"The Genius of Marian" is a visually rich, emotionally complex story about one family's struggle to come to terms with Alzheimer's disease. After Pam White is diagnosed at age 61 with early-onset Alzheimer's, life begins to change, slowly but irrevocably, for Pam and everyone around her. Her husband grapples with his role as it evolves from primary partner to primary caregiver. Pam's adult children find ways to show their love and support while mourning the gradual loss of their mother. Her eldest son, Banker, records their conversations, allowing Pam to share memories of childhood and of her mother, the renowned painter Marian Williams Steele, who had Alzheimer's herself and died in 2001. By Banker White and Anna Fitch. Official Selection of the 2013 Tribeca Film Festival.

Doctors and End-of-Life Discussions (Originally published: January 15, 2016): Many hospital patients who don't express their end-of-life wishes receive aggressive treatments that even their doctors say they wouldn't want for themselves. According to Dr. Phil Pizzo, dean emeritus of Stanford University School of Medicine, 80 to 95 percent of doctors say "they want to die outside the hospital. They want to die at home. They want to have their family around them. They don't want to be on life support systems." Yet most doctors never have honest end-of-life discussions with their patients. Dr. VJ Periyakoil, director of palliative care education and training at Stanford University School of Medicine, has created the Stanford Letter Project to help patients and families express for their doctors what matters most to them at the end of life.

Payday Lenders (Originally published: August 28, 2015): This week the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau proposed new rules to crack down on the payday loan industry. Store-front lenders promising easy money are a familiar sight in poor neighborhoods, and nationwide, about 12 million Americans spend more than $7 billion on payday loans each year. Payday loans offer quick access to cash when banks or credit unions can't help, and the very poor who need the money often find they have no other recourse. But critics, among them church leaders, say the practice is predatory and forces debt on those who are least able to afford it. Now churches have started programs to help the poor escape their debt. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from Birmingham, Alabama on lenders who target and trap the most vulnerable

Store-front lenders promising easy money are a familiar sight in poor neighborhoods, and nationwide, about 12 million Americans spend more than $7 billion on payday loans each year. Payday loans offer quick access to cash when banks or credit unions can't help, and the very poor who need the money often find they have no other recourse. But critics, among them church leaders, say the practice is predatory and forces debt on those who are least able to afford it. Now churches have started programs to help the poor escape their debt. The General Election Begins: Clinton clinches nomination, Obama endorses and Trump criticized by GOP leaders: Hillary Clinton made history this week becoming the first woman presumptive presidential nominee of a major political party. Her campaign also rolled out the endorsements of high-profile Democrats including President Obama and Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren. Her primary rival Bernie Sanders emerged from a meeting with Obama and is continuing to campaign ahead of Tuesday's primary in Washington, DC. Meanwhile, presumptive Republican nominee Donald Trump was criticized by Republican leaders for his comments about the judge presiding over lawsuits against Trump University. House Speaker Paul Ryan called Trump's remarks the "textbook definition of a racist comment." Trump said his comments were "misconstrued" and shifted the tone of his public remarks.

"The Genius of Marian" is a visually rich, emotionally complex story about one family's struggle to come to terms with Alzheimer's disease. After Pam White is diagnosed at age 61 with early-onset Alzheimer's, life begins to change, slowly but irrevocably, for Pam and everyone around her. Her husband grapples with his role as it evolves from primary partner to primary caregiver. Pam's adult children find ways to show their love and support while mourning the gradual loss of their mother. Her eldest son, Banker, records their conversations, allowing Pam to share memories of childhood and of her mother, the renowned painter Marian Williams Steele, who had Alzheimer's herself and died in 2001. By Banker White and Anna Fitch. Official Selection of the 2013 Tribeca Film Festival.

Why hiring is at five-year low and the economy is stalling: According to a new report from the Labor Department, U.S. hiring fell to a five year low in May, with just 38,000 new jobs. Even if those numbers are off, the last quarter shows a similarly disturbing trend: 115,000 jobs added per month, an abnormal drop during this long period of recovery. Hari Sreenivasan talks to David Wessel of the Brookings Institution about why the economy is slowing down.

