact on our society. They just won VR game of the year for "I Expect You To Die."

We love that Pittsburgh has innovative companies like them. They're just part of the reason Pittsburgh is on the map.

-- People talk about the importance of film tax credits and when Pennsylvania started to be competitive with these, they were one of the first states in the country. Now 40 states have tax credits, and some have taken them away because they did not produce longterm jobs in states like North Carolina and Michigan. Besides tax credits, what is needed to make this truly sustainable?

-- We look at this strategically. States like New York, California, and Georgia have hundreds of millions of dollars of tax credits. We have $60 million and people love shooting here so much that those are gone quickly. So right now, we have a Rita's Ice business—which is open half the year. So people have to go elsewhere to make a living.

We are involved in initiatives which can help beyond the tax credits which are essential and help build our local workforce and also make Pittsburgh the best place in the world to shoot movies and TV shows with 15 million and under budgets.

We are partnering with folks on training programs and a lot of what we have been doing the past decade is just now starting to connect and have real impact.

We are so proud of how far we have come, but we believe this could just be the beginning. To quote Steeltown's co-founder Ellen Weiss Kander, we believe "entertainment could truly be Pittsburgh's new steel."

Welcome back to Our Issues Pittsburgh. I'd like to thank Carl Kurlander of Steeltown Entertainment Project. Thank you for joining us today. (Say goodbyes.)

Highmark Caring Place

Type of Business: Community resource – children's grief

Guest: Terese Vorsheck, Director of the Highmark Caring Place

highmarkcaringplace.com

Hello and welcome to Our Issues Pittsburgh - I'm your host Shelley Duffy. Today I'd like to welcome Terese Vorsheck, Director of the Highmark Caring Place. Welcome!

Interview Questions and Answers:

What is the Highmark Caring Place?

- The Highmark Caring Place began in 1996.
- It is a center for grieving children, adolescents and their families.
- Our mission is to raise awareness of the needs of grieving children, provide programs to address those needs and empower the community to support children who have experienced the death of a loved one.
- The Caring Place child-centered—focused on supporting children who have experienced the death of a family member—and also family-focused: the whole family comes with the child or children to the Caring Place.
- It's a safe place where grieving children and families can come together and be with others who understand what they're going through.
- Since its inception in 1996, the Caring Place has served more than 90,000 family and community members through facilities in downtown Pittsburgh and in the Warrendale/Cranberry region, as well as in Erie and Harrisburg.
- Financial support from Highmark allows the Caring Place to provide these services free of charge to all, as a community service to all families and children who can be helped by the program.

Why is a program like this needed anyway?

- First of all, there are a lot of children who need the help. Did you know that one out of every twenty children will experience the death of a parent before they graduate high school? And there are many more children who lose a brother or sister, a close grandparent, or aunt or uncle or cousin.
- And one out of 5 children will have someone close to them die before they are 18.
- But do they really need that much help?
- Children are resilient. Most children will survive after the death of a loved one; they'll go on, finish school, move on into adulthood.
- But surviving does not necessarily mean thriving.
- The death of someone close is an earthquake in a child's life; they find that lots of what they thought was firm and stable in the world, and in their own internal life, has been knocked down and broken into pieces.

- It's not just the death itself that's difficult—it's the fact that every day they wake up and Mom is still not there to see them off to school; every evening, that chair at the table is still empty; every birthday or holiday or vacation or other special day, that loved one is still not there to be a part of it. That hole remains, every moment of every day.
- This experience is frightening. It's confusing. It's sad in a way they'd never thought possible. There are effects in every part of their lives, some of which don't become apparent until weeks, or months, or even years after the person died.
- And the experience is very lonely. These kids feel profoundly alone in their grief, because the vast majority of kids in this situation don't know anyone else who has gone through this. No one understands what they're going through. Their friends treat them differently now. They feel cut off from the world.
- They need support.

How does the Caring Place work?

- The Caring Place works through peer support.
- Children and teens get together with other kids their own age, and soon begin to share their feelings, memories and experiences with each other.
- Just being with others their age who have experienced a death helps these kids so much—they don't feel all alone in their grief anymore. They don't feel like no one understands. Because their new friends do understand.
- This in itself is profoundly healing.
- They also get to talk about things that they often have had no chance to talk about up until then, to unlock feelings and thoughts and worries and questions which had been bottled up before this.

How does it provide support to grieving children?

- And—they just get to be kids at the Caring Place. They talk with their new friends about normal kid things—about school, and sports teams, and music, and videogames, and proms and boyfriends and girlfriends—these are kids who happen to be grieving the loss of someone they love. But they remain kids. And they can be who they are at the Caring Place.
- The same groups of kids, with their families, come together for evening meetings at the Caring Place. There are ten meetings, held every other week, which begin with sharing dinner together, and then, in the second hour, the kids are divided into groups by age, while the adults meet together with the other adults.

Do you provide counseling to these grieving children?

- No. The groups of children and adults—helping each other through peer support—are facilitated by trained adult volunteers. These volunteers come from all walks of life; they don't usually have any kind of background in counseling or any related field.
- They simply want to help kids who need the help.
- All of the volunteers go through an extensive 26-hour training to prepare them to be with the families. Above all, the training focuses on listening.
- In addition to the work that the kids do with each other and the volunteers in their group rooms, there is also available to them, during the dinner hour, and sometimes during the group hour, what we call our Family Activities Room.
- When kids (or adults) first think of what a grieving center might be, they come up with all sorts of ideas, but very few of them imagine a place with air hockey games. But playing, laughing, smiling, having fun—these are all just as valid an expression of who they are as the tears or anger or confusion that they might express at other times.

How does a parent (or any adult) know when their children might need help after the death of a loved one?

