Chasing News – 4th Quarter, 2017

ISSUES: Government/Politics

THE DAILY POINT - A COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF PERFORMANCE

First it was, "he went to Texas too early," then Puerto Rico too late. Then it was the Jones Act. Spadea says it's time to stop it already, that the President has performed incredibly in the past few weeks. Three natural disasters, huge immediate response. Ships, planes, food, water, medical supplies, shelters; all sent to the impacted areas within days of devastation. The challenge in Puerto Rico is that the infrastructure was wiped out by the hurricane. Roads impassable, no power, no fresh water. Trump's detractors want to discuss tweets instead of stepping up to help. How exactly did a visit from Governor Cuomo help the Island recover? Photo-ops are for politicians. Trump is a leader. There's a difference. The Governor of Puerto Rico knows.

THE DAILY POINT - QUICK TO BLAME

As we continue to wrap our heads around the horrific massacre perpetrated on innocent concert goers in Las Vegas, some opportunists wasted no time to use the tragedy for their own political agenda. Spadea looks into the critics lead by former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and some local pols who took to Twitter to assign blame only hours after the gunfire stopped.

ISSUES: Government/Politics

THE DAILY POINT - THE RACE TO REPLACE

The race to replace Governor Christie is in high gear and only five weeks out. The Republican Candidate Lt. Governor Kim Guadagno has pulled closer to Democratic nominee, Phil Murphy. Why is the race so close in New Jersey where Democrats outnumber Republicans nearly two to one? Simple answer is taxes. They're too high for the average middle class and working class family to afford. Kim Guadagno has a plan to lower them and Phil Murphy has pledged to raise taxes in order to pay for many new programs. Could this be a repeat of the Corzine/Christie battle in 2009?

OCTOBER WEATHER - WILL IT RAIN?

Most of New Jersey has gone at least 14 days without any significant rain and it's starting to show. Forecasters said Tuesday the state saw its 28th driest September in 122 years, and it remains unclear if rainfall possible this weekend could do much to break the dry spell.

PUERTO RICO TO PAY?

For more than a year, Puerto Rico has clashed with investors who hold slivers of its $73 billion debt, and who have pushed the United States territory to pay up. On Tuesday, during his visit to the hurricane-struck island, President Trump raised a prospect that could cheer the island's residents but send shudders through Wall Street: Maybe the debt can simply go away. In an interview with Fox News, Mr. Trump said his administration would help Puerto Rico wipe out the debt to help it recover from the extensive damage left by Hurricane Maria two weeks ago. He did not offer specifics. "We're going to do something. We're going to get it back on its feet," the president said. How will forgiving debt affect the rest of us? We look into it. Guest panelists Allison Smith and Frank Luna debate the issue.

BUS DRIVER BUSTED

A school bus driver was suspended Tuesday after a video surfaced showing the woman reading messages on her mobile phone while driving with students on board, according to the bus company. The video, posted Tuesday morning in a private Facebook group created for parents in Old Bridge, showed the woman driving the bus with her left hand on the steering wheel while holding her phone in the right hand. She appeared to glance at the phone while driving with a text message app on the screen. Linda Scott, the manager of the Shamrock Stage Coach bus service, said the driver has been suspended until further notice. The driver, who has not been named, has worked for the busing company for about four years and has "never had a problem," Scott said. Guest panelists Allison Smith and Frank Luna discuss the topic.

