This week we host from The Museum of the American Revolution and speak with President and CEO, Dr. R. Scott Stephenson. The Philadelphia Center for Gun Violence Reporting was launched to explore the ways in which news reporting on gun violence can be harmful and incomplete. Since its launch, the project has worked with over 64 gun violence victims. Therapist Alphonso Nathan hopes his docuseries "Healing The Culture," will help people from marginalized communities get the help they need by shining light on others' mental health journey and sending the message, "It is okay to get help." The Center Theater in Norristown, PA, is one of the oldest theaters in Montgomery County, and highlights the influential historian, author, bibliophile, and collector of books, Charles Blockson. Cathie Berrey with Beaumond Originals seeks to tell "unorthodox and unique" stories of the Philadelphia community through her photography and videography.