- First I would say that the grief by itself is usually enough reason that a child will need extra support, especially to help them know they're not alone.
- Grief is a natural and normal response to the death of a loved one—but natural doesn't mean that help is not needed.
- Beyond that, some children exhibit certain behaviors that adults might be concerned with, especially if these behaviors continue for many weeks or months. These could include withdrawal from friends or family, a long-term drop in school performance, acting-out behaviors, or anger outbursts.
- All of these things could very well be seen in the reactions of many children, especially in the days and weeks soon after the death. It's the continuation over the long-term that may cause an adult to wonder if these are signs of a more complicated grief reaction that might need extra help.
- If anyone has questions like this about their own child, I would encourage them to call the grief specialists at the Caring Place to discuss this question. We can help you sort through these and any other concerns you might have about your child.

What is Children's Grief Awareness Day?

- Children's Grief Awareness Day is a day to bring attention to the fact that grieving children often feel very alone and forgotten in their grief. It provides an opportunity for all of us to raise awareness of the painful impact that the death of a loved one has in the life of a child, and an opportunity to make sure that these children receive the support they need.
- Children's Grief Awareness Day is recognized and observed by organizations around the United States and across the world. But it was created in 2008 right here in western Pennsylvania, by the Highmark Caring Place and our partnership with schools, the Caring Team for Grieving Children. Since that time, thousands of individuals and organizations, along with local, state and national leaders from across the U.S., have worked to raise awareness of grieving children and to change the culture in order to make death and grief a topic that can be spoken of openly and compassionately. The Highmark Caring Place continues to lead the coordination of the observance day.
- This special day is observed every year on the third Thursday in November—which is November 19 this year.

What are the goals of Children's Grief Awareness Day?

- The goals of Children's Grief Awareness Day are to:
  - o Raise awareness of the impact of death on children;
  - o Raise awareness of the benefits of support for grieving children;
  - o Provide information in order to increase the general knowledge of the needs of grieving children; and
  - o Make resources available to raise this awareness and increase this knowledge

How can people observe Children's Grief Awareness Day?

- Many activities, large and small, can raise awareness of grieving children. The most basic way to participate is to wear blue. And, when you do wear blue, make sure you publicize the reason why you're wearing blue—to bring awareness to grieving children! The more that everyone knows why they're seeing so many people in blue, the more they will start to think of the needs of grieving children too.
- There are many other activities that are shown on the Children's Grief Awareness Day website. The main point is that whatever you do, there will be many kids who will feel validated and special because you took the time to recognize how hard it sometimes is for them as they deal with the loss of someone close. And some of these kids you would never even know were grieving, because they don't feel comfortable talking about it. But those kids are being helped just the same.

Why is Children's Grief Awareness Day set in November?

- Any time of year can be difficult for kids who have lost a loved one. But the holiday season, with the emphasis on family get-togethers, and the memories that come up about holidays of years past, becomes a particularly difficult time for people who are grieving. It's appropriate to have an occasion set aside at this time of year to let grieving kids know that they're not alone, and that there are people all around them who want to support them, and who really do care about them.

Why is it important to raise awareness for grieving kids and teens?

- Many people don't realize that it takes most children much longer to deal with their grief than we expect. The struggles they go through inside, which remains invisible to most of the rest of us, is much more intense than we have any idea of. So we want to raise awareness so that people will realize that even if they can't see this inner turmoil, there can still be a lot of pain and anxiety and confusion inside a grieving child's heart. And so that people will understand that a grieving child can't just "get over it"—not in any set time period, not by any act of their own will—and that there's no reason that they should just "get over it." We want to raise awareness to help people learn ways they might help a grieving child they happen to know, now or in the future.

It looks like you have brought a few items with you today. Could you show them to us and explain what they are?

- First, this is part of our "Holding on to HOPE" initiative, which encourages people to take a photo with HOPE the butterfly, and post it to Twitter and/or Instagram with #CGADHope. The HOPE butterfly print out is available on the Children's Grief Awareness Day website. The initiative has been well received, garnering support from people around the world.

- I also have an example Caring Place quilt square. Families create quilt squares in honor and memory of their loved ones during the time they are at the Caring Place. A group of dedicated quilters works together to arrange and sew these squares into quilts, which, after being dedicated to the families, hang on the walls of the Caring Place.

- I also have some of the projects children have created at the Highmark Caring Place to help express their grief following the loss of a loved one.

Welcome back to Our Issues Pittsburgh. I'd like to thank Terese Vorsheck, Director of the Highmark Caring Place. Thank you for joining us today. (Say goodbyes.)

About the Highmark Caring Place: The Highmark Caring Place champions the cause of grieving children by creating awareness of their needs, providing programs for them and their families, and empowering the community to effectively support them.

The first Caring Place facility opened in Pittsburgh in 1997. Since that time, the program has expanded across Pennsylvania, with additional facilities in Erie, near Harrisburg, and in Warrendale.

Thousands of community members are helped by the Caring Place each year at no cost through our peer support groups, and through our education, consultation, and referral services.

Upcoming Event: Children's Grief Awareness Day (November 19, 2015)

Created in 2008 by the Highmark Caring Place, A Center for Grieving Children, Adolescents and Their Families, and since recognized by organizations around the world, Children's Grief Awareness Day is observed every year on the third Thursday in November (the Thursday before the U.S. holiday of Thanksgiving). This time of year is a particularly appropriate time to support grieving children because the holiday season is often an especially difficult time after a death.

Children's Grief Awareness Day seeks to bring attention to the fact that often support can make all the difference in the life of a grieving child. It provides an opportunity for all of us to raise awareness of the painful impact that the death of a loved one has in the life of a child, an opportunity to make sure that these children receive the support they need.