COLUMBUS STATUE/ MAYORS BOYCOTT

Italian-American leaders plan to boycott Mayor de Blasio's Italian-American heritage reception at Gracie Mansion on Thursday to protest his refusal to defend Christopher Columbus statues. The Gracie Mansion event precedes next Monday's Columbus Day Parade on Fifth Avenue. "I'm not going to the reception. How can I go to an event hosted by a person who is against what I stand for? The Mayor doesn't support the Columbus statue at Columbus Circle," fumed Angelo Vivolo, President of the Columbus Citizens Foundation that sponsors the parade. Last year, the foundation donated $15,000 to help finance the cost of the Gracie Mansion reception. But it has made no such commitment this year, Vivolo said. Also, in the city that's the biggest terror target in the world, the NYPD is providing 24/7 body-guard services to the marble statue of Christopher Columbus in Columbus Circle. The patrols, which consist of one or two cops working eight-hour shifts, were set up in hopes of preventing any more vandalism before Monday's Columbus Day holiday. Joe Piscopo talks with Chasing News about the controversy, as do guest panelists Jeanette Hoffman, Wayne Smith and Bob Bianchi.

Paddock booked two rooms at The Blackstone Hotel, 636 S. Michigan Ave., one from Aug. 1 through Aug. 6 and the other during the duration of the fest, Aug. 3 through Aug. 6, according to the report. PAY UP, GOOD SAMARITAN

Kristian Falkenstein has taken his knocks. After the film actor and stuntman served as the stand-in for Jean Dujardin in the 2011 Academy Award-winning silent film "The Artist," he got a job trying out an obstacle course for the TV game show "Wipeout." He dislocated his shoulder, sidelining him from stunt work. He took another beating on September 23 when he interrupted a pick-up volleyball game he was playing in on the Fourth Avenue beach in Belmar to save a swimmer caught in a rip current. The 39-year-old ocean swimmer who grew up lifeguarding succeeded with the help of a police officer, two volunteer rescue swimmers and ultimately the Coast Guard. And this is what he got for his trouble: a big medical bill. After the rescue, paramedics persuaded him to go to the hospital to get his lungs checked because he took in water. Pneumonia or a condition known as dry drowning were a possibility. Guest panelists Afia Yunus, Jim McQueeny and Bob Bianchi discuss the issue.

MOVE THAT STATUE!

The statue stands in a small park near a strip of businesses owned primarily by blacks and Latinos. The 6-foot tall monument to Christopher Columbus was erected in Long Branch's Slocum Park in 1961, when the city was predominantly white. More than half a century later, the city has seen an influx of Latino immigrants, and at least one Hispanic group would like to see the statue moved to a different location. Walter Alomar, the president of the Organization for Culture of Hispanic Origins, is calling for the statue to be moved to a neighborhood not dominated by people of color, said Columbus oppressed the indigenous population he found upon arriving in the Caribbean in the late 15th century. SUPERINTENDENTS OVERPAID

With just 566 students, Mendham Borough is one of the smallest school districts in the state. But thanks to bonuses and perks, Superintendent Mitzi Morillo's compensation package last year was one of the most expensive. That $203,000 total includes $5,046 in additional health benefits beyond what teachers in the district received, $20,237 in performance bonuses, and a whopping $43,170 in expense allowances, the most for any superintendent in the state and nearly $7,000 more than the second-highest. In all, Morillo's compensation bypassed the state salary cap for superintendents of districts the borough's size by $68,000. The superintendent salary cap is one of Governor Chris Christie's landmark reforms from his first term. Since it went into effect in 2010, it has been fiercely opposed by superintendents and school boards as an obstacle in attracting and retaining talented school administrators. But like Christie's other key law, the property tax cap, which provides for a long list of exceptions that allow municipalities to raise taxes by more than the advertised 2% limit, the superintendent salary cap has its own holes. The caps, for example, never applied to superintendents of county vocational or special education districts. Guest panelists Naima Ricks and Youth Consultant Dr. Liz discuss the issue.

