Negotiations continue in Switzerland over Iran’s nuclear program, hours after Secretary of State John Kerry and key diplomats decided to work past the March 31 deadline for a framework deal. The talks remain beleaguered by sticking points on both sides, with a final deadline set for June 30. We’ll discuss Iran’s nuclear program and the status of the talks exclusively with Sen Bob Corker (R-TN), Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations

The celebration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ on Easter Sunday represents the holiest day on the Christian calendar. Cardinal Donald Wuerl, archbishop of Washington, joins Fox News Sunday exclusively with his Easter message, and to discuss the persecution of Christians around the world and the Pope’s visit to the U.S. later this year.

The White House reversed its earlier position, with President Obama agreeing to sign a compromise bill that would allow Congress to weigh in on the nuclear framework agreement with Iran. This after the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations voted unanimously to put a bill requiring a 60-day review period for a deal to the full Senate for a vote. We'll discuss Congress's role in a final Iran deal exclusively with Sen Lindsey Graham (R-SC), who is also weighing a bid for the White House in 2016 and is speaking at the New Hampshire Republican Party Leadership Summit this weekend.

Hillary Clinton took the political world by storm when she entered the 2016 race for the White House, becoming the only Democrat to join the field so far. One potential Clinton opponent who has emerged, Sen Bernie Sanders (I-VT), describes himself as a democratic socialist and is set to decide on a presidential bid in the weeks ahead. We'll talk exclusively with Senator Sanders about why he is a viable Democratic alternative, and how he plans to take on the Clinton machine.

After a Florida man flew his gyrocopter virtually undetected into some of the country's most restricted airspace and successfully landed on the lawn of the U.S. Capitol, many are raising concerns that the incident has exposed troubling security flaws. Hillary Clinton’s presidential campaign has been quick to denounce troubling allegations over foreign donations to the Clinton Foundation, ahead of the release of the bombshell new book “Clinton Cash.” In the book, author Peter Schweizer attempts to untangle a snarled web of cash contributions to the Clinton’s non-profit organization from foreign entities, charging they resulted in political payoffs by the Clinton State Department. We’ll talk with Schweizer about the book, its accusations, and what effect his findings could have on Hillary Clinton’s presidential aspirations.

Accusations over foreign donations and political payoffs have set the stage for a new hurdle facing the Hillary Clinton presidential campaign. Clinton’s camp says no one “has ever produced a shred of evidence supporting the theory that Hillary Clinton ever took action as Secretary of State to support the interests of donors to the Clinton Foundation.” We’ll discuss the allegations exclusively with former White House Special Counsel Lanny Davis, who handled legal troubles in the Clinton White House including campaign finance and impeachment.
