So begins Marilyn Hagerty's review of the national creamery franchise for her local paper, The Grand Forks Herald, in Grand Forks, N.D.

The 87-year-old Hagerty has reported on food, events, and local profiles at the Herald for more than 25 years, but she earned 15 minutes of national fame last year with a positive review of her local Olive Garden restaurant. Thousands of people took to the Internet to ridicule Hagerty for her lowbrow tastes. But there followed a powerful backlash of people who came to her defense, tired of elitism among food and restaurant critics. Feature: Explore the developing tourism industry in Uganda. TRT 6:00

Prairie Pulse – REPEAT [30-minute News PA program] (Prairie Public)

Authors of "The Nine" interviewed by Host & CEO John Harris III. This tome is the story of escaping the rigors of religiosity within a system in which nine members of a Hutterite colony were born and raised. Choosing life outside of the colony cost us the future of family ties and the places we once called home. All nine of us made the individual choice between the ages of 17-25 to be obedient to the Lord's calling and leave our Hutterite colonies.
