Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality—not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart.

How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years.

Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart discusses the findings with Yves Daccord, director-general of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports.

What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart.

'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports.

What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 4, people mourn the death of Cuban communist leader Fidel Castro in the city of Santiago at his funeral. Later, a new documentary recounts how Rwanda was the first country to prosecute mass rape as a war crime in international court. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more.

Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schiffrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba.

Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart.

Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart.

How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years.

Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart discusses the findings with Yves Daccord, director-general of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports.

What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart.

'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

Three reasons little kids shouldn't play football: Keith Strudler wants to see the end of football played by very young children -- and not just because of the danger of concussions. He argues that the sport teaches kids to act rough and selfish, as well as that masculinity is strength, while femininity is cheering from the sidelines. Older players are able to separate the sport from life, he says, but for younger ones, that's not easy.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

Is crumbling infrastructure inhibiting American productivity? In recent decades, American productivity growth has slowed. Yale University's Jacob Hacker has a possible explanation: the country's outdated and deteriorating infrastructure. Hacker, co-author of "American Amnesia," argues the U.S. has forgotten the role government plays in engineering prosperity, and that public investment got us where we are today. Economics correspondent Paul Solman reports.

A narrow frontier between warm and cold latitudes extends 500 miles from the Alaskan mainland, separating the tempestuous Bering Sea from the Pacific: the Alaska Peninsula, a cloud-cloaked land of active volcanoes, rolling tundra and the greatest concentration of the largest bears on earth. The writings of naturalist Loren Eiseley inspire this cinematic essay on a landscape where bears outnumber people and the sockeye salmon run is the most prolific in the world. At the base of the peninsula lies Katmai National Park, a wilderness larger than Yellowstone and Yosemite — combined. Farther down the peninsula, a giant volcanic caldera emerges on the horizon, so remote that more people climb Everest than visit Aniakchak National Monument. Alaska is warming at more than twice the rate of the rest of the planet. In KATMAI: ALASKA'S WILD PENINSULA, filmmaker John Grabowska profiles the remote Alaska Peninsula and asks how climate change will affect this magnificent land of wilderness and wildlife.

Hear the story of the world-famous Lipizzaner stallions, from their origins in ancient times to the almost unknown drama of their rescue in 1945. The film, which focuses on the bond that develops between horse and rider, begins at the Spanish Riding School in Vienna. Here the perfect harmony between horse and rider, as well as the beauty and power of the magnificent white stallions, is celebrated in their impressive performance. Their carefully choreographed movements were originally intended for war. Then, only the strongest and most athletic of the horses were chosen. The Lipizzaner stallion was bred for its courage, strength and character, but the horse is also gentle, sensitive and exceptionally responsive to praise.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality—not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

A history of the American war on weed: On November 8, multiple states legalized marijuana for medical or recreational purposes -- so Joe Dolce's new book on the substance's history in the U.S. is timely. Dolce argues marijuana's bad reputation is a result of political demonization, including an intentional name change and association with hippies and disorder. This is his Brief but Spectacular take on the past and future of cannabis.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart.

How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years.

Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart discusses the findings with Yves Daccord, director-general of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more.

Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba.

Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart.

Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. HITMAKERS is an up-close look at the music industry's resilience in the digital age, from the perspective of groundbreaking artists, music label mavericks and game-changing managers. These crucial players have shaped the music business over the past 100 years, changing pop culture in the process. Today's artists challenge the paradigm further, taking control of their careers and sometimes shucking the system altogether to record and release music on their own. Record labels large and small also have found they must innovate to thrive. Entertaining and thoughtful, HITMAKERS boasts an unforgettable soundtrack. The special features interviews and performances from notable artists such as Melissa Etheridge, The Roots' Questlove, Sharon Jones, rising DJ/producer Steve Aoki and many more.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality—not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality—not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 3, a deadly fire engulfs a warehouse party in Oakland, California in what officials call a “mass casualty event,” and President-elect Donald Trump reaches out to world leaders, disrupting diplomatic protocol. Later, learn how newly restored diplomatic ties between the U.S. and Cuba have slowly boosted trade. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