People are threatening to boycott Dove after the beauty brand ran what many see as a racist commercial. In a 3-second video, which Dove posted on its U.S. Facebook page on Friday, a black woman removes her top to reveal a white woman underneath. Many saw the clip as implying that for a black woman to be attractive, she'd need to lighten her skin. On Saturday, Dove posted on Twitter it had removed the clip and apologized. However, many people saw the ad as just the latest in a string of marketing efforts from Dove that elevates white beauty above that of women of color. N.J.'s annual bear hunt is underway in northern New Jersey, one year after a record 636 bears were killed. The hunt opened in eight counties a half-hour before dawn, under rules established by the state Department of Environmental Protection. It will conclude Saturday, with a second, six-day hunt starting December 4th. Protesters are planning to gather at 9 a.m. in a grassy area off Fredon Springdale Road, across the street from one of five check stations for hunters returning with dead bears. The first day of the hunt generally yields the highest results. Opponents of the hunt charge that the population has been decimated by hunts held every year under Governor Chris Christie, while the DEP estimates that up to 2,800 bears live in the area north of Route 78 and west of Route 287.

YOUR PUPPY CAN MAKE YOU SICK

A multistate outbreak of campylobacter infections initially linked to contact with puppies sold through Petland, a national pet store chain, has spread to 55 people in 12 states and is resistant to common first-line antibiotics, the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced last week. Campylobacteriosis is a common bacterial infection that can cause diarrhea, abdominal pain and fever. It's usually easily treated with common oral antibiotics, but the CDC said clinical samples taken from puppies and people sickened in the outbreak show signs of antibiotic resistance. However, the CDC says that most people infected with campylobacter need only supportive care, such as fluids and electrolytes, to recover. POLITICS OF RACE

An attack on Kim Guadagno has raised the ire of at least two Hispanic pastors who say they were never contacted and never gave permission for their names to be used in a letter attacking Kim G's sanctuary state ad. One of them, Pastor Jose Lopez, joined Bill in studio. Kim has called on Murphy to say something about the organization and the person responsible for using pastors' names without permission. Lopez is the father of Kim's Deputy Chief of Staff. Guest panelists Jeanette Hoffman and Bill Caruso debate the issue.

MENENDEZ TRIAL

Closing arguments in U.S. Senator Bob Menendez's corruption trial began on Thursday after a federal judge on Wednesday finished instructing jurors on the laws to consider in reaching a verdict. U.S. District Court Judge William H. Walls also warned Wednesday that a verdict could be delayed by a juror's long-scheduled vacation. The trial began September 6th and was scheduled to last six to eight weeks. Menendez, a Democrat from Paramus, stands accused of using his office to help co-defendant Salomon Melgen, a wealthy Florida eye doctor and a longtime friend, in exchange for bribes in the form of luxury vacations, free flights on Melgen's private jets and more than $700,000 in political contributions. 44 CONDUCTORS WITH SLEEP APNEA

NJ Transit sidelined 44 train engineers, the people who actually drive the trains, over the past year after testing required in the wake of a September 2016 rail crash in Hoboken found that they suffered from sleep apnea. NJ Transit screened 373 engineers for sleep disorders, said Nancy Snyder, an NJ Transit spokeswoman. Out of those engineers, 57 were taken out of service until a full sleep study could be conducted, she said. Of the 57 engineers, 44 were found to have sleep apnea and remained sidelined until they met treatment requirements, Snyder said. A National Transportation Safety Board document confirmed that Thomas Gallagher, the engineer who was operating the train that crashed on September 29, 2016, suffered from severe sleep apnea, a breathing disorder that interrupts nighttime sleep and leads to drowsiness. CHARLIE ROSE

Eight women have told The Washington Post that longtime television host Charlie Rose made unwanted sexual advances toward them, including lewd phone calls, walking around naked in their presence, or groping their breasts, buttocks or genital areas. The women were employees or aspired to work for Rose at the "Charlie Rose" show from the late 1990s to as recently as 2011. They ranged in age from 21 to 37 at the time of the alleged encounters. Rose has since been fired from his jobs at CBS and PBS. Guest panelists Afia Yunus and Jeanette Hoffman discuss the subject.

MURPHY'S PROMISES FALLING FLAT?

