The newly constructed University Medical Center and Veterans Affairs Hospital are aiming to open their doors late in 2015. The University Medical Center's vision is to become a destination for healthcare by implanting several specialty departments, such as neuroscience, and potentially a burn unit. The VA Hospital is expected to serve nearly 70,000 veterans in the Gulf Coast region. A tangible impact on both residential and commercial real estate has already taken place in the Mid-City area.

Years back, the Convention Center purchased 32 acres of riverfront property between Market and Henderson Streets with the intention of expanding the center in order to attract larger conferences. Recently, however, the Convention Center requested proposals to repurpose the property into a recreational, tourist-friendly attraction. The Howard Hughes Corporation, the group responsible for the successful Outlet Collection at The Riverwalk, has expressed interest in developing the area alongside developer Darrell Burger. The plan could be acted upon as early as summer 2015.

Chasing the American dream, thousands of workers flock to a North Dakota town where the oil business is booming. But instead of well-paying jobs, many find slim work prospects and a severe housing shortage. Pastor Jay Reinke converts his church into a makeshift dorm and counseling center, allowing hundreds of men, some with checkered pasts, to stay despite the congregation's objections and neighbors' fears. When opposition to the "overnighters" reaches a boiling point, Pastor Jay makes a decision with shattering consequences. A modern-day Grapes of Wrath, The Overnighters tells the story about the promise of redemption and the limits of compassion.

The Overnighters is accompanied by three short films:
"The Caretaker" is a portrait of two women who are outsiders in the place they call home. Haru is a 95-year-old Japanese-American migrant who was interned during World War II. Joesy is an undocumented worker from Fiji who tenderly cares for her.

And two StoryCorps Animated Shorts:
In "A More Perfect Union," Theresa Burroughs recalls her persistence during the Jim Crow era in the South. When she came of voting age, she was ready to cast her ballot-but she had a long fight ahead of her.
In "The Last Viewing," Allen Hoe tells how his oldest son, Nainoa, was killed by sniper fire while leading his men through Mosul, Iraq. He then recalls a trip to Washington, D.C. and an encounter with a stranger that brings them both unexpected comfort.

With unprecedented access, FRONTLINE investigates the impact of mass incarceration in America, focusing on a troubled housing project in Louisville, Kentucky, and a statewide effort to reverse the trend. There are some 2.3 million people behind bars in the U.S. today, but a disproportionate number come from a few city neighborhoods, and in some places the concentration is so dense that states are spending millions of dollars a year to lock up residents of single blocks. "Prison State" examines one community, Louisville's Beecher Terrace housing project, and follows the lives of four residents as they move in and out of custody, while Kentucky tries break that cycle and shrink its prison state.

The Louisiana governor's race is accelerating, and few have seen a race move this quickly. There are already ads, radio spots, and polls for this gubernatorial election. If the race was held this weekend, according to polls, the run off would be between David Vitter and John Bill Edwards. The big question remains will another Democrat still get into the race? It is tough for a Democrat to get elected in Louisiana, but there still remains a possibility. This will be the most expensive race for Governor in Louisiana history.

There are proposed bills that would cap the Louisiana film incentive program in different ways. It looks like there will be some kind of a cap imposed on this program, which in its most expensive year, cost the state $250 million in tax credits. What would make this program less attractive to the industry is if less of their expenses are covered. A cap on the program won't cause the industry to leave. There may be a rolling cap – if you were not able to receive funding because there is no money left in the budget, you'll be first in line next year. The biggest problem with the program is that it hasn't set down permanent roots. Other states have become attractive to the industry. It will become a race between states. A criticism of the program is that the biggest salaries go to people who don't live here and don't spend that money here. Also, there have been accusations of fraud having to do with the tax incentive program as well.

Libraries are a crime-fighting tool. Some Louisiana libraries are about to run out of reserve funds they received after Katrina. There is a proposal to expand the millage by 2.75 million. It has the support of the mayor and the "good government cue givers," like newspapers. It will be a low turnout election, but sometimes that's part of the strategy. Usually the voters tend to be civic-minded. There's also a 2.8 million millage for the sheriff's office, for various construction projects.

At 2:50 pm on April 15, two bomb blasts turned the Boston Marathon finish line from a scene of triumph to tragedy, leaving three dead, hundreds injured, and a city gripped by heartbreak and terror. Less than five days later, the key suspects were identified. Soon one was dead, the other in custody. How did investigators transform the chaos of the bombing into a coherent trail of clues, pointing to the accused killers? NOVA follows the manhunt step by step, examining the role modern technology-combined with old-fashioned detective work-played in cracking the case. Given hundreds of hours of surveillance and bystander videos, how did agents spot the suspects in a sea of spectators? Why couldn't facial recognition software I.D. the criminals? How much could bomb chemistry analysis, cell phone GPS, infrared imagery and crowd sourcing reveal about the secrets behind this horrific crime? With the help of top criminal investigators and anti-terrorism experts, NOVA explores which technological innovations worked --and which didn't --in the most notorious case of today, and how the world of crime fighting could be transformed tomorrow.

The earthquake that hit the northern coast of Japan on March 11, 2011, was recorded at magnitude 9.0 -- the worst ever recorded in Japan. It generated an unprecedented tsunami, obliterating coastal villages and towns in a matter of minutes. In some areas, the tsunami climbed over 100 feet in height and traveled miles inland. Amazingly, amateur and professional photographers captured it all on video, including remarkable tales of human survival, as ordinary citizens became heroes in a drama they never could have imagined. As the waves rush in, a daughter struggles to help her elderly mother ascend their rooftop to safety; a man climbs onto an overpass just as the wave overtakes his car. These never-before-seen stories are captured in video and retold after-the-fact by the survivors who reveal what they were thinking as they made their life-saving decisions. Their stories provide lessons on how we should all act in the face of life-threatening disasters.
