Pastor D. Robinson introduces the organization, Kingdom Covenant Connections, and its president, Carrie Coats. The organization is a collaborative effort of over twelve ministries that come together annually to say that we need each other and with each other we can make a difference in the lives of others. Everyone has different gifts and callings, which is what makes it all work together and keeps them growing. What started as a one-day event, is now a three-day event. Friday is the job fair with prayer around the fountain. Saturday is the Unity Walk, which is now a praise parade with the Magnolia Breeze Ensemble band leading the Unity Walk. After the walk there is praise and worship and a full program with praise dancers, choirs, and speakers. In addition to the job fair, there is a health fair and free food, haircuts, clothes and shoes for the homeless community that attend. It's a full day of ministry to those less fortunate, as well as the lost. Everyone looks forward to bringing the community and churches together. On Sunday the King of Kings Concert helps to bridge the gap with various types of music, speakers, and food. This event is changing the way people think about the less fortunate. It's different than coming to the building because outside everyone can be themselves. Many are reached in love and they are reaching back. Even when invited to attend church, people will say that they don't have the appropriate clothes. Some have said they went to a church, but they were not allowed in because they were not clean. One of the homeless came out of the shower and after getting a haircut and all cleaned up, he said he could now get a job. Kingdom Covenant Connections desires to help create a solution to help the city and state to create solutions to the problems that face us. They are reaching the youth, senior citizens, and the homeless, year-round. The Unity Walk is the one time a year they all come together in a unified way.

Tori Stamoulis introduces the organization Green Beret Project in Delaware. Adam Kramer, of the Green Beret Project talks about the importance of reaching teenage youth who are at risk in the community. Adam's passion for this outreach grew from his own experiences after he was released from a federal corrections facility and sent to an aftercare program. After completing this program, Adam realized that in the state of Delaware, there is little help for juveniles to re-enter society. This seemed unusual because intervention for people in their youth could decrease the possibility of their incarceration as adults. The Green Beret Project started when former green berets who were in law enforcement saw a need to help juveniles in the community in the projects. They wanted to prevent the crime instead of chasing after the crime. Many of these young boys think they are men. This is often the result of a lack of a father figure in the home which results in these young boys taking on responsibilities they would not normally handle. This forces them to mature faster and they are missing a lot of the key components of discipline and obedience. One of the components of the Green Beret Project is the physical training. The training allows these young men to become more comfortable with the instructors and helps to develop trust and friendships. The Green Beret project had its first successful summer this year with an active all-day camp for the entire summer. The key to this success was the daily commitment of several officers to the program. The youth enjoyed the formal structure of the program. The program reaches youth from nine to eighteen years of age. Adam adds that he must to remember who he is in Christ. God gave him the leadership skills needed to succeed. In the past, Adam used his God given gifts in a negative way, but now, through Christ, he has completely changed the direction and purpose of his life.

Host, Danny Sanchez introduces Ann Edenfield, the Executive Director and Founder of Wings for L.I.F.E. International. Ann shares that 72% of children of prisoners are going to prison, and for every person in prison, 33 to 38 other people are directly impacted. In New Mexico alone, there are 52,000 plus children with parents in prison. This does not include the children of federal inmates because there are no federal prisons in New Mexico. So, one out of ten children in an American classroom have a parent in prison or jail. So many of these children do not have a healthy family, family support, or a caring network. An inmate is cared for, is fed, housed, told what to do, when to do it, where to go; all the rules. No one is there for the families. It's very difficult when you have somebody arrested. Truly the family is arrested. Wings for L.I.F.E. stands for "Life Skills Imparted to Families Through Education." They teach the "40 Developmental Assets" from Search Institute to reduce at-risk behaviors. Wings for L.I.F.E. is there for the family and has changed whole prison cultures bringing God into prisons. They bring hope and strengthen families, sometimes bringing families together for the first time.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Pastor Kevin Brown of Side-By-Side Church International of Orange County, California to discuss the growing crime of sex trafficking. Pastor Brown explains that human trafficking comes in many forms. The most common that we hear about in the United States is sex trafficking. Other forms of human trafficking are labor, indigent and, in other countries, child soldiers. All of it is modern- day slavery. There are more slaves today throughout the world than at any time in the history of mankind. In Pastor Brown's experience, the victims of sex trafficking have a tremendous lack of trust which makes it very difficult for them to decide to exit "the life." In Santa Ana, there is a three quarters of a mile section called a track. A track or a blade is where sex victims, sex slaves, are forced, through coercion, to go out and walk around. Anyone can be vulnerable to becoming a victim of sex trafficking. However, the most prevalent they have come across have been runaways or those who have come out of foster care. Pastor Brown shares that Lives Worth Saving Human Trafficking was implemented to bring awareness to the forefront for Christian organizations, non-profits, and grass roots organizations. When his ministry began, although there were and are many good organizations, doing excellent work to help bring awareness, prevention, and help for victims to get out of the life, he did not see a unified effort. Hence the ministry name "Side-By-Side" which is trying to bring more collaboration with churches getting involved and working side-by-side to impact the problem of sex trafficking in America, because we know we must work side-by-side with other like-minded people to bring transformation to an injustice. They've even created a curriculum about safety. The church, as a community, can become more proactive by collaborating with other organizations already doing the work. One thing we don't see are groups of Christians going out into communities where the tracks are at, or where we know the hotels have a lot of human trafficking activity. We don't see groups of Christians going there and praying. Not protesting but praying; going there and changing the spirit. Going there and letting the captives be set free because you brought the light to that darkness. Pastor Brown has seen, first hand, God perform these transformations because people went and prayed, and stood their ground, and it brought light to darkness. Sierra Swift shares her story how she became involved in sex trafficking and how Jesus Christ has changed her life.

