Detailed Description: There's a lot you can do in 10 minutes; make coffee, fix your kids lunch, scramble some eggs for breakfast and that's all the time a burglar needs to break into your home to steal your personal treasures and everything you've worked hard for. To avoid becoming a victim of a break-in, you need to think like a criminal. Front, unlocked doors and windows are the number one way burglars are getting into homes. Invest in a solid front door, good locks and don't forget the weakest point of your house: your garage. What are the burglars after? The laptop lands at the top of the list. Take it with you when you leave, keep it in a safe place or find a really good hiding spot. Over the past year, most burglars have been working in the evening hours, between 8pm and midnight. Day or night, burglars hate man's best friend the most.

Detailed Description: NewsChannel 9 is counting down the sneakiest scams around, known as the Notorious 9. At #4 – caller ID spoofing. They may pose as a business, or police. The BBB is aware of cases in which the scammers claim there's a warrant for your arrest and demand that you pay a fine to avoid criminal charges. If things don't sound right on the phone, don't trust the number on your caller ID is correct. Hang up and call the company directly. #3 is phony account emails. They're sneaky because they try to look like they're from real companies or banks. The emails may look like invoices or an alert that you need to check or update your account information. It's a common way for criminals to try and steal your personal information. And #2 on our list is the grandparent scam. The scammers try to trick unsuspecting elderly people into thinking their grandchild is in trouble and then demand money.

Detailed Description: Some of us may be dreading winter, but Central New York snowmobilers can't wait for the first snowfall. With close to $1 billion in annual revenue for New York, the sport is vital to our economy. The Executive Director of the NYS Snowmobile Association says the importance is often overlooked. He says every time you see a snowmobile go by, it's $75 in economic activity that goes by with each ride.

The sport took a dip during the 2008 economic crisis, but has been steadily recovering. Last year, for the first time in more than a decade, snowmobile sales rose over 11%, in American and Canada combined.

Detailed Description: It's a lesson that could save the life of someone you know. Thousands die each year because they don't receive CPR in time. Now, proposed legislation is pushing to make training part of your child's high school education. Every year, 400,000 people suffer out-of-hospital cardiac arrests and only 10% survive, but this bill hopes to change that, by training future generations to save lives. If passed, learning hands-on CPR and how to use a defibrillator would be incorporated into high school curriculum.

Detailed Description: Job cuts and tax hikes: two options on the table right now as part of Cayuga County's 2015 budget proposal. Legislators still have to vote on the spending plan, but say cuts are needed to keep the counties finances in line. The $140 million proposed spending plan calls for a property tax increase of 1.5%. 30 county positions are on the chopping block and include both full and part-time jobs. Legislators have three options. They can adopt the plan as-is, raise property taxes by nearly 6% to keep all jobs in place or balance the budget using a mixture of taxpayer dollars, county funds and the elimination of only 10 jobs. Leaders also plan to look at other under-used revenue sources like mortgage or motor vehicle tax before making a final decision. A preliminary plan will go up for a vote November 25th. As for voter input, a public hearing will be held in December.

Instead of taking the five traditional tests, kids would be allowed to swap out one of those exams for another assessment in arts, another language or a vocational skill. Teachers at OCM Boces say the option is a welcome change. They say it gives students focused on a vocational career another way to obtain their Regents credit, and raise graduation rates statewide. The change still has to be approved by the Board of Regents in January. The new testing options would be available to students who started their freshman year in or after September 2011. Those students need to have passed four of the required regents exams.

Detailed Description: While Central New Yorkers were heading to the polls, a scary situation was unfolding near Cicero Elementary School. The North Syracuse School District was notified that a man with a gun could be in the area. Students and teachers were ordered to "stay in place" – but voters were still able to walk in and out of the school, an official polling place, to cast their ballots. Parents we spoke with were concerned, wondering why the high school went into full lockdown, and the elementary school did not. Some are now pushing the district to consider closing school on election day next year or giving students a half day.

Detailed Description: Political experts say the race for the 24th Congressional District seat may be one of the most expensive and most competitive races in the country. Incumbent democrat, Dan Maffei and republican John Kakto are both vying for the seat. So far, Dan Maffei has raised more than $2.3 million and Katko has raised more than $726,000. That's according to the Federal Election Commission, which also shows how much money supporting each candidates comes from political action committees, outside of CNY. Just under 54% of Maffei's money came from Political Action Committies, compared to 13.5% of PAC money funding Katko. Many of the political ads you see for the candidates are not only negative, but focused on national issues. Cazenovia College professor, John Robert Greene, say it's because that's who is paying for them.

Detailed Description: On ballots, voters will find three statewide propositions. Prop 1 is a constitutional amendment to revise the redistricting procedure for statewide and congressional districts. Instead of the six member legislative task force that draws the districts now, Prop 1 would have a 10 member commission. 8 of those people would be appointed by legislative leaders. Then that group would pick the remaining two. After holding hearing 12 hearings, the commission would submit a plan. If the legislature rejects that plan twice, it could then amend it. Most people agree a change has to happen to how these lines are drawn, but not everyone thinks this is the right way to do it.
