5	Health/Healthcare – OC Cancer Rates	12:29PM	03/12/2024	115 Seconds	12PM News	City of Hope Orange County, part of the country’s largest cancer research and treatment organization, will bring together cancer patients, physicians, and county public health experts to reveal findings about the cancer incidence rate in people ages 18-49 in Orange County and Southern California, amid a national epidemic of early-onset cancer diagnoses. Historically, cancer has been connected to aging. But the incidence of cancer among people under 50 around the world is projected to increase by 31% in 2030. Sedentary lifestyles and consumption of processed foods and alcohol are likely contributing factors. Another factor is young adults lacking access to screenings, often because they or their physicians believe cancer is associated with older age.