Mike Huckabee talks about his experience as Governor and the changes needed in the criminal justice system. A couple of decades ago, a popular policy was 'Three Strikes You're Out.' That meant a life sentence for three thefts of $400. It costs more money to put a person in prison for a year than to put a person in college and pay full tuition, room and board, buy books, and even provide spending money. It also costs more than it would to provide mental health needs for many people who are locked up without any treatment for what landed them there in the first place. We don't have a crime problem, we have a drug and alcohol problem. Eighty-eight percent of the inmates in the Arkansas system were there for a drug or alcohol-related crime. Some of those folks absolutely are dangerous and they need to be imprisoned. But many would do better to be in treatment centers and community restitution centers which address the root problem, and often cost as little as ten percent of the cost of a full-blown lockup. Without addressing why people end up in prison, our correction system is mostly a place where greater criminal skills are learned and, upon release, the inmate who can't find a job ends up committing more elaborate crimes. While the government can't force people into faith-based programs, his experience was that only the faith-based programs had long-term success rates. Programs like InnerChange and Prison Fellowship had a less than twenty percent recidivism rate compared to the more than eighty percent recidivism of traditional approaches. Angola Prison in Louisiana was once considered the most violent and hopeless institution in all of America. Now, it is a model of changing inmate behavior by changing the inmate from the inside out through a process that is all about repentance, forgiveness, restitution, and redemption by faith in God. Some inmates will never get out because of what they did, but while their bodies may not be freed, their souls have been.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shows us the life of a former prostitute and how she found hope. Prostitution has been around for thousands of years damaging the lives of many women. Recent statistics tell us that the average prostitute begins selling her body between the ages of 12 and 14. Many of these women face physical dangers from assaults and rape. Some are even murdered in the streets. The great percentage of these women go on to contract sexually transmitted diseases and psychological disorders. To many, this seems like a hopeless situation, but we believe that nothing is hopeless when God enters the picture. No matter what you've done, no matter where you've been, God is able to change your life and turn your life around and give you a new direction, give you new purpose, and heal your broken heart. His love is able to change your life.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, takes us into the lives of women locked up behind prison bars. The life of a woman prisoner is very dangerous. Many of these women will never adapt to so-called normal life because of the traumatic experience they face behind those prison walls. There's a tremendous amount of tension, violence, and fear that women face daily. The percentage of women going to prison has sky rocketed over the last 30 years by 646%, rising from about 15,000 women to over 110,000 women. So many of these women experience physical and sexual abuse while imprisoned. More than one million women are a part of the criminal justice system whether it is through incarceration, probation or parole. Many of these women are mothers or mothers to be at the time of their imprisonment, and 62% of these women have children under the age of 18. These incarcerated women find themselves in a place of regret, depression, physical harm, and sometimes with suicidal thoughts. But the bars of a prison cell are not strong enough to hold back God's grace, love and forgiveness. These are the stories of a few women who were once locked in a prison cell but found the keys to freedom through Jesus Christ.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shares the testimony of a former madame. Prostitution has been an epidemic for thousands of years. In fact, it is considered the world's oldest profession. The lives of those who are prostitutes are greatly affected not only physically but emotionally and mentally. There is another side to the prostitution business. Along, with prostitution comes sex trafficking. Typically, we see men referred to as pimps that handle this side of the business, but on rare occasions, women have decided to step into the business as well. These women pimps, or madams as they are called, handle the money. They transport the call girls and at times get violent to protect their women. This is a problem that is taking place in inner cities around the world. Victory Outreach has seen firsthand the lives of so many who have come out of that lifestyle totally transformed. The message they give to them is that you shall know the truth, the Bible says, and the truth shall set you free. And he who the Son sets free is free indeed.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Major Abe Tamayo, Corps Officer of the Salvation Army in St. Joseph, Missouri. The Salvation Army began in 1865 in London, England under the leadership of William Booth, with a calling to help those who were poverty stricken. In 1880, The Salvation Army came to New York City and in 1886 opened its doors in St. Joseph, Missouri. The Salvation Army, an international movement, is an evangelical part of the Universal Christian Church. Its motivation is the love of God. Its message is based on the Bible. Its mission is to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ and meet human needs in His name without discrimination. The reason they do what they do takes its premise from the founder William Booth, who was an evangelist preaching the Gospel. He is quoted as saying "How can a man hear the Gospel over the grumbling of his own stomach?" which birthed the social service aspect of the Salvation Army. Today they serve in more than 127 countries around the world. Some of the more critical needs in the St. Joseph community are homelessness, poverty, and food necessities. The Salvation Army offers the Booth Center for the homeless community, which provides 24/7 housing and meals. Quality case management is also provided to help rebuild their lives, so they can become self-sufficient and independent once again. Many people are homeless for a variety of reasons such as alcoholism, addictions, mental health issues, and some run into circumstances that are beyond their control, such as a lack of employment, or loss of job. The typical person that is homeless today is not the stereo typical person imagined in movies in times past. They are everyday healthy people in many ways that just need a help up out of their situation to get back on their feet and move forward. Major Abe Tamayo also shared that financial support and the community networking with The Salvation Army, providing counseling services, life skill classes, interaction with other groups and agencies, helping people to fulfill their needs to get them back to a healthy state, is critical to the operation of The Salvation Army. Volunteers are also needed to share the Gospel. The Salvation Army Family Thrift Store receives donated goods and sells them back to the community at a discounted price. The revenue from the thrift store goes back into the program funding to help support services and ministries in the community. Every Sunday The Salvation Army has worship service at 10:45 a.m. and Sunday school at 9:30 a.m. During winter months the "church" opens as a warming center for homeless, or people who are cold, so they can come in and sleep or rest there and receive hot beverages and a meal.

Mark Siegrist, Director of Education at Denver Rescue Mission, talks about challenges for people who don't have their high school diploma. There are many reasons people do not get a high school diploma; some make a decision in their teenage years to drop out of school, others for economic reasons, for bad decisions, for bad habits in their lives, and some think that life is easier out of school than it is in school. One challenge for people who don't have their high school diploma is that a lot of times they have to lie on their job applications stating that they have completed high school. Although they find a way to survive and work through life without a high school diploma, they realize that there is a great need for bettering themselves. However, some people give up on the idea of reaching their GED goals for reasons such as not finding a resource center, a lack of financial resources, other life commitments, or the difficulty of the GED test. As individuals try to find ways to find stability in their life and focus on what the next step is, those in the Denver Rescue Mission Program, receive the resources, support and tutoring necessary to achieve their GED when they make a personal commitment.

Host Anne Ferrell Tata interviews Pastor Janeen McBath, also known as "Lady J," the President and CEO of House of Esther Ministries. The House of Esther has two components: The Transitional Home and the educational facility called the City Center. The transitional home is for young ladies who find themselves in a crisis pregnancy and need a place to go. There they find love and care for themselves and their unborn baby. The city needed a place for mothers who didn't have a place to go and were living in their cars with their children. Young women and young men from the ages of 18 to 25 who do not have an education can go to the City Center for their educational needs and receive training for their GED. The four components at the City Center are Math, Science, English, and Social Studies. Upon completion of the program, there is a full graduation ceremony. Resource classes are also available to provide information about various areas of interest as well as discussions about life. Their children also participate in an educational program with a curriculum and licensed teacher on site. Often young men and young women do not finish school because they have children to care for and daycare is expensive. In addition to an education, transportation and meals are provided at no cost. Through partnerships with various colleges, opportunities are available to continue their education.

Mike Huckabee interviews Cabot Philips, Media Director for Campus Reform, to discuss bias and abuse on the nation's college campuses. Many of our college students do not understand the basics of what it means to be an American, to be an adult, or to have a debate about the issues and not just who is proposing them. All it takes for not being popular on campus is not being a liberal. Presenting ideas to try to get people to think outside the box gets people angry. They try to shut you down. Around the country, many colleges have begun to replace the required history and literature courses with new social justice initiatives. If we're going to fix the problem on our college campuses, it's going to have to start with educating people on the history of our country, the constitution, the first amendment, and how it applies and protects ideas. There is a systematic problem that needs to be addressed. If no one knows what is going on, then no one's doing to care enough to want to fix it. Much of the media doesn't want to cover it because it would acknowledge that it's their own side being intolerant. It's not a partisan issue. The future of our country is something everyone should be concerned with. We should work together across the aisle to defend free speech, to defend ideas, to defend our future.

