Usually in the fall, there have been record crowds at the Convention Center. This year there are no huge conventions coming into town. The next one will be Ophthalmology in 2017. The Convention Center used a baseball analogy and stated, "We're not getting triples and home runs, we are getting singles and doubles." And those singles and doubles still score runs eventually. There are about 11 big meetings coming in between now and the end of year. The biggest thing coming in is the International Work Boat Show which is now in its 36th year coming to New Orleans. The bread and butter business is definitely back, and more visitors came through the NO Airport last year than before Katrina. Those numbers are back up. The Convention Center says more than 1.2 million meeting attendees came to the city last year. And those meeting attendees bring their family members, and they visit restaurants.

Ten trillion dollars in Americans' retirement savings are invested in large and small accounts managed by banks, brokerages, mutual funds and insurance companies. But whether your IRA or 401K will assure a safe retirement is largely a gamble. Building off reporting from the groundbreaking special "Money, Power and Wall Street," FRONTLINE raises troubling questions about how America's financial institutions protect our savings. "The Retirement Gamble" reveals how fees, self-dealing and kickbacks bring great profits to Wall Street while imperiling the prospects of a secure future for individuals. The film questions who has the consumer's best interests in mind, and whether there is a better way to manage our retirements.

The New Orleans Metropolitan Association of Realtors released its latest average home price report. It took a bigger look at the change in home prices over the last ten years. The average home price in Orleans Parish increased by 46%, while Jefferson Parish homes saw a mere 1% increase. People wanting to move to historic urban neighborhoods drove the demand while a major influx of transplants brought wealth to the city.

The deal has been inked for the World Trade Center. The lease agreement between the city and the developers was signed four months ago. What happened this week is that all the financial backers came to New Orleans and had a big press conference in the lobby of the World Trade Center that said they are officially putting up money. The press conference was supposed to assure the public that the deal is happening and to put aside any skepticism surrounding the project. It's tried to be developed in the past and has fallen through several times. The developers include a holding company controlled by Bill Gates as well as some local, smaller investors. They all say they are moving forward with this. This is a 364 million dollar redevelopment. It'll be 350 Four Seasons brand hotel rooms and 76 condos. Construction should start during the first quarter of 2016.

The sheriff of Orleans parish says he doesn't want to be in charge of electronic monitoring anymore. Marlin Gusman has been trying to back out of that program for a while even though it's been paid for by the city, proven effective, and practiced around the country. It's also a much cheaper alternative to locking someone up. New Orleans can't seem to get it straight. Gusman's claim is that the city has not paid over the last several months. The city says that Gusman refuses to sign the contract/agreement. If he doesn't agree to sign, there will be no electronic monitoring after October 1st. There are 55 inmates who are wearing the ankle bracelets, half of these are juveniles. No one knows what will happen to those inmates. Will those 30 juveniles be locked up because there are no more ankle bracelet program. The city is trying to work out a solution. There are some private companies that do electronic monitoring.

State Police and the NOPD are working side by side a little bit more now in the CBD and the French Quarter Area. 50 State Troopers were invited and welcomed with open arms to help with the badly understaffed NOPD. But now, there are signs of friction. NOPD looks at a trooper and sees someone who is getting paid more and doesn't have to work under the scrutiny of the Federal Consent Decree and all the things that go with that. Recently the State Police started an Academy Class, and seven existing NOPD officers jumped ship to join that Academy class including one person who was still a recruit and just finished filed training for the NOPD. It's seen as poaching.

What is it like to be a dog, a shark or a bird? This question is now getting serious attention from scientists who study animal senses. Humans rely on smell, sight, taste, touch and sound; other animals have super-powered versions of these senses, and a few have extra senses we don't have at all. From a dog that seems to use smell to tell time to a dolphin that can "see" with its ears, discover how animals use their senses in ways we humans can barely imagine. But it's not just the senses that are remarkable - it's the brains that process them. NOVA goes into the minds of animals to "see" the world in an entirely new way.

Paula Pendarvis, Marcia Kavanaugh and Tom Gregory just completed the half-hour special, AMERICAN GRADUATE: LOUISIANA OPPORTUNITIES, which took a look at a broad sampling of what has taken place in public education since Katrina and premiered last night. In the 2005 school year, only 35% of Orleans Parish students were proficient on their test scores. In 2014, proficiency was up to 62%. The gap between Orleans Parish and the rest of the state has gone from 23 points behind to now only 6 points. Proficiency among African-American students went from 32% to 59% and is now higher than the state average. The special repeats four more times; dates and times are given.
