Mike Perlstein is on the show to discuss a recent triple murder that is causing worry about the increase in gang activity in the New Orleans area. Shootings are up. There was a two month lull in the murder rate in the city, but now it has again risen back up and may even surpass last year's murder rate. This is bad news for the City Administration which has put a lot of effort, resources, and public focus on driving down the murder rate and shootings such as NOLA for Life and Midnight Basketball and gang enforcement task forces. Unfortunately, the problem stems from the drug trade which is so lucrative that drug gangs form and battle over turf at gunpoint. Unfortunately it seems that even when gangs are taken off the street, they are usually reformed and members of the gang are replaced by others willing to step in.

Mike Perlstein is on the show to discuss the recent French Quarter shootings. One shooting happened on Bourbon Street where an innocent bystander was killed in what now appears to be an argument between two armed people firing at one another. One of the two suspects has recently been arrested. And the police appear to be close to a second arrest. This type of situation has been seen one too many times. Bourbon Street is jam packed and full of people who have been drinking, and it seems that people are very quick to take an argument and escalate to violence. Some people have suggested putting metal detectors on the street.

Curt Sprang appears on the show to talk about the recent shooting of former NFL player Joe McKnight. It started as road rage incident and it left one man dead in Terry Town. Ronald Gasser was the shooter and waited at the scene for police to arrive, but Deputies did not arrest him. It outraged a lot of people that Gasser was not arrested on the scene and that he was later released. Then a few days later he was arrested and booked with manslaughter. Jefferson Parish Sheriff Newell Normand had a few news conferences as this situation was occurring, and he explained his actions stating he did not want to have a rush to judgement. He did not want to put an official story of what happened until they were able to speak to all the possible witnesses. They tracked down over 200 witnesses using license plate pictures. They were also able to interview him for 10 hours without a lawyer and able to search his house, whereas if he had been arrested he would have had a lawyer immediately. The whole case continues to be surrounded by controversy including Sheriff Normand reading explicit-laced letters written to public officials over outrage of the perceived preferential treatment of Gasser.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

The Final Days of Election 2016: With less than a week until Election Day, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump are making their final pitch to voters in battleground states, trying to increase voter turnout and reach 270 electoral votes. But in the week since the FBI announced its review of new Clinton State Department emails, polls are tightening. More than 30 million voters have already cast ballots and many voters just want it all to be over.

Errol Laborde appears on Informed Sources to discuss the controversy surrounding the Jefferson Parish President Mike Yenni. More officials have called for him to step down and resign and poll results are not in his favor, but Yenni says he isn't going anywhere. Putting people out of office is difficult. In Louisiana you need at least one third of registered voters to sign a petition which is a large number to get. In Jefferson Parish, they would need at least 90,000 signatures on a recall petition. In Louisiana, there has only been one example of a successful referendum. Its an incredibly difficult process.

The Obama Legacy: From hope and change to achievements and setbacks: President Barack Obama was elected by promising hope and change, but during his eight years in the White House he learned that governing isn't always easy. His domestic agenda focused on a weak economy and expanding access to health care. His foreign policy doctrine was about negotiation over conflict. Despite successes, Obama's critics can point to setbacks like the rise of ISIS and Russia's growing influence. As the nation's first black president enters his final month in office, we explore his legacy, what he accomplished and what remains undone.

Dawn Ostrom is on the show to discuss changes in the status of the movie industry in Louisiana. The movie industry seems to be coming back bigger than it has been in some time because of the tax cap that occurred a few years ago. Three feature films are coming as well as three television shows as well. Television shows that come to town create a lot of work for local people and contribute a lot of money to the economy when they are here. There will be more announcements coming in the first quarter as well.

Why rich nations may be their own worst enemy: Economist Todd Buchholz rails against what America has become: a people who want everything but aren't willing to pay for it. In "The Price of Prosperity," he suggests that wealthy nations such as the U.S. inflict harm on themselves, even cause their own demise, by racking up debt, having fewer children and increasing governmental regulations. Economics correspondent Paul Solman reports.

In Tampa, Florida, in February 2013, a giant hole opened up under the bedroom floor of Jeffrey Bush, swallowing the 36-year-old as he slept. His body was never found. Bush was a victim of a sinkhole – a growing worldwide hazard that lurks wherever limestone and other water-soluble rocks underpin the soil. When carbon dioxide in the air dissolves in rainwater, it forms a weak acid that attacks the soft rocks, riddling them with holes like Swiss cheese. Sinkholes can occur gradually when the surface subsides into bowl-shaped depressions or suddenly, when the ground gives way – often catastrophically. Sinkholes have swallowed highways, apartment buildings, horses, camels, even golfers, with monster-size holes cracking the earth from Siberia to Louisiana. With compelling eyewitness video of dramatic collapses, and following scientists as they explore the underlying forces behind these natural disasters, NOVA travels the globe to investigate what it's like to have your world vanish beneath your feet.