Mike Huckabee interviews Everett Piper, President of Oklahoma Wesleyan University and Author of "Not a Daycare," to explain "generation snowflake." Piper shares his response to a student's complaint of discomfort after hearing a message on I Corinthians 13, a chapter in the Bible about love is patient and love is kind, which went viral. Our culture is hungry for somebody to confront this nonsense. Oklahoma Wesleyan University is a bold and unapologetic Christian university. So many of our colleges have lost the standard of truth, which used to be the objective of the academy. A degree shouldn't be about opinions. A degree should be about learning what's true. When we abandon truth as the objective, we get chaos, vengeance, and victimization, rather than virtue and veritas; Latin for truth. That's where we are as an academic enterprise today.

On this episode of Somebody's Gotta Do It, Host, Mike Rowe, takes us inside the national competition for Skills USA to find out how they are creating thousands of great careers while keeping the American Dream alive. Skills USA has filled in the gap that was created when Vo-tech vanished from high schools, by establishing a partnership between education and industry. Every year this organization trains over 300,000 students in dozens of skilled trades; welding, baking, and broadcasting, to name a few. At this competition, every competing student has already won a competition at the state level, and now they are competing for scholarships. Each competition lays out specific tasks to be completed within a certain amount of time with the opportunity to be awarded gold, silver, and bronze medallions. We're looking at a shortage of over 250,000 workers in the next ten years of retiring age. Our entire infrastructure is held together by welds, and the people who know how to make them. Right now, a good welder who is willing to go where the work is could pretty much write his or her own ticket. The baking industry is also struggling to find qualified people. While students are coming out of college mired in debt with no guarantee for a job in their field, the students who participate at Skills USA are gaining valuable training that makes them ready for the workforce as soon as they graduate.

700 Club NewsWatch #05012018	CBN	1:00:00	5:00	REC	PA/O/E	05/01/2018	12:00 PM
---------------------------------	-----	---------	------	-----	--------	------------	----------

CBN Reporter Heather Sells Reports: National ministries serving college students have faced some bleak prospects in recent years. After decades of work, just four in ten campuses have been reached and on many of those campuses, university administrators are seeking to push ministries out. Greg Jao, director of external relations for InterVarsity Christian Fellowship/USA, watched the shift come after a pivotal Supreme Court case in 2010. In Christian Legal Society v. Martinez, the court ruled that despite the First Amendment, the University of California's Hastings College of Law could deny recognition to the Christian Legal Society organization on campus because it requires its members to adhere to a statement of beliefs. At the same time, ministries like InterVarsity and Cru, formerly Campus Crusade for Christ, have taken a hard look at the number of campuses they've been able to reach simply because of resources. Of the estimated 3,000 college campuses in the US, just 1,174 have an organized Gospel witness. Shannon Compere, executive director of leadership development at Cru, says one of the challenges has been the relatively slow pipeline employed to place staff. It involves years of planning, training, and fundraising. It's one reason that Cru and InterVarsity have begun to collaborate to reach more campuses. In fact, they've named their new movement #EveryCampus(<http://everycampus.us/>) in a bold attempt to cast a new vision. Tom Allen serves as InterVarsity's regional director for southern California and has spent decades working on creative strategies to reach college students. For years, he said, InterVarsity organized ministry around campus pastors that stayed at one location. Then it moved to a team model where multiple staff served on one campus. Now, both InterVarsity and Cru are shifting to partner with other Christian groups, local churches and individual believers in communities that want to reach their campuses for Christ. Those campuses include community colleges, historically black colleges and online schools and programs. The new paradigm is still emerging in southern California but student leaders Jerry Requena and Tami Chipeco are living out what could be a model. Under the mentorship of InterVarsity staff, Requena and Chipeco have begun to approach students and lead Bible studies at Santa Ana College, an unreached community college in Orange County. Often, they'll simply study the Word with students sitting on benches surrounded by classmates coming and going. Requena, who maintains a demanding work schedule, says when InterVarsity staff first asked him to lead, he hesitated to jump into the new ministry. Then, as he went and observed InterVarsity communities on other campuses and its commitment to Bible study, he became convinced that God was calling him. Chipeco drives about 30 minutes to Santa Ana from her campus and admits to culture shock as an Asian-American serving mainly Latino students at Santa Ana. She also admits that the #Everycampus movement is bold, but says she's driven by a desire to see others know the Lord. Meanwhile, Jao is working on strategies to engage with campus administrators and help them see the value of faith-based groups on campuses. The hope is that more robust relationships will prevent college deans and staff from using non-discrimination policies to de-recognize Christian groups. Often, these policies are used against Christian clubs by claiming that their statements of belief discriminate against students with other beliefs. When Christian clubs lose their recognition on campus, they also lose the ability to reserve room space and recruit members at student activity fairs. Plus, there's a social cost, says Jao. Jao says the long-term consequences of such shifts in campus thinking concern him the most. Ultimately, Jao believes that Christian students involved in derecognized groups are learning deep lessons about discipleship and the cost of following Christ. His advice to them and Christian student organizations, in general, is to develop relationships with campus administrators. For cases in which groups have already been derecognized, it often can turn the situation around. He also advocates Christian groups highlighting their service projects on behalf of the campus and community and asking administrators how they can help them. Jao says one university president, when asked if he would like prayer, started to weep.

Mike Huckabee interviews the leader of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Jim Bridenstine to discuss NASA. We don't understand how dependent we are on space and there are fundamental questions that we don't have answers to. Is there life in the universe beyond planet Earth? NASA is working hard to answer that fundamental question. That is why they are doing missions to Mars. We are a nation of explorers who want to know more and to understand our environment. For the first time, we're reusing rockets. These technologies and capabilities are driving down the costs of access to space.

Cheryl Wilson, Church Relations Manager, of Joni & Friends Arizona talks about families affected by disabilities. The Stratman family and the Hamilton family share their story. There are over 650 million people around the world affected by disability and they are isolated, abandoned, and often put in institutions because they are so stigmatized. People do not accept them. They are not a part of society. If they cannot be a part of society, they are not going to get an education, and eventually they are not going to be able to get a job or support themselves or their families, so they end up being the highest poverty level group as well. In Arizona, approximately twelve percent of the population, (800,000) has disabilities. People with disabilities are the most unreached people group in the world, and the most unchurched because of stigmas. While the divorce rate is about fifty percent for typical families, it goes up exponentially for families affected by disability. Joni & Friends want the church to be so irresistible that people with disabilities want to run to the church and consequently want to run to Jesus. Joni & Friends trains churches on how to make their facilities accessible, how to minister to mom and dad, how to minister to the siblings, how to reach out to the person with the disability, how to deal with the behavioral issues of a child with autism, and how to adapt the curriculum. They want the church to be that refuge and place for families to go to get the support, connection, prayer, and sense of belonging within the Body of Christ, because the church is not complete unless we have families with disabilities serving alongside us. Joni & Friends also provides a family retreat that is a week-long camp-like experience for these families. Volunteers are needed to come and serve those families for a week. God has created us in His own image. We have so much worth and value to our Savior. Every person is indispensable to Jesus.

