Employment – Etiquette	News	12/17/18	3:30am, 4:30am, 6:30am, 7:30am	30sec	This week is the busiest when it comes to office Christmas parties. Etiquette experts have come up with a few guidelines to help you avoid trouble. When it comes to the actual party itself, it's a good idea to avoid shop talk. The idea of the party is to socialize with co-workers, not extend the work day. Also, don't forget that even though it is a social situation, it is a WORK situation...don't do anything you would in the workplace. Maybe you're having a gift exchange and you're not sure what the guidelines are. When it comes to gifts for co-workers, it's important to keep two things in mind; don't spend too much money and don't make it too personal. It's also a good idea not to over or under dress for the office party as well. The general rule is wear what you'd usually wear to work or something slightly nicer...and make sure you keep it classy!

Gifts	News	12/20/18	3:30am, 4:30am, 5:30am, 6:30am, 7:30am	30sec	While many of us have yet to send our Christmas packages, over 1.5 million gifts have already been returned. Most of these gifts are those we get for ourselves (to me from me) which is considered a very healthy habit to develop for Christmas. Today is National Re-gifting Day. What was once considered tacky (many still do) has become a fun way to celebrate primarily at the office. Couple of rules to follow; Only if the receiver will like it, it's still new in its original packaging, it's not embarrassing, and you don't give it back to the person who gave it to you. What did you get for Christmas last year? Do you remember? Research shows that by January 1st you are likely to have forgotten what you receive just a week before. So, what are the best most memorable gifts and who is most likely to give them? It seems experiences trump actual gifts. Spa Days, dinner out, and trips are considered the most memorable gifts. As for the giver, your spouse is most likely to give you the best gift while your siblings are most likely to give you the worst.
