ANJ Sunday 4-2-22

Family Focus Mental Health: "Youth in Distress - Coming Out of the Darkness"

Airtime: 11:30 PM

TRT 21:16

Hosts: Dawn Lopez, Chandler Morgan, Phil Amato

Seg 1 – Courtney Cole reports on student mental health challenges.

Interviews: Mia Holloway, 17, a DCPS student; Ally Boatwright, a UNF student; Dr. Andrew King, Baptist Behavioral Health. Students whine about how "hard" and "sad" it is being quarantined and not seeing their friends or classmates regularly. Dr. King confirms it's socially alienating, but advises kids need to toughen up and deal with it because distance is the new normal.

Seg 2 – Tenikka Hughes reports on the impact of Covid-19 on very young children. Studies reported by "Nature" magazine supported that covid affects juvenile brains, resulting in impaired motor skills and cognitive abilities, a condition called the "Pandemic Dip."

Interviews: Elaine Petry, daughter Elan had cognitive/processing issues. Medical and academic assessments with the Brain Balance Center in Bartram Park, in conjunction with therapies, helped Elan recover from impairments. She is now participating in regular 1st grade classes.

Seg 3 – Jake Stofan reports on the rapidly growing need for resources handling inpatient behavioral health in the wake of Covid-19.

Interviews: Michael Aubin, Wolfson Children's Hospital; Eileen Briggs, Chief Development Officer at Sulzbacher; Melanie Brown-Woofter, Florida Behavioral Health Association; Dr. Vicki Waytowich Executive Director for Partnership of Child Health. The frequency of juvenile outpatient mental health visits is up +200%, meaning it can take months to get an appointment. Also, there are limits on the amount of available beds, programs, and services. On top of that, there are a limited number of available professionals, limited resources to hire more, and because mental health is compensated differently by insurance, hospitals often eat the cost for outpatient mental health, so hospitals limit their liability.

Seg 4 – Meghan Moriarty reports on a student lead middle school club in Douglas Anderson that is improving mental health among students.

Interviews: Kathy Anderson, Douglas Anderson School Counselor; Cynthia Jackson, student. Students at DA developed a "support group" for coping with Covid-19 isolation. She tells us that while she was isolated with her family during Covid-19 the club allowed her an alternative way to meet and socialize with others.

ANJ Sunday 4/23/2022

Airtime: 11:30 PM

TRT 10:37

Host: Chandler Morgan

Seg 1 Stories

Ben Ryan: The Florida DOH opposes social gender transitions treatment for minors under 18, including the use of puberty blocking or hormone therapy medication. Interviews: Dr. Lynn Waddleton, First Coast Therapy Group, argues that government intervention is overgeneralizing, and individual cases should be considered as individuals based on their own experiences and medical/psychological evaluation, not political judgment.

5. Crime

ANJ Sunday 5/14/22

Airtime: 11:30 PM

TRT 12:44

Host: Chandler Morgan

Seg 1

Jake Stofan follows a developing story on juvenile justice reform. Misdemeanors can be expunged, felony records are more difficult to dismiss. Advocates say it gives offenders a 2nd chance, critics point out it sets unfair standards and promotes criminal recidivism by not punishing offenders to begin with, so they escalate their crimes. Interviews: Elvin Martinez, Florida Juvenile Justice Association; State Senator Keith Perry.

Seg 2

Meghan Moriarty reports on human trafficking in Jacksonville. A survivor recounts her experiences from 20 years before, when she and two friends were captives and subjected to various abuses for over a month. Now, the victim has become a safety advocate. Interviews: Nicole McCall.