Host Richard Mansfield interviews Pastor Mike Gomez, Director of U-Turn for Christ New Mexico and Evangeline Gomez, Director of U-Turn for Christ Women's Ranch, to discuss the effects of addiction on families. Many (addicts) ruin their family life, ruin their relationships, ruin their jobs, experience financial loss, lack security, and their children suffer. Often families will either help them or cast them out, but sometimes even join them in their addiction. The children often end up with grandparents, uncles and aunts; bouncing around family, or in worse situations. Addiction has no discrimination, affecting people from all walks of life. U-Turn for Christ New Mexico provides a program based on the Bible, and the offer of restoration, and the offer of forgiveness and new life found in Jesus.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Carl and Beverly Allen, founders of Developing Destiny, Inc. to discuss The Jesus Bus Ministry. Developing Destiny Inc. was inspired by God for the community so that they could be a blessing to the community. Their desire is that no home or no child is without a bed, food, or clothing. In addition, they desire to help people develop their destiny; by recognizing their gifts and becoming who God has truly created them to be. The Jesus Bus provides outreach ministry just about every Saturday, as well as special events. It is really a bus; a studio on wheels. They preach the Word of God, sing the Word of God, Speak the Word of God, and make public announcements throughout the community. Carl and Beverly are continuing the work of Pastor Bryan Turner, the originator of the Jesus Bus, along with his father-in-law. Thousands of souls have been saved through this vehicle.

Host Tori Stamoulis introduces the topic of food insecurity and poverty in Chester, Pennsylvania. Hunger affects nearly 900,000 people in the Delaware valley, especially children and the elderly. City Team believes there is a way to help people respectfully, preserving their dignity. Their purpose is to serve the way Jesus did; filled with compassion, serving humbly and giving opportunity to share hope with people in the mist of painful circumstances. What began as a once weekly community meal has grown into a full kitchen serving three meals a day, 365 days a year. Nancy Craskey, Development Officer, at City Team Chester, explains that breakfast and lunch is served to the men on staff and dinner is served to anyone in the public who needs a meal. On Saturday nights, Hope Café provides a restaurant experience with entrée options like five-star meals. Food is served restaurant style on real china with settings that include tablecloths, center pieces, and menus. Groups such as churches, corporations, or families, come and serve as waiters, waitresses, bus boys, hosts, hostesses, and dishwashers. The goal is to serve guests with dignity, respect, and love. Following dinner, all are welcome to enjoy music and a time of teaching. All volunteers are asked to complete an application, a criminal background check, as well as child abuse clearance. There are a variety of programs such as the Food Program, Mother Baby, and the Adult Clothing Program. Volunteers are encouraged to serve in a program that interests them. City Team Chester serves the homeless community, the working poor, seniors, veterans, families, people with a handicap or illness, or people who are temporarily unemployed, or anyone in a crisis or struggling. Anyone is welcome without explanation and everyone is valued. Through partnerships with local markets, City Team's food pantry has evolved into a grocery store experience with fresh produce. They also distribute food to people without access to grocery stores. Their Second Chance Program provides shelter as well as recovery therapy. Another outreach serves approximately 1,000 families during Christmas, Thanksgiving, and Easter, by delivering food boxes with everything needed to prepare a meal at home, and is paired with a turkey at Christmas and a ham at Easter.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear gripping true stories from mothers who have lost a child without notice to a senseless murder. There's little that is more tragic than the death of a child. The sad fact is that lives are lost every day. Every day, 33 Americans are murdered with guns, and seven of those are children. When the horror of losing a child becomes a reality, the pain can be overwhelming. Not one person grieves the same. Everyone mother grieves differently. These mothers have overcome tragedy and have become overcomers in Christ. Jesus Christ is the answer.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear stories of mothers who have had to live with the harsh reality that their child is sentenced to many years in prison. This topic has affected families from different backgrounds and social status. Every parent has hopes and dreams for their children. When you see them going in the wrong direction and headed for tragedy, most parents can feel helpless. One wrong decision can change a life forever. As a parent, you never dream or even imagine a son or daughter would be sentenced like a caged animal alone in a 5x8 foot cell or having to deal with the pain that your child has little or no hope of being free again. When your child is locked up in a cold prison cell, the pain can be devastating to a mother. But even in the midst of this horrific situation, God has given peace to many of these mothers. A peace that surpasses all understanding. God has been an anchor to these mothers during their time of hardship and turned their pain into hope.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear from a woman who was rescued from a life of gangs, violence and crime. The life of a gang member can be very violent and dangerous at times. From drugs and alcohol to fights and shootouts, gang members constantly risk their lives to defend their neighborhood. We often think of gang members as dangerous men with violent tempers, but they aren't the only ones defending their streets. Over the years, many women have also joined gangs. Many of them join in hopes of finding a sense of belonging, others for protection, and still others just want to be respected. They fight for their gang no matter the cost. These women are very violent and very dangerous. Through a Bible study women's lives have been changed. God has forgiven them, and he who is forgiven much, loveth much.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, takes us into the perilous world of some biker clubs. Over the years, biker gangs have taken on a different persona. They've gone from hanging out on the front porch and handling drugs to now traveling the nation for Multi-Million Dollar drug deals. These bikers can be seen riding their Harley Davidson bikes dressed in leather jackets, but there is more to their lifestyle than meets the eye. The reality is it's a nightmare. They've seen violence, lost friends and family members, and some have even lost their own lives. The life of a biker gang member is very dangerous and unpredictable. To those in law enforcement, these motorcycle clubs are considered organized crime organizations. Motorcycle clubs don't have to be violent and treacherous in their way of life. In fact, a motorcycle club can be a way of sharing the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Riders Out of Darkness Motorcycle Club is full of people who once lived the biker lifestyle but have now been transformed by the power of Jesus Christ. They use their testimonies to impact the lives of those still living that dangerous lifestyle.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Pam Phillips, Senior Vice President of Mission for Bon Secours Hampton Roads, Norfolk, Virginia. The Hampton Roads organization is made up of Bon Secours Maryview Medical Center in Portsmouth, De Paul Medical Center in Norfolk, and Mary Immaculate on the Peninsula in Newport News, and is a partnership with Bernadine Franciscan Sisters. Bon Secours is a faith-based organization that is a ministry of the church focused on serving others. Their CARE-A-VANS are medical mobile units, staffed with physicians, nurse practitioners, and medical technologists, serving an underserved population that would not receive care otherwise, in Hampton, Newport News, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, and Suffolk. Bon Secours partners with churches that allow them to use their common areas for a waiting area and a discharge planning area. The churches help to advertise when they are coming. A monthly calendar is also sent to local agencies and hospitals. The CARE-A-VAN is a primary care practice with the ability to write prescriptions and they know the locations where free or very inexpensive prescriptions are available. Many of their patients often live 200% below the poverty level, are homeless, and are employed, but without insurance. Bon Secours ministers holistically mind, body, and spirit. Their Life Coaches program consists of healthcare professionals housed in their emergency room that see patients without insurance. They also make sure patients have electricity and refer them to agencies to assist them.