Murphy has made some promises to NJ citizens including legalizing pot and taxing the millionaires. State Senator Ron Rice's response to legalizing pot has been hold up, not so fast. This could affect car insurance prices and we can't properly detect drivers for weed use. The argument has also been made that it could hurt minorities. The millionaires tax is also looking like a stretch. So, if both his promises fall flat, where will the money we need come from? Guest panelists Afia Yunus and Jeanette Hoffman discuss the issue.

OVER $300K RAISED FOR VET

A New Jersey woman who was helped by a homeless man after she ran out of gas on an interstate in Philadelphia has raised more than $350,000 for the good Samaritan. Kate McClure, 27, found herself stranded on Interstate 95 after she had run out of gas. Johnny Bobbitt Jr., a homeless veteran, approached her and told her to "get back in the car and lock the doors" while he walked a few blocks and bought her gas with his last $20. McClure wrote on the Gofundme.com campaign she started for Bobbitt. McClure said she didn't have any money to repay him at the time but returned to the road several times with her boyfriend to give Bobbitt cash, clothes and food. After a few visits, she started the fundraiser with the hopes of using the money toward housing and other expenses for the 34-year-old Bobbitt.

SPORTS BETTING

The Supreme Court will hear New Jersey Governor Chris Christie's challenge on Monday to a federal law that bans most states from sports betting. New Jersey wants the justices to strike down the law that would clear the way for several states to tap into what some say is a $150 billion per year illegal industry. The controversy started in 2011 when New Jersey voters approved a measure to legalize sports betting to help the casino industries in a faltering economy. HOBOKEN RAPE CHARGES

Four teenagers are facing charges in connection with an alleged sexual assault of another student at Hoboken High School, authorities said Tuesday. The Hudson County Prosecutor's Office says that the assault happened inside the school on November 30 when the four male teens allegedly pushed a 17-year-old female student into a room where she was fondled and forced to perform a sexual act. The school surveillance system captured the victim being pushed into the room, according to officials. Prosecutors say that a 17-year old student faces several charges, including aggravated sexual assault, aggravated sexual contact and kidnapping. TAX BILL & FARMER TRUMP

President Trump reportedly gets a tax break in New Jersey thanks to a pair of unexpected sources: goats and hay on his golf courses. Public records show the billionaire businessman and Republican presidential front-runner qualifies for a New Jersey farmland tax break because he utilizes a small goat herd, hay farming, and wood cutting at golf clubs he owns in the Garden State, according to a report by the Wall Street Journal. That saves Trump tens of thousands of dollars a year in property taxes on two of his three New Jersey courses, in Bedminster and Colts Neck, the report said. TAX PLAN

After Congress approved the sweeping tax overhaul last week, the city will allow residents to prepay their estimated tax bills before the end of the year. While only tax bills are prepared for the first two quarters, city officials said residents can pay more than those two quarters if they wish. Property taxes have been entirely deductible, but starting next year taxpayers will only be allowed to deduct $10,000. Hoboken joins Jersey City in allowing residents to take advantage of prepayments before the new year. The Republican tax plan signed into law by President Donald Trump is already trickling down to some lower-wage and middle class workers in New Jersey in the form of bonuses and pay raises. A number of companies with offices and operations in the Garden State announced that they would be passing the economic benefits of the corporate tax cuts to their employees and communities. New Jersey-based OceanFirst Financial Corp. said Friday it would raise the minimum wage of its tellers and customer service workers to $15 an hour. That followed the same move by PNC Bank, which also said it would pay $1,000 bonuses and $1,500 pension contributions to their 50,000 employees. AFRICAN-AMERICAN BABIES MORE THAN 3X AS LIKELY TO DIE IN THE FIRST YEAR

Each year, nearly 500 babies in New Jersey die before their first birthdays. While that number is much lower than it used to be, it conceals a sad and enduring mystery: Children of African-American women are more than three times as likely to die in the first year of life as those born to white women, no matter what their mothers' income level or educational attainment. And that racial disparity is larger in New Jersey than anywhere else nationwide, according to state figures. Efforts to get pregnant women prenatal care and to give extra support to those facing high risks of complications or early delivery have helped to reduce infant mortality among all races. So have technological advances that give even the tiniest, most premature infants a better chance to survive. They've lowered the overall death rate for babies in New Jersey by nearly 25% since 2000. Guest panelists Monmouth County Sheriff Shaun Golden and attorney Bill Caruso discuss the issue.

