TOPIC DURATION: 30 MIN

DESCRIPTION: Denver Migrant Crisis

REPORTER: Sergio Ornelas – Stephanie Rodriguez

Enfoque focused on several pressing issues that the state of Colorado is facing, and important details about the upcoming elections are discussed. The immigration crisis: Denver has received a record number of migrants, and it has become harder for the city to meet the needs. Some migrants have been moving to the mountain areas where there are even less resources. Spokesperson of Denver Health shared they are running out of money to provide health services to migrants. Two representatives from Denver Public Schools shared what the school district is doing to provide resources to migrant families and the efforts they are making to ensure that migrant children, living in shelters, can make it to school.

Primary election key dates in the state were shared as well as information for viewers on what their options are and key dates to ensure they make their voices heard. Political analyst Jesús Sánchez helped explain the Colorado ruling that removed Donald Trump from the ballot and what to expect moving forward as the case was now being heard by the United States Supreme Court. A young Latino leader was also interviewed, who gave some insights on the grass roots efforts to push out the vote. The program also mentioned elections in Mexico and what eligible voters living in the United States should do to vote in Mexico. The show concluded with FAFSA delays and updates.

DESCRIPTION: Preview of Super Tuesday

REPORTER: Sergio Ornelas – Stephanie Rodriguez

This show aired the weekend before Super Tuesday in Colorado starting with a talk about primary elections. Options to cast a vote were discussed and reminded viewers of the names that will be on the ballot. A story was presented on low voter turnout and how Latino eligible voters have the power to sway elections if each one votes. Political analyst Jesús Sánchez, who explained the Colorado ruling about Trump on the ballot also explains why candidates choose to visit the state before Super Tuesday. A young Latino leader who is working to get out the vote talked about what he is doing. We presented a story about inmates in county jails voting for the first time and ended the show talking about wage theft and invited viewers to tune into our weekly show to learn how to report this crime.