Mike Huckabee interviews Dr. Richard Furman, Vascular Surgeon, Author, and Co-Founder of World Medical Mission, the medical arm of Samaritan's Purse, to discuss defeating dementia. There are three stages of Alzheimer's Disease. During stage one a protein develops in the brain twenty years before symptoms appear. Many Americans age 55 to 60 have this protein and don't even know it. Stage two is when symptoms occur. 10 to 20 percent of Americans age 65 have symptoms of Alzheimer's. That rises to 50 percent when you're 85. During stage three one is dependent on others, confined to a wheelchair or bedridden. Modifiable risk factors are exercise, food, and weight.

CBN Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Living in the country may have some advantages, but not if you need a doctor. Shortages in rural areas mean some 90 million Americans can't count on adequate medical care. That's because physicians simply choose to live and work closer to cities. In order to fight that trend, one California county is undertaking a unique plan to attract more doctors. If successful, it could serve as a model for other communities. Compared to patients in big cities, a diagnosis of cancer, heart disease, diabetes and other illnesses can be much worse for people living in rural communities, largely because of doctor shortages there. New doctors typically settle down near the medical school where they completed their residency, the years after getting their M.D. when they train in their chosen field of medicine. Those medical schools are usually located in big cities. That's not the case in Riverside County, California, thanks to a community-based medical school. The University of California Riverside Medical School answered prayers when it opened five years ago because up until that time, the shortage of doctors forced people to either go without medical care or drive all the way to Los Angeles for it. That's why the medical school's primary purpose is to plant doctors in underserved Riverside County. Dr. Lyons believes its new crop of 110 resident physicians will go a long way toward meeting that goal. In addition to location, money is a strong factor in deciding where to put down roots. Many new doctors feel the need to land a high-paying job to pay off their crushing student loan debt, which often tops $2 million. They find higher salaries in big cities. UCR Medical School eliminates that burden by offering free tuition to medical students who stay in the area after completing their training, like student Madeline Sevetre. After growing up in Riverside County, Madeline knows all too well the pain of not having access to medical care. Unlike many medical schools, UCR Medical School doesn't bother with a big, expensive teaching hospital. Resident physicians instead train at already existing health care facilities that are smaller and scattered across the country. Obstetrics resident Dr. Trina Mansour already sees her presence in Riverside County making a difference. Research shows most doctors would like to set up shop near their extended family, if possible. UCR Medical School's admission process takes advantage of that desire. Dr. Douglas Grover, a Riverside County native, graduated from UCR Medical School last year and is currently serving as a resident physician there. As a resident in psychiatry, he feels good about providing mental health services to the area. Another big difference at UCR Medical School compared to others is students start seeing patients in their first year, rather than waiting until their third year. The UCR Medical School students even opened a free clinic for people who otherwise might not have ever seen a doctor. So while medical care disappears in many rural areas, Riverside County, California, may have discovered the antidote: open a medical school, admit locals with a heart for the underserved and pay for the education. . . provided they don't take their talents elsewhere.

CBN Reporter Amber Strong Reports: From parents overdosing in parking lots, to the deaths of the nation's biggest pop stars like Prince and Tom Petty, the fallout from the country's opioid epidemic hits all levels of society. According to the Department of Health and Human Services, overdose deaths, including prescription drugs and heroin, have increased by more than five times since 1999. A killer addiction affecting more than 42,000 people in 2016 alone, which is approximately 116 deaths a day. All reasons President Trump has vowed to break the stranglehold of opioids. Just steps away from the White House stood a memorial of 20,000 faces and lives cut short by opioids. Adams, the new surgeon general, leads a major part of the administration's fight, specifically reducing supply, protecting the border and saving lives. Given his vision of, 'Better Health Through Better Partnerships,' the anesthesiologist is looking beyond the beltway for help. That's because he sees the church playing a major part in the fight. So, the Department of Health and Human Services put out toolkits for churches, encouraging them to open their doors to programs like Narcotics Anonymous and Celebrate Recovery while also pushing the power of prayer. <https://www.hhs.gov/about/agencies/iea/partnerships/opioid-toolkit/index...> Adams, a Maryland native who studied medicine in Indiana, California, and Zimbabwe, believes those experiences help him see the difference between individual communities. Adams made headlines when he issued the first surgeon general advisory in 13 years, a controversial plan to put the overdose-reversing drug Naloxone in the hands of everyday citizens. Critics claim it promotes addiction. Adams says access to Naloxone enables life, not addiction. It's not the first time he's made a tough call. In 2015, an opioid-induced HIV epidemic ripped through Scott County, Indiana. Addicts there were using dirty needles. The end result, 181 confirmed cases due to what many called a slow response from the state. Despite pushback, Adams, as health commissioner at the time, called for a clean needle exchange to curtail the outbreak. Each act showing the belief of this husband and father of three that life has value. The team here at the Surgeon General's office know the battle is more than just a job and that for Dr. Adams, it's personal. Adams believes sharing his own testimony can help others. As the son of two teachers, Adams says his parents always taught him to serve others, now he gets that chance, as the top doctor to a nation in need of a cure.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Hippocrates, the father of medicine, once said, "All disease begins in the gut." Now, 2000 years later, that belief still rings true. Some of our latest medical breakthroughs focus on what's happening in our intestinal system. Bacteria, also known as bugs or germs, we assume they're all bad, right? Not so fast. Scientists recently discovered much, if not most, of the bacteria in our body is good for us. The key to good health depends on having enough of the right kind. We all have trillions of bacteria living in our intestines—hundreds of different species, each with different functions. Scientists call it our "gut flora." Neurologist Dr. David Perlmutter (<http://www.drperlmutter.com/>), author of "Brain Maker," is one of many physicians warning again disrupting this fragile ecosystem. Dr. Vincent Pedre (<http://www.pedremd.com/>), author of "Happy Gut," agrees. Unfortunately, when it comes to good gut bacteria, many of us are sorely lacking. After all, antibiotics kill bacteria – bad and good alike. Perlmutter says most people have no idea how severely antibiotics damage our gut flora. In addition to antibiotics, processed food can also disrupt the gut biome. Perlmutter says processed foods contain heavy doses of the wrong kinds of fat, like heated oils such as soybean, corn and vegetable oils. He also advises against consuming hydrogenated oils, also known as trans fats, which are common in processed foods. However, he points out not all fat is bad. Even babies delivered by Caesarian section can miss out on getting enough good bacteria. So while our lifestyle choices really do a number on the gut bacteria that's so critical to our health, the good news is we can improve it with probiotics and prebiotics. Probiotics are the good bacteria we need and often lack. You can find these living, microscopic organisms in supplements as well as in cultured and fermented foods like kimchi, sauerkraut, yogurt, kefir and kombucha. Prebiotics are the food for the probiotics – they keep probiotics living and growing as they should. Just like good soil, they create a nurturing environment in your gut so your bacteria can thrive. You can get prebiotics in supplement form as well as in foods, like asparagus, onions, leeks, garlic and dandelion greens. Perlmutter says many people are only aware of the benefits of probiotics, but he stresses prebiotics are equally important. Not only can it help your mood – Perlmutter says even serious brain disorders, like attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, autism, even Alzheimer's disease can improve by increasing good bacteria. That's because they help make neurotransmitters and vitamins while at the same time aid in reducing harmful inflammation. And not just the brain. Scientists are now identifying specific strains of good bacteria that treat all kinds of problems, from skin rashes to the flu. That means a targeted probiotic could take the place of a prescribed drug. Pedre says that opens the door to a wide range of natural treatments. So if you want to boost your health, doctors say improve your gut flora. That means avoiding processed foods, even antibacterial cleansers and antibiotics when advisable. Then add good bacteria with probiotics and boost them with prebiotics, also available as supplements or in certain foods.