CHRISTIE'S PARDONS

Governor Chris Christie on Friday pardoned a campaign donor who was convicted last year of tampering with public records. Christie issued clemency for Joseph M. Longo, a Morristown businessman who contributed $500 to the Governor's 2009 campaign, according to filings with the Election Law Enforcement Commission. Longo pleaded guilty in June 2016 in Middlesex County to four counts of tampering with public records and information, according to court records. He was sentenced to two years of probation and a $300,000 fine. Longo was represented by Jeffrey Chiesa, a close Christie ally who is currently in charge of a state takeover of Atlantic City, the court records show. Chiesa is a former state attorney general and U.S. senator. Another was former Mount Olive Police Officer Ryan Eastridge, who was forced to give up his job in 2014 after pleading guilty to releasing confidential law enforcement data to a neighbor. The former police officer, who filed for clemency 10 months ago and now works for the Mount Olive Department of Public Works, learned of the pardon Thursday night through his attorney, Lee Vartan, and former Morris County State Republican Assemblyman Richard Kamin. The pardon, one of the governor's most powerful tools, erases the conviction from Eastridge's history. WEED ON THE BOARDWALK + BILLION DOLLAR BIZ?

If and when marijuana is legalized in New Jersey, there will be at least one town where it won't be sold. The Point Pleasant Beach Borough Council has unanimously approved a full ban on marijuana sales, including both medical marijuana dispensaries and any retail business looking to sell weed. In an interview, Point Pleasant Beach Mayor Stephen Reid said he was not against medical marijuana and not all borough officials are against recreational marijuana. But the council, he said, simply does not want it sold in town. The vote was last week.

SHANEEN ALLEN: THE GUN CHAMPION

The handgun that Shaneen Allen was carrying when she was pulled over on a New Jersey highway could have sent her to prison for years if not for a pardon from Republican Governor Chris Christie. Now the legal saga that kept the Pennsylvania mother of two in jail for 48 days has helped inspire a measure that could change handgun laws across the country. The GOP-led House passed legislation this month that would allow gun owners with a state-issued concealed-carry permit to carry a handgun in any state that allows concealed weapons. The bill faces longer odds in the Senate, which didn't vote on it before leaving for the year. Guest panelists Lisa Durden and Bob Bianchi discuss the issue.

BEAR PROTEST

A City College of New York professor is once again headed to jail for protesting New Jersey's bear hunt. A judge ordered 73-year-old psychology professor Bill Crain to spend 15 days in the Sussex County Jail. The sentence was imposed Wednesday after Crain pleaded guilty to leaving the designated protest area in Fredon on October 14th. The Poughquag, New York resident has been arrested numerous times in recent years for protesting the annual hunt. He spent just over a week in jail last winter for a similar offense. When the judge joked Wednesday that Crain's court appearances were becoming an annual event, Crain told him he probably wouldn't see him next year. That's because Democratic Governor-elect Phil Murphy plans to impose a moratorium on the hunt. Guest panelists Lisa Durden and Bob Bianchi discuss the issue.

BRING BACK TUB TUB

A 9-year-old Pomeranian slated to be a mother's only Christmas gift for her 5-year-old twin girls was stolen from a New Jersey shelter the day before, and advocates are now offering a $500 reward for information that brings the pup home. "I'm very heartbroken over the situation," said Domonique Searight, the mom who intended to gift her twin daughters the 9-year-old pup named Tub Tub. But Tub Tub was pinched from the Monmouth County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' Eatontown shelter around noon on Sunday, the Monmouth SPCA says. Tub Tub lived in the kennel just a week since being surrendered by its owner in South Carolina, who could no longer care for him.
