Topic 1 / Length / Summary: 6:30 for all segments:

This is a special show on Race Relations as they coincide with Policing. It's a special effort to draw solutions from the debate and unify amid unprecedented racial tensions around the country related to the officer- involved shootings around the country.

Is it TIME to have a frank discussion of healing? Should young African American males need to feel anxious when a police officer approaches, should a woman feel anxious seeing a young man near her car at the mall, should an officer approach an African American male differently than a white male in traffic stop? Should mental health services be beefed up? Should there be a greater emphasis on verbal de-escalation when officers are involved with suspects of all kinds and African American suspects in particular (in the context of Black Lives Matter protestors who contend racism plays a role in the tensions.) Are officers getting involved in community relations to try to calm tensions? Should there be "after-action" reports following all law enforcement