Host Debrena Jackson Gandy interviews Jeff Lilley, President of Seattle's Union Gospel Mission, to discuss homelessness. Seattle is number three in the nation in terms of its homeless population. New York City is number one and Los Angeles is number two. Seattle's homeless population is increasing. The leading causes of homelessness are addictions; mental health; and criminal justice. When an individual comes out of prison they often don't have a network or support to help them get back into a sustainable life. These primary indicators are compounded by high housing costs. The traditional face of homelessness, an older person that's out on the street, is changing rapidly. More young people are on the streets, and more women, and women with children. In some of the homeless encampments in Seattle, about forty-percent are women, so there is a greater vulnerability there with women and children. Seattle's Union Gospel Mission has found that what works more than anything else is walking alongside individuals, hearing their story, coming up with solutions, and being a part of the healing process that brings their life back to a point where they can thrive, re-engage in healthy relationships and get their life back to where it should be.

Host Tori Stamoulis introduces the topic of homelessness. Pastor Diane Dunne shares how she befriended a homeless woman, and after seeing the conditions she lived in, the Lord showed her that it was wrong if she did nothing, so she decided to do something about it. Starting from just meeting a need, she founded Hope for the Future Ministries. Imagine not being able to bathe, go to the bathroom, sleep peacefully, or have a decent meal. Pastor Diane believes if you can give provide the homeless with good nutrition, love, support, and help them get themselves back together, that's what Jesus would do. That is the heart of God. One of the hardships people face is the escalating cost of food. Even after working two and three jobs, often people simply cannot make ends meet. Providing a nice hot meal makes a difference. A lot of our children graduate from school totally illiterate. What kind of jobs are they going to get? We need to be able to facilitate people to give them job skills and to teach them how to get the interview and how to get the job. Many homeless come out of foster care where no one cared about them. What do you think a person will become if they don't believe in themselves? Hope for the Future Ministries offers Jesus because Jesus teaches them who they are and that they're worth everything to Him. Individuals are mentored and learn skills as they work in the ministry. Those served, as well as volunteers, share the positive impact Hope for the Future Ministries has made in their lives. Many volunteer opportunities are available all week long. On Thursdays the handicapped volunteer. On Friday nights, the Girls Scouts, youth groups, and senior citizens volunteer. Pastor Diane tells people, if you can make a sandwich God can use you. Help is needed to cook, do pickups, load vans, and bag groceries. Drivers are also needed.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Pastor Chuck Aragon of God's Warehouse in Albuquerque, New Mexico to discuss the increase in homelessness. There are many categories of homeless such as the mentally ill, those who have become addicted to drugs and alcohol, and those who have lost a job or lost their home, and they have no place to lay their head at night. Another type of homeless is a person who has no desire to get off the streets because that is their lifestyle. However, there are homeless that are seeking help and want to get off the streets. While the homeless find many places to stay, they are not the most comfortable places. Many homeless stay in parks, abandoned buildings, tent cities, and shelters. Today, with the financial burden on people who own homes and apartments that are rented, they are under stress when the rent is missed, so tenants must move on, which causes a lot of people to be on the street. The homeless that Pastor Aragon sees on the street range in age from 70-year-old grandmas to 15-year-old children. Some of the greatest challenges that the homeless face is not knowing what's going to happen tomorrow; laying in a place at night and hoping that you are safe tonight and will make it through the day; wondering where you are going to find your next meal, or clothes, or a place to take a shower, or even a place to use the facilities. Homelessness is a tough life. The numbers have been increasing every year and the unemployment rate in Albuquerque is at a standstill. Considered a safe haven for the homeless of Albuquerque, where they encounter the love of Jesus Christ, God's Warehouse provides a soup kitchen with homemade meals, clean clothes that have been donated, and the use of phones to reconcile with family members. They also work with other ministries, and Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous to help people function sober in life. Ninety-percent of the volunteers that cook, feed, clothe, pray, hold hands, and hug people, have come off the street themselves; recognizing that if somebody had not helped them they would not be where they are today, so they give back. The heart of God's Warehouse is that love never fails. They also provide the community with food boxes, toy drives, and feed thousands while providing music and entertainment.

Host Tori Stamoulis introduces the topic of homelessness and hunger. Pastor Diane Dunne, Founder of Hope for the Future Ministries, shares how she befriended a homeless woman, and after seeing the conditions she lived in, the Lord showed her that it was wrong if she did nothing, so she decided to do something about it. Starting from just meeting a need, she founded Hope for the Future Ministries. Imagine not being able to bathe, go to the bathroom, sleep peacefully, or have a decent meal. Pastor Diane believes if you can give provide the homeless with good nutrition, love, support, and help them get themselves back together, that's what Jesus would do. That is the heart of God. One of the hardships people face is the escalating cost of food. Even after working two and three jobs, often people simply cannot make ends meet. Providing a nice hot meal makes a difference. A lot of our children graduate from school totally illiterate. What kind of jobs are they going to get? We need to be able to facilitate people to give them job skills and to teach them how to get the interview and how to get the job. Many homeless come out of foster care where no one cared about them. What do you think a person will become if they don't believe in themselves? Hope for the Future Ministries offers Jesus because Jesus teaches them who they are and that they're worth everything to Him. Individuals are mentored and learn skills as they work in the ministry. Those served, as well as volunteers, share the positive impact Hope for the Future Ministries has made in their lives. Many volunteer opportunities are available all week long. On Thursdays the handicapped volunteer. On Friday nights, the Girls Scouts, youth groups, and senior citizens volunteer. Pastor Diane tells people, if you can make a sandwich God can use you. Mike Huckabee talks about immigration and shares a few facts. Of the 12,000 children that have shown up at our border and been placed in protective care, 10,000 of them were separated from their parents, not at the border by way of border patrol, but parents sent them on their own to our border by way of traffickers, paid escorts, and others, to make the journey of hundreds or even thousands of miles unaccompanied by their parents. The reason they were placed in protective care was to keep them out of the hands of human predators and child traffickers who would use them as pawns in the sex slave trade. Since this time last year, there has been a 325% increase in unaccompanied alien children and a 435% increase in family units entering the country illegally. Over the last ten years, there has been a 1,700% increase in asylum claims resulting in an asylum backlog of 600,000 cases because those wishing to get into American have been coached as to what to say to come under the guise of asylum. Most critics offer no solutions. He suggests the following: 1. Media Accuracy. 2. Send illegals back to parents. 3. Churches and faith groups care for displaced children. 4. Clearly defined and enforced border. 5. Congress change the laws. 6. Stop foreign aid to countries sending immigrants.