Can earthquake-stricken Nepal eliminate brick industry's reliance on child labor? Heavy lifting is a way of life in Nepal. But the 250,000 workers -- many of them children -- manning the Himalayan country's brick kilns suffer on a different level, toiling in terrible conditions and earning less than one cent per brick. In collaboration with the Christian Science Monitor, special correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on efforts to reform Nepal's critical brickmaking industry.

Payday Lenders (Originally published: August 28, 2015): This week the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau proposed new rules to crack down on the payday loan industry. Store-front lenders promising easy money are a familiar sight in poor neighborhoods, and nationwide, about 12 million Americans spend more than $7 billion on payday loans each year. Payday loans offer quick access to cash when banks or credit unions can't help, and the very poor who need the money often find they have no other recourse. But critics, among them church leaders, say the practice is predatory and forces debt on those who are least able to afford it. Now churches have started programs to help the poor escape their debt. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from Birmingham, Alabama on lenders who target and trap the most vulnerable

Around the Masaya Volcano in Nicaragua, life has struggled for thousands of years to re-emerge from the ashes. Underground, vampire and other bat species have colonized the miles of tunnels created by hot flowing magma. In the crater, parakeets and vultures have made nests on cliffs exposed to toxic gases. On the flanks of this still active mountain, the vegetation has been burnt away by lava flows leaving barren stretches that are recolonized over hundreds of years. At the foot of the volcano, fields, pastures and towns have grown over the oldest lava flows. In this harsh environment, nature struggles to conquer ash and lava before the next eruption erases its efforts ... and the phoenix must rise again.

In 2010, epic earthquakes all over the planet delivered one of the worst annual death tolls ever recorded. The deadliest strike was in Haiti, where a quake just southwest of the capital, Port-au-Prince, killed more than 200,000, reducing homes, hospitals, schools, and the presidential palace to rubble. In exclusive coverage, a NOVA camera crew follows a team of US geologists as they first enter Haiti in the immediate aftermath of the tragedy. It is a race against time as they hunt for crucial evidence that will help them determine exactly what happened deep underground and what the risks are of a new killer quake. Barely a month after the Haiti quake, Chile was struck by a quake 100 times more powerful, unleashing a tsunami that put the entire Pacific coast on high alert. In a coastal town devastated by the rushing wave, NOVA follows a team of geologists as they battle aftershocks to measure the displacement caused by the earthquake. Could their work, and the work of geologists at earthquake hot-spots around the U.S., one day lead to a breakthrough in predicting quakes before they happen? NOVA investigates intriguing new leads in its gripping investigation of a deadly scientific conundrum.

Doctors and End-of-Life Discussions (Originally published: January 15, 2016): Many hospital patients who don't express their end-of-life wishes receive aggressive treatments that even their doctors say they wouldn't want for themselves. According to Dr. Phil Pizzo, dean emeritus of Stanford University School of Medicine, 80 to 95 percent of doctors say "they want to die outside the hospital. They want to die at home. They want to have their family around them. They don't want to be on life support systems." Yet most doctors never have honest end-of-life discussions with their patients. Dr. VJ Periyakoil, director of palliative care education and training at Stanford University School of Medicine, has created the Stanford Letter Project to help patients and families express for their doctors what matters most to them at the end of life.

The General Election Begins: Clinton clinches nomination, Obama endorses and Trump criticized by GOP leaders: Hillary Clinton made history this week becoming the first woman presumptive presidential nominee of a major political party. Her campaign also rolled out the endorsements of high-profile Democrats including President Obama and Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren. Her primary rival Bernie Sanders emerged from a meeting with Obama and is continuing to campaign ahead of Tuesday's primary in Washington, DC. Meanwhile, presumptive Republican nominee Donald Trump was criticized by Republican leaders for his comments about the judge presiding over lawsuits against Trump University. House Speaker Paul Ryan called Trump's remarks the "textbook definition of a racist comment." Trump said his comments were "misconstrued" and shifted the tone of his public remarks.

