CONGESTION PRICING

New York's Democrat-controlled Legislature on Sunday passed a statewide ban on single-use plastic bags and planned to approve tolls for driving into the busiest sections of Manhattan starting in 2021 as part of a $175.5 billion state budget agreement worked out with Governor Andrew Cuomo. The Assembly and Senate passed the plastic bag ban legislation Sunday afternoon to start what was expected to be an all-day session that could spill into early Monday, when the spending plan for the 2019-2020 state fiscal year is due to be in place.

AOC AGENDA

Amid her zeal to save the world with the Green New Deal, Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez has -ignored residents in her own Bronx back yard. Roxanne Delgado, a local activist who said she has tried for months to get in touch with the Congresswoman for help saving an animal shelter and to clean up parks in the district, says she has made numerous calls to Ocasio-Cortez's offices in Washington and Queens and sent a barrage of tweets after the freshman lawmaker encouraged residents during a recent visit to a Bronx public library to hit her up on social media. But she's heard nothing back.

WOMAN FATALLY HIT BY SUBWAY

A woman was fatally struck by a subway train in Brooklyn Monday morning. The woman, in her 30s or 40s, was killed at the 59th Street N/R station in Sunset Park around 8:15 a.m. It was initially believed she was trying to retrieve her cell phone, but police say further investigation revealed the death to be a suicide. No other injuries were reported, but a subway suspension made for a rough commute for many riders heading to work. Train service resumed a short time later.

TEACHER TOPLESS SELFIE LEADS TO LAWSUIT

A middle school teacher from Long Island is planning to sue her former school district after she was fired, she alleges, for a topless selfie. Lauren Miranda, 25, has taught math at Bellport Middle School for the past four years. She says a topless selfie she took of herself in her bedroom in 2016 and sent to a former boyfriend who also teaches in the school district somehow leaked to at least one student at the middle school. Miranda's attorney John Ray says the superintendent of the South Country School District told Miranda she was being fired because she could no longer serve as a role model for the students. In January, she was placed on administrative leave with pay and was fired by the school board last Wednesday.

AUTISM RATES UP IN NJ

New Jersey preschoolers have the highest rates of autism ever measured in the United States, a rate that has increased faster than in other states studied, researchers at Rutgers University reported Thursday. The rate of autism among children in the state has tripled in a generation. One in 35 children in New Jersey was diagnosed with autism by their 4th birthday, according to the study published by the federal Centers for Disease Control on Thursday. Those children were more likely to have attracted the attention of pediatricians and early-childhood educators because of moderate to severe symptoms of autism. Still more children are diagnosed with autism when they enter public schools.

SMOLLETT LAWSUIT

Jussie Smollett purposely tried to mislead authorities by falsely describing the men he claimed attacked him as white, according to a civil lawsuit filed by the city of Chicago. The city filed the suit against the "Empire" actor over his refusal to reimburse it for overtime payments to police officers who investigated his alleged hate crime hoax. The complaint, filed in Cook County Circuit Court on Thursday, comes after the city gave Smollett a week earlier this month to pay $130,000 for the police overtime.

MEASLES

U.S. health officials confirmed 71 new cases of measles last week, putting this year just a few dozen cases shy of becoming the worst year on record since the disease was said to be eradicated from the U.S. in 2000. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention confirmed 71 new cases of measles during the week through Friday, bringing the total so far this year to 626 cases. In 2010, the worst year on record since 2000, the CDC confirmed 667 cases. The NJ Department of Health is warning anyone who visited a Mexican restaurant in Englishtown that they may have been exposed to the measles.

CHALKING TIRES

It seems harmless enough: A swipe of chalk to mark a vehicle's tire. Parking officials see it as a tool, a way of telling how long a car has been parked in a space where there are no meters but there are posted time limits. But the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Cincinnati sees it as trespass, a violation of the Fourth Amendment's ban on unreasonable searches. The court on Monday ruled tire-chalking unconstitutional, a touching of another's property akin to police efforts to track drug dealers by placing a GPS tracker on their vehicle.

TINY HOME MADE OUT OF BUS

You can keep your McMansions. Cavernous, two-story foyers that offer a cold welcome while jacking up your heating bill. Guest rooms where nobody has ever slept. "Gourmet" kitchens for microwave chefs. A home with character has more soul. A home with some miles under its belt. That's what Jessie Lipskin got when she transformed a 1966 GMC Greyhound bus into a charming mobile home. The Manhattan native bought the bus in 2015 for $7,000 and poured $125,000 into renovations.

Sen. Cory Booker is rolling out a sweeping gun control agenda that includes requiring licenses for all gun owners, as well as more standard proposals such as conducting universal background checks and banning assault weapons. The 14-part plan unveiled Monday is part of what Booker said was a "personal fight" to combat a gun violence "epidemic," and it amounts to one of the most aggressive gun control proposals from a 2020 Democrat. It's also sure to face fierce pushback from gun rights' groups like the National Rifle Association.

SHAQ TOWERS

Sometimes, it's all about the framing. And at 50 Rector Street, the newest luxury tower hovering in Newark's downtown, the state's largest city is on display like you've never seen it before. Floor-to-ceiling windows in each of its 168 units capture the city's downtown core, curled against the Passaic River. Boraie developed the $80 million, 22-story building with Newark native and NBA superstar Shaquille O'Neal. The so-called “Shaq Tower” will open in June.

BRUTAL SUBWAY ASSAULT

Police said on Wednesday they believe they know who the victim is in a video that shows him being ruthlessly beaten on a subway train. Officials said they believe the man is a 22-year-old resident of the Bronx who lives out of state. The assault is believed to have occurred in November 2018, but police don't what train or where in the city.

PEANUTS FOR BABIES

Everything you think you know about peanut allergies might be about to change. In March 2019, the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) released new guidelines for introducing kids to peanuts in the hopes of decreasing the prevalence of this widespread allergy. The study says babies should be given peanuts early in order to prevent allergic reactions.

NORCROSS v. MURPHY

A long-simmering intraparty fight among Democrats in New Jersey has turned into an open civil war, pitting the state’s political novice governor against an old-school political boss who has ruled for more than two decades and potentially reordering the political landscape in what’s become a national Democratic stronghold. The protagonists come from very different wings of New Jersey’s political sphere: Governor Phil Murphy, a 61-year-old former Goldman Sachs executive, and George Norcross, a wealthy 63-year-old insurance executive who is the state’s most powerful unelected official and whose political wrath is so feared he has taken on an almost mythical status in Jersey circles.

COLLEGE INCOME SHARE AGREEMENTS

In the 1970s, Yale University offered a program that allowed graduating classes to collectively repay their tuition after finding employment. Everyone who could afford it would pitch in to foot the bill of the entire group. But that first iteration of Income-Share Agreements failed spectacularly, as middle-income earners ended up repaying more than classmates who didn’t find jobs. The university eventually ended the program, and in 1999, it wiped away all repayment obligations for the participants.

MURDER CONVICTION VACATED

For four decades, Keith Bush insisted he had been convicted as a teenager of a murder he did not commit: strangling a 14-year-old girl in Bellport, N.Y. The police, he said, had beaten him and forced him to sign a confession that he had never read. While imprisoned, he had enlisted the help of a lawyer at Pace Law School, who sued to obtain records and unearthed evidence showing Mr. Bush had not gotten a fair trial. Even after he was released from state prison on parole, Mr. Bush continued to fight to clear his name.