A former law enforcement officer, and now a pastor, Dr. Allen discusses violent crime in churches. Dr. Allen describes scenarios of opportunities for crime and violence, and expresses that this world isn't as safe as it used to be; something is going to happen whether it's at home, on the street, or inside your church. Dr. Allen describes how to respond in various situations.

Today on Joy in Our Town, Pastor D. Robinson introduces the organization Restore NYC. Chris Muller, Manager of Collaborative Initiatives at Restore NYC, discusses human trafficking, and sex trafficking in New York City. Sex trafficking is happening as exploitation at licensed massage businesses, as a brothel, on street corners, in hotel suites or in store front parlors. Key characteristics of sex trafficking is someone being exploited in slave-like conditions that are usually focused on some form of commercial sex services. Other indicators are the exploitation of a person's documentation, physical or mental abuse, or working without being paid. Statistics show that globally there are 40 million people actively in slavery-like conditions today with more than 25 million in sex trafficking or labor trafficking, and 15 million who are in some form of forced marriage. Here in the U.S., a recent study showed that approximately 18,000 foreign national adults are trafficked into the United States each year. In response to the magnitude of this crime, law enforcement, service providers, defense attorneys, and immigration attorneys are working together to solve the problem of sex trafficking. There are improved practices to go after traffickers as well as those buying and looking to purchase sex services, while coordinating the best care for those who are survivors of this crime. Two of the biggest challenges women face after being trafficked is incredible trauma and getting back to work. Amanda Eckhardt, Ph.D., Director of Programs at Restore NYC, shares that Restore NYC seeks to end sex trafficking in New York and to restore the well being and independence of foreign national survivors of trafficking. They provide crisis intervention, a case management and counseling program, a safe home, and an economic empowering program. God is at center of all that they do. Volunteer opportunities are also available.

Bill Russell, Executive Director and Co-Founder of LifeChange at Union Gospel Rescue Mission talks about substance abuse. Substance abuse affects one in nine Americans. This includes drinking too much alcohol, addiction to opiates, use of central nervous system drugs such as crack cocaine, cocaine, methamphetamine, or marijuana use. When we talk about substance abuse we are talking about people with a life-controlling issue. Substance abuse has a number of collateral problems associated with it. It's not just a private, personal problem. It negatively affects relationships, including marriages and parenting. Divorce rates are higher among substance abusers. A lot of domestic violence and child abuse, or child neglect, is associated with substance abusing parents. There are numerous parts of our society that are performance based. However, statistically, there is a high relapse rate on twenty-eight day treatment programs. There is also a high relapse rate for those who have gone to AA meetings. Any time you put a person on the clock, or under pressure to perform, you are actually exacerbating the condition of their feeling worthless, not up to it, and needing to escape back to drugs and alcohol. You don't just erase a problem from your life, you have to replace it. Participants share their stories. Union Gospel Mission gives people hope when they've tried everything else and nothing has worked. Hope of transformation. Hope of a life change. When an individual comes into LifeChange, they can expect to go through different levels in LifeChange that builds momentum for that hope and recovery. They start slow and keep building through Bible studies, church services, self-evaluations, work therapy, education, and counseling.

Today on Joy in Our Town, Host Dolly Velasquez interviews Allyson Vinzant Lang, Co-Founder of COO of Hope Is Alive Ministries, to discuss the epidemic of addiction. Every day two people are buried due to drug and alcohol overdoses in the State of Oklahoma, which leads the country in prescription pill abuse. The vision for Hope Is Alive Ministries was birthed through Allyson's husband, Lance Lang, who once was a recovering addict. They found there was something missing in the recovery community. People that were just newly sober were often sent back to where they came from. Hope Is Alive Ministries was created as a faith-based resource to offer a safe place for recovering addicts to come live out their calling and use their testimony for a greater purpose in life. Hope Is Alive is the third step in a recovering addicts healing process. The first step is detox. The second step is rehab for 30, 60, or 90 days. Hope Is Alive is the third step where the recovering addict will come and stay with them for eighteen months to allow a holistic treatment of rebuilding every area of their lives; financially, physically, spiritually, emotionally. They offer monthly "Finding Hope Classes" where speakers and licensed counselors teach and coach parents and family members about how not to enable, but to become a part of the solution for their loved one struggling with addiction. Addiction is a family disease and it affects a lot of people in the path that they lead. Hope Is Alive Ministries invites churches to be a part of their church-partnership program. The ministry has grown to ten houses, three of which are for women. Prayer support and household goods are needed.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shows us a home affected by alcoholism and how it impacted a family. Alcoholism has crept into many homes over the years. The pattern of the social drinker turning into an alcoholic has affected many lives to the point that entire families have experienced the pain that comes along with this vicious cycle. Children are among the most damaged by alcoholism. Statistics show that an estimated 6.6 million children live in a household with at least one alcoholic parent. Many of these children develop emotional issues such as guilt, anxiety, anger, and depression. Some often have difficulty building relationships with others, make decisions which lead to violence and crime, and for many, they end up following in the footsteps of their parents. It's a very sad cycle that many families cannot break for generations. However, this family was transformed by the power of Jesus Christ. He's able to change you and your entire family, as well.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear real life stories of people who overcame one the most prominent issues that the world is facing today, heroin and methamphetamine abuse. The use of heroin and meth has taken control of so many lives. It has been reported that an estimated 4.2 million people over the age of 12 have used heroin while 23% of these people become dependent on it. Sadly, more than 50% of all heroin related deaths are people between the ages of 15 and 35. When it comes to meth, an alarming 13 million people over the age of 12 have used meth in the United States alone. Many of these people never live a normal life again, battling with liver, kidney, and lung damage, depression, permanent brain and heart damage, and sometimes even death. Today's society considers it a hopeless case, but that's not necessarily true. In Victory Outreach we believe that no person is too far gone that God can't reach and change their lives.

