TOPIC: DUVAL TAX COLLECTOR'S OFFICE SEEKS MORE STAFF

As the City Council Finance Committee works through the \$1.2 billion City budget proposal from Jacksonville Mayor Lenny Curry, not many departments have asked for much, beyond what the proposal puts forward. During a budget hearing last week, though, the Tax Collector's Office said they need to turn around years of cutbacks.

Chief Administrative Officer Sherry Hall says they had 244 full time positions in 2010, but are down to 226 now, with many of the cuts coming because of the economic downturn. In that same time frame, she says their transaction volume has risen 11%.

"We're to the point now where, although we're constantly trying to improve our efficiencies, improve the service level, where we need to slowly start adding back in some of those positions," Hall says.

Grants for community groups fighting violence, a vacuum truck to drain inlets, and renovations to bring more services to the Sulzbacher Center are just some of the budget enhancements the City Council Finance Committee has made, as they wind down their process of reviewing Mayor Lenny Curry's \$1.2 billion City budget proposal.

As the Committee vetted the budget with the City Council Auditor's Office, they changed some financial assumptions and fixed some accounting points, ultimately freeing up $877,331 in uncommitted funds. Also through this process, Council members have heard requests from various departments and organizations about funding or items they want that did not make the Mayor's proposal. Those were put on a list of "enhancements", along with requests from the Council members themselves, for a total of 16 items for $1,614,250, with some of that funding being recurring dollars. On Thursday, they decided on six projects to get the funds.

Topic: Supervisor of Elections to Open Early Voting at Two College Campuses

August 24, 2018 8:49 PM

Duration: 8 minutes

Jacksonville, FL - As early voting winds down across the First Coast for the Florida primary, Duval County's Supervisor of Elections is vowing to try to open early voting sites on two college campuses for the November election.

And he says he doesn't need more funding to do it.

A recent court ruling allows college campuses to now be used for early voting sites in Florida, but does not require it. There has been a passionate push in the community to add the locations, despite there not being a mandate. With an early voting site right across the street from Jacksonville University, the focus of the push has been the University of North Florida and Edward Waters College.

"Putting in two new sites, in the middle of two elections, is a logistical nightmare," says Duval County Supervisor of Elections Mike Hogan.

During a City Council Finance Committee hearing on the Supervisor's budget, Hogan told Council members that the request from people in the community and some on Council has led him to pull some staff from focusing on the ongoing election, to start studying this issue. Based on the general metrics they use- population density, growth, and related areas- he says they don't believe there is a need for a new early voting site, except potentially the Bayard area. Despite that, he says they've been working on the potential to establish early voting on the two campus locations for the November election.