Payday Lenders (Originally published: August 28, 2015): This week the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau proposed new rules to crack down on the payday loan industry. Store-front lenders promising easy money are a familiar sight in poor neighborhoods, and nationwide, about 12 million Americans spend more than $7 billion on payday loans each year. Payday loans offer quick access to cash when banks or credit unions can't help, and the very poor who need the money often find they have no other recourse. But critics, among them church leaders, say the practice is predatory and forces debt on those who are least able to afford it. Now churches have started programs to help the poor escape their debt. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from Birmingham, Alabama on lenders who target and trap the most vulnerable

Doctors and End-of-Life Discussions (Originally published: January 15, 2016): Many hospital patients who don't express their end-of-life wishes receive aggressive treatments that even their doctors say they wouldn't want for themselves. According to Dr. Phil Pizzo, dean emeritus of Stanford University School of Medicine, 80 to 95 percent of doctors say "they want to die outside the hospital. They want to die at home. They want to have their family around them. They don't want to be on life support systems." Yet most doctors never have honest end-of-life discussions with their patients. Dr. VJ Periyakoil, director of palliative care education and training at Stanford University School of Medicine, has created the Stanford Letter Project to help patients and families express for their doctors what matters most to them at the end of life.

In 2010, epic earthquakes all over the planet delivered one of the worst annual death tolls ever recorded. The deadliest strike was in Haiti, where a quake just southwest of the capital, Port-au-Prince, killed more than 200,000, reducing homes, hospitals, schools, and the presidential palace to rubble. In exclusive coverage, a NOVA camera crew follows a team of US geologists as they first enter Haiti in the immediate aftermath of the tragedy. It is a race against time as they hunt for crucial evidence that will help them determine exactly what happened deep underground and what the risks are of a new killer quake. Barely a month after the Haiti quake, Chile was struck by a quake 100 times more powerful, unleashing a tsunami that put the entire Pacific coast on high alert. In a coastal town devastated by the rushing wave, NOVA follows a team of geologists as they battle aftershocks to measure the displacement caused by the earthquake. Could their work, and the work of geologists at earthquake hot-spots around the U.S., one day lead to a breakthrough in predicting quakes before they happen? NOVA investigates intriguing new leads in its gripping investigation of a deadly scientific conundrum.

World Bank creates new fund to enable faster disaster response: When the Ebola outbreak struck West Africa in 2014, it took months for international agencies to funnel money into the affected areas. Eventually, more than 11,000 people died and the economic cost topped $10 billion. Now, the World Bank is creating a fast-disbursing fund to combat pandemics as soon as they unfold. Hari Sreenivasan talks to bank president Jim Yong Kim to learn more.

Packing Meals for the Hungry (Originally published: December 18, 2015):
Churches across the country have been taking part in a special project for the charity Stop Hunger Now by sending non-perishable meals to children in poverty-stricken areas of the world. We visited Grace Community Church in Arlington, Virginia, where senior pastor John Slye said of those who were packing the meals, "Instead of hearing a sermon, they come here and be the sermon."

A resurgence for the 'Mother Road': revitalizing Route 66: U.S. Route 66, running 2,400 miles from Chicago to Santa Monica, was once one of the most-traveled highways in the nation; John Steinbeck referred to it as the "Mother Road." But the rise of the Interstate Highway System led to a loss of traffic, devastating communities that relied on the route's travelers. Now, Route 66 is making a comeback, thanks to its storied past. Jeffrey Brown reports.

"The Genius of Marian" is a visually rich, emotionally complex story about one family's struggle to come to terms with Alzheimer's disease. After Pam White is diagnosed at age 61 with early-onset Alzheimer's, life begins to change, slowly but irrevocably, for Pam and everyone around her. Her husband grapples with his role as it evolves from primary partner to primary caregiver. Pam's adult children find ways to show their love and support while mourning the gradual loss of their mother. Her eldest son, Banker, records their conversations, allowing Pam to share memories of childhood and of her mother, the renowned painter Marian Williams Steele, who had Alzheimer's herself and died in 2001. By Banker White and Anna Fitch. Official Selection of the 2013 Tribeca Film Festival.
