A house in Sussex County might be considered a sex shop. Law Enforcements say a lawsuit is filed against a house used as a sex club. Plaintiff that rented the house says webcams were found by the Satellite TV Installer found in the basement. The defendant said he found cages and cocaine on the basement table in rental property. The suit says a sex club was run inside the house prior to the plaintiffs moving in. According to Robert Bianchi, this is not unheard of. Prosecutor Bianchi also says sassy behavior is not uncommon in wealthy circles. Plaintiff argument is whether or not these webcams are being recorded. Also Plaintiff argues that the house was under foreclose and was not informed by the realtor and the bathroom wasn't functioning. So considering the conditions they might receive a counter suit from the realtor.

HINKY HAMILTON

Republic Mayor Kelly Yaede has been in office for two and half years after former Mayor John Bencivengo had been replaced under federal corruption charges. This past April, the Hamilton Township Police Department assigned a security detail after what they say was credible information that there were threats against her. When she was a councilwoman, she says she came face to face with her stalker. After two weeks, a member under her security detail is now being put under investigation. Detective Leonard Gadbsy was interviewed regarding all the allegations against him. Detective Gadbsy hasn't been charged with anything, but people are starting to wonder what exactly is going on in Hamilton Township.

GET A JOB

Law Enforcements are now looking for conflict resolution options. Physical building is only a key aspect to conflict resolution in the police force. Lt. Kevin Lutz says this training is unique. Tactics include conditioning physical strength and managing verbal abuse. Tactical talking and listening can defuse tense situations by simply asking, are you ok? This can decrease tension between the cop and the person they are approaching. Cops: clear communication is essential in crime fighting. The idea is to be conscious of another person dignity and not just as a civilian, but also as an equal.

NJ DOPEY LAWS

Rules, laws! There are thousands of them. Many of them 100 years old, outdated, and simply just don't make sense. Several laws from Federal, State and County, and Townships are all still in place throughout New Jersey. Multiple towns around New Jersey have very specific laws that remain on the books, and some may not even know about, unless you live there. In Raritan, for example, you can't curse. But, one Raritan cop told Chasing he'd never seen a single person written up for spitting or cursing. Also, you can't make any "unnecessary or disturbing noise which either annoys, injures, or endangers the comfort repose health or safety of others," and that's just one town. In Bernards Township, frowning is frowned upon, to the point where there's an ordinance against it. In Trenton, it's illegal to eat pickles on Sunday or throw tainted ones in the street. Hard to say what happens if you throw a good one. It's well-known that old laws and ordinances tend to stay on the books for years beyond their use. But some people may be all for these laws.

People are stealing dogs and reselling for a profit. According to the American Kennel Club in 2008, 71 dogs were stolen and in 2014 that number as increased dramatically to 637 dogs stolen. This can possibly be attributed to selling pets online and walking away with money. Scott Crawford from Associated Humane Societies in New Jersey says having proof of ownership of the dog in order to be protected and not become a victim. Also the Pit-bull breed is the most stolen dog in the country mainly because people are using them to fight. The high-in boutique dogs have also been stolen like Yerkes. JUST ANOTHER DAY FOR GOV. CHRIS CHRISTIE

For the upcoming FOX debate, N.J. Governor Chris Christie is confident he'll make the Top 10 for the first Republican Primary Party. That's exactly what Christie spoke about when he appeared Sunday on FOX News' "America's Newsroom". "I'll be there on Thursday night," he declared. Then, there was the Haskell Invitational at Monmouth Park in Oceanport, where American Pharoah won his first race that night since winning the Triple Crown. When the Governor presented the trophy in the Winner's Circle, he was booed. But the story that got the most people talking was the Governor's appearance on CNN's "State of the Union with Jake Tapper," where he said the national teachers union is the single most destructive force in public education in America. Steve Wollmer, New Jersey Education Association's Communications Director, reacts to Christie's comments. "It's shocking language. If somebody said that you deserved a punch in the face, how would you feel? Our members are, unfortunately, almost numb to this. They're so used to it after 5 1/2 years of this governor. He's never done anything but use this kind of language. So, it's almost like, here we go again. But this was particularly problematic. A punch in the face is about as violent as you can get with somebody," Wollmer stated.

HOW MUCH IS THE TAX ON THAT YACHT?

Jason Cavaleri, the owner of Cast Off Yacht Sales, discusses New Jersey's boat tax. A used 2006 Sea Ray Sundancer yacht, including two bathrooms, a kitchen, bedroom, and sitting area below and above, costs about $299,000, and if you want it brand new it can cost over a million. However, those prices do not include the 7% NJ boat tax. There have been efforts to change this. The Legislature attempted to pass a boat tax cap of $20,000. But, Governor Chris Christie vetoed the bill conditionally. Christie would like to see a boat tax reduction for all buyers. State Senator Ray Lesniak weighed in on the debate and explained why he believes the Legislature should override the Governor's veto.
