SENATOR ROBERT MENENDEZ INDICTED

Senator Robert Menendez is indicted by the U.S. Justice Department over federal corruption charges in relation to accepting gifts and campaign contributions from Dr. Salomon Melgen of Florida. Senator Menendez in a press conference said he is innocent of the charges and that he will fight the charges. He is not resigning from the Senate, however he did step down from his post as the top ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Many are concerned what this indictment could mean for the Democratic Party, for Hillary Clinton's possible run for President, or even the upcoming vote for Loretta Lynch to take over as Attorney General.

SENATOR ROBERT MENENDEZ ARRAIGNED

Senator Robert Menendez was arraigned today in Federal Court in Newark on corruption charges. The Senator pleaded not guilty and said he will fight the charges after leaving court. Even though the New Jersey newspapers editorial's column have called for the Senator to resign from the Senate, Menendez has vowed to stay. NJ Now host Jim McQueeney said it could have an impact on the future of the NJ Senate seat, possibly having Governor Chris Christie appoint himself to the seat if the case gets worse for Menendez and he decides to leave. But Jim does not feel it could impact Hillary Clinton's run for President in New Jersey, despite Menendez being such a big supporter of Clinton.

A FAMILY'S OUTRAGE

Mark Sheridan, the son of the late John and Joy Sheridan who died in a house fire, went on national television with his uncle, U.S. Circuit Court Judge Peter Sheridan, to say that the Somerset County Prosecutor is wrong to say that the death of his parents was a murder-suicide. Some suggest that a new report out of Cooper University Hospital is what caused John Sheridan, who was the CEO of the hospital, to become distressed and what led to him kill his wife and then himself. The hospital denies this. The family is now filing a lawsuit.

HOME WRECKER

Hamaian Akhutar had the dream of buying a home in the suburb of Florham Park, NJ. He found a home which he purchased for $1 million, and spent another $2 million to maintain it. But the house is falling apart, with cracks throughout the walls in the house and in the foundation. Akhutar and his lawyer say that the developer did not test the soil before building the home, and that the soil itself was insufficient. Akhutar sued the developer and actually won a judgement of $7.4 million in 2006, but that ruling was reversed by an appellate court. Now Akhutar is taking the case to the state Supreme Court.

14 NAILS

In honor of Good Friday in Jersey City, community members took part in Stations of the Cross in which they walked to 14 areas in Jersey City where acts of violence took place including shootings and stabbings. Mourners decry the ongoing violence taking place in Jersey City. One place community members went to was the Walgreens store where Police Officer Melvin Santiago was killed in the line of duty. Among the most emotional stops during the march was the area where a young Jaden Thaxton was shot and survived.

UNSETTLING SETTLEMENT

The settlement deal between the state of New Jersey and oil company Exxon Mobil became public on the state's DEP website earlier this week. The settlement calls for $225 million to be paid by Exxon Mobil, as well as an unspecified amount for remediation of the land that was contaminated. It would be the biggest settlement for New Jersey, but State Senator Ray Lesniak believes it amounts to the biggest state giveaway in the country. Senator Lesniak is also critical of the fact that Exxon Mobil can write off the settlement on their taxes. Lesniak will file a motion to intervene in the settlement.

Indictments were handed down by the U.S. Attorney's Office in relation to the Bridge Gate scandal. Former Governor Christie aide Bridget Anne Kelly was charged, as was former Port Authority Deputy Executive Director Bill Baroni. Former Port Authority Executive David Wildstein pled guilty to the charges. Bridget Anne Kelly spoke at a press conference, saying she was innocent and that she was not a liar. State Senator Loretta Weinberg and Assemblyman John Wisniewski, both who headed the Bridge Gate Committee in the Legislature, also addressed the media. Psychologist Dr. Jeff Gardere also spoke about the physical transformation of David Wildstein who lost an incredible amount of weight in the wake of the scandal.

The fish is commonly found in South America, where the locals call it the "nutcracker" because apparently it's got a rep for going straight in and biting people right where it matters the most. POWER-A-NO-GO

About a week ago, a thunder storm passed through Gibbstown, New Jersey leaving more than a half a million homes out of electric. Down trees and wires left families in the dark for almost a week as Atlantic City Electric worked to repair their power. Many residents were upset that Governor Christie did not step in and speed up repairs.