Host Birga Alden interviews Mary LeQuieu, Executive Director, of Care Net Pregnancy Centers of Albuquerque to discuss teen pregnancy. Restraints have been put on pregnancy centers for advertising their services. Outside their centers, they have to have information which tells people where to go to get government funded abortions. At Care Net, they tell people that that is a legal option, but their approach is that before you make any kind of decision, you need to know what those options look like and what the risks associated look like. Approximately seventy percent of all people seeking an abortion are attending church fairly regularly. About nine percent of the women in a recent study who have had abortions said that the church actually provided for paying for their abortion and encouraged them to have an abortion. Parents love their teenagers, but they don't trust God enough to deal with this situation. When fear enters in and takes over they're looking for a way out. Even if they are strongly pro-life, strongly evangelical, there is a great temptation to sort of salvage the situation, and abortion seems like the easy way out. If pastors are going to ignore it from the pulpit, if youth pastors are not willing to talk about sexual integrity to their teenagers, we will continue to have this problem. Care Net Pregnancy Centers are located in Albuquerque, Rio Rancho, Los Lunas, and Moriarty. Their state of the art medical mobile units offer support at campuses and events, taking services where they are needed and bringing medical services to communities throughout New Mexico. Their life skills training program, called "Earn While You Learn," engages fathers and teaches both parents to overcome the obstacles in their lives. Care Net helps teenagers in every way possible. They do an assessment of their needs to identify their issues, then help them find solutions to those issues. They do a lot to help teenagers delay sexual activity but choose life. There are six training courses each year for new volunteers.

Rhona Mahl, Executive Director & Founder of Braking Cycles, talks about homeless youth. Youth homelessness in Portland is increasing at epidemic proportions. It is no longer hidden but very visible. There is a misconception that youth want to be homeless because they can look edgy and have attitudes. But the truth is, many times they have no other choice. They have been abandoned by their families, or they don't even know who their families are; their parents are incarcerated or on drugs; they are second and third generation homeless; or they are escaping abuse. Youth run to the streets for protection but there are so many dangers out there. They're looking for a place to belong and the streets offer a place for them to belong. They find themselves surrounded by a community, a street family; the gangs, the pimps, the drug lords that embrace them and want them to be a part of their system. They're given a false identity, and the longer they are in that identity the more their true identity is stolen from them. These young people are injured, deeply injured. They are just kids that are just crying out for love. When we talk about homeless people it is not the lack or abundance of homes, it's the lack of human connection. Braking Cycles Coffee and Bike Shop, is used as a tool to reach our youth and as a platform to share the truths about youth homelessness. Transitional Youth is a faith-based non-profit serving homeless and at-risk youth with an outreach in downtown Portland, serving meals and providing clothing. They also have a house in Beaverton and Vancouver, and a working horse ranch in Yacolt, Washington. Transitional Youth is an avenue for young folks to change the direction of their life. Jesus is the answer. Their identity is in Christ.

Host Tori Stamoulis introduces an organization that is reaching the youth today and empowering them to become the leaders of tomorrow; New City Kids of New Jersey. Urban poverty is causing many generational risks such as violence, drugs, lack of education, and abuse. Children who are not involved in after-school programs are fifty percent more likely to get involved with drugs and alcohol. New City Kids helps break the cycle of poverty with a network of after-school programs throughout urban communities. Serving children from first grade to eighth grade, these centers provide a loving, safe, and creative environment filled with music and fun to help children flourish. Local high school students are employed to teach music and to tutor the children. Students are trained, mentored, receive tutoring, and are prayed for every day. As a result, every New City Kids senior hired in the last eight years has graduated from high school and gone on to college. Ninety percent of the New City Kids alumni earned a degree or are on track to graduate. Daymiris Echeverria, Program Director, shares how New City Kids combines the arts, leadership development, faith, and a way to reach kids in the highest need communities all in one place. There are many low-income families, single parent families, and immigrant families whose greatest obstacle is a lack of social support, resources, and positive role models. Many of the children come from the most under resourced school districts and under-performing schools in the city. New City Kids strives to fill that gap and meet the children where they are. The two largest programs are the After School Center and the Teen Life Internship programs. Faith is essential to what they do at New City Kids. Ninety-five percent of the material that the children learn in music class are gospel or Christian songs which they use to play instruments or sing during the weekly worship time. There is also a sermon series that they go through every year. The high school students participate in small groups and Bible studies. Josh Dornbos, Executive Director, shares that, to date, New City Kids has over 160 teens on staff at five locations serving over 300 grade school students each day. He believes that being able to offer life transforming after-school experiences will hopefully change the trajectory of their lives and allow them to escape generational poverty. New City Kids needs champions in the corporate world, churches and our communities, to come alongside the work they are doing and make real lasting change.

Host Vanessa Rose interviews Pastor Dan Brodeur, the Director of The Refuge Youth Center in Phoenix, Arizona, to discuss the challenge of raising kids with a strong biblical worldview while secularism competes to occupy their time through social media, television, music and pop culture. Pastor Brodeur shares that the most critical problems he sees are kids that are indoctrinated by multitudes of resources; from television, to movies, music, books, and literature, all providing a worldview on matters such as love, friendship, life, and assisted suicide, from all over the world without any filter. He believes this causes a tremendous amount of uncertainty, confusion, fear, and a sense of no worth within because they impose the standards that they see on themselves. The CDC released a new study that shows the suicide rate among teenagers has increased tremendously since 2010 and is directly correlated to their phone usage and how much social media they were doing at the time. There is no base root of what is right and what is wrong, so there is no standard. Kids are listening to music and watching videos for nine and ten hours daily, being filled with ideas through social media as opposed to two hours in church. We are seeing kids, ages 19 or 20, leaving their religion, beliefs, and their church, at a tune of 73%. If the church is not willing to address this problem, or willing to invest the time and money to teach kids right from wrong, or the Word of God, the world will. Kids are learning. It just depends on who is teaching. The Refuge Youth Center is open six days a week providing multiple church services, Bible study, middle school and high school services, and many other activities that are Christ-centered. The teach the kids that if they really want to change the course of their life for the better, they need to start by having a relationship with Jesus.

Pastor David Beidel of New Hope Community Church and President of Urban Hope NYC discusses how he and his wife have served the West Brighton and New Brighton communities of Staten Island for twenty-five years. The area was once known as "Wild Wild West Brighton" with a cross street referred to as "Murder Alley" or "Bloody Brighton," which had the second highest murder rate in New York City in a census block. The community was dense with violence and gang rivalry creating a dangerous and traumatic environment for the children. Urban Hope NYC was created to provide a sanctuary. On Friday nights, children are served a home cooked meal and have devotionals. Their after-school program offers children help with their homework, music classes, cooking classes, and gardening three days a week. Summer camp is a free six-week program providing eight hours each day for children to participate in games, arts and crafts, songs, and the word of God. Youth groups volunteer for a week of camp and just "love bomb" the children. Youth and members of the community share how Urban Hope NYC has impacted their lives for the better.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shows us the lives of a few people who suffer from child abuse and how God was able to heal all of their wounds. The harsh reality is that one in every five girls, and one in every 20 boys, are victims of child abuse. Many of these abused children grow up with psychological complexes and a poor self-image. More and more we see the news and hear how dangerous it is for our children. They are not even safe in their own schools. Psalms 147:3 says "He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds." What seems impossible to men is possible for God. Society says there is no hope for any of these innocent victims. But God not only heals the physical sickness and disease, but God can heal the heart and the mind and the emotions.