Populist politics play out in Austria’s presidential election: In Europe, anti-establishment, populist political parties are on the rise, a development playing out as Austrians prepare to select their next president on Sunday. The race pits the left-leaning independent candidate Alexander Van Der Bellen against Norbert Hofer, the leader of the right-wing Freedom Party. Francois Murphy, bureau chief for Reuters in Vienna, joins Alison Stewart to discuss.

Italian vote could amend post-war constitution: Italians on Sunday will vote on a referendum to amend their post-World War II constitution, a move aimed at alleviating years of gridlock in the country’s central government by strengthening the office of the prime minister. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay joins Alison Stewart from Rome to discuss the referendum and its potential impact on the the European Union.

Embargo remains for some Cuba sectors, as trade grows slowly: In 2014, after a five-decade freeze, President Obama announced the U.S. would begin re-establishing diplomatic ties with Cuba. But last week’s passing of former Cuban leader Fidel Castro is a reminder that the U.S. embargo remains in effect for most economic sectors while Cuba’s government has been slow to approve new deals. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 4, people mourn the death of Cuban communist leader Fidel Castro in the city of Santiago at his funeral. Later, a new documentary recounts how Rwanda was the first country to prosecute mass rape as a war crime in international court. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more.

Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba.

Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart.

Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. “The Uncondemned,” in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend’s Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart.

How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years.

Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart discusses the findings with Yves Daccord, director-general of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports.

What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart.

'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

Three reasons little kids shouldn't play football: Keith Strudler wants to see the end of football played by very young children -- and not just because of the danger of concussions. He argues that the sport teaches kids to act rough and selfish, as well as that masculinity is strength, while femininity is cheering from the sidelines. Older players are able to separate the sport from life, he says, but for younger ones, that's not easy.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality—not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

Hour one examines how Judaism and the Roman empire shaped Jesus' life. Jesus was an ordinary Jewish resident of his time, but new archaeological findings show that Jesus was probably not the humble village peasant often portrayed. Nazareth, where he grew up, was about four miles from the cosmopolitan urban center of Sepphoris, one of the Roman provincial cities. While Rome defined one dimension of Jesus' world, the other was symbolized by the great Temple in Jerusalem. Jesus was born, lived, and died a Jew, and he was influenced by the diversity and tensions of Judaism at that time. Jesus was most likely arrested and executed by Roman authorities whose principal concern was to keep peace in the empire. Rome had little tolerance for those it judged disruptive of the Pax Romana (Roman peace), punishing them in many ways, including crucifixion. The death of Jesus was a Roman act; there was little if any notice taken by Jewish people. Jesus was another victim of the Pax Romana.

Bethlehem's Holy Family Hospital: In the midst of all the political and religious tensions in the city of Bethlehem, the Catholic Order of Malta oversees Holy Family Hospital, just up the hill from the Church of the Nativity. Members of the medical staff are primarily Christian, and most of the patients are Muslim, but the hospital serves everyone, especially mothers, their newborn babies, and all children who need special care. "Our philosophy," said one of the leading doctors, "is that poor people deserve the best." The Order of Malta has been caring for the sick and the poor in the Middle East for more than 900 years.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports.

What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart.

'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more.

Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba.

Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart.

Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart.

How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years.

Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart discusses the findings with Yves Daccord, director-general of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York.

U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports.

What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart.

'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more.

Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schiffrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba.

Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart.

Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

Three reasons little kids shouldn't play football: Keith Strudler wants to see the end of football played by very young children -- and not just because of the danger of concussions. He argues that the sport teaches kids to act rough and selfish, as well as that masculinity is strength, while femininity is cheering from the sidelines. Older players are able to separate the sport from life, he says, but for younger ones, that's not easy.
