MICROBREWERY RESTRICTIONS NJ

Last summer, bar and tavern owners, many of them from South Jersey, began removing New Jersey-brewed craft beers from their menus, in order to protest state legislation that, they believed, would create new competitors for their eating and drinking establishments. This local spin on dumping tea into Boston Harbor must have achieved its desired result, because proposals to lift certain restrictions on Garden State microbreweries never got through the Legislature. The bills have been introduced again for the 2018-2019 session, but they again appear to be going nowhere fast.

GOV. MURPHY ON NJ ECONOMY

New Jersey Governor Phil Murphy on Monday unveiled a proposal he says could jump-start the state's lagging economy by auctioning off tax credits to attract private venture capital investment and to overhaul how the state doles out tax incentives. Murphy delivered the speech at ON3, a medical-biotech development campus in Nutley, before hundreds of business, Cabinet officials and lawmakers.

BUZZ KILL

Last summer, bar and tavern owners, many of them from South Jersey, began removing New Jersey-brewed craft beers from their menus, in order to protest state legislation that, they believed, would create new competitors for their eating and drinking establishments. Proposals to lift certain restrictions on Garden State microbreweries never got through the Legislature. The bills have been introduced again for the 2018-2019 session, but they again appear to be going nowhere fast. The proposed laws, no doubt backed by the craft brewers, would lift a restriction that requires the operations to give compulsory "tours" to on-site visitors, every time, before they could pay to sample the wares.

PEDESTRIANS KILLED

At least a dozen people were struck and killed on New Jersey roads in September as the days get shorter and traffic increased after the summer. The particularly deadly month increased the total pedestrian fatalities for the state in the first nine months of the year to 115. That's one less than the total for all of 2017, which was the worst year for pedestrian deaths in 24 years.

A New Jersey mother has written a book about the importance of knowing your family's medical history after she found out that she carried the gene that made her susceptible to certain types of cancer. Millstone resident Shannon Pulaski says that her mother was diagnosed with ovarian cancer seven years ago then she found out that she was also at high risk. Pulaski tested positive for the breast cancer susceptibility gene (BRCA1), which increases a woman's chance to developing breast and ovarian cancers. She says that she wanted to decrease those chances by undergoing preventative surgery.

TRANSGENDER POLICY

It's one of the most delicate and potentially combustible questions schools can face. A teenager confides in a teacher that he or she is transgender and wants to transition at school without any family finding out about it. Should the school call the student's parents? And, if it does, what happens if mom and dad say no? After years of school officials using their own best judgment, New Jersey has weighed in, siding with students and telling schools they must allow kids to change genders, even if their parents don't know about or don't want it to happen. LGBT advocates are celebrating the new state guidance, saying it puts New Jersey among the national leaders in protecting transgender students from unaccepting or abusive parents. But parent and family groups argue schools should never keep such a significant and consequential secret from parents, who should have a right to know if their child says they are transgender.

The story was first reported by the digital news site SaveJersey. Active military officers are entitled to cast their votes by e-mail, but since a ballot was mailed to him at the family residence in Monmouth Beach, he will be ineligible to vote that way in the November 6 mid-term election. Guadagno, who also served as New Jersey's top election official during her eight years as Secretary of State, is questioning whether he son "has been disenfranchised under the new law." FREE THE GRAPES

Six years ago, the New Jersey Legislature relented and joined most states in allowing residents to have wine shipped to their homes. But unlike most other states, there was a catch: Jerseyans could only get delivery of wine from small wineries. Lawmakers and a coalition led by California wineries are working to change that, with bipartisan legislation that would allow direct shipments of wines from vineyards of all sizes to the state. This could make it easier for New Jerseyans to buy some hard-to-find wines and bring an additional $4 million to the state's coffers in fees and taxes.

NJ HEALTH DEPARTMENT REPORT ON WANAQUE CENTER

A nursing assistant removed a soiled diaper from a severely disabled child, then, still wearing the same pair of gloves, attached a respiratory tube to the child. In another case, after a respiratory therapist placed a breathing mask on a disabled child, she removed her gloves and without washing her hands went to a second patient's room and picked a medical device off the floor and attached it to the resident's foot. Then she failed to wash her hands again before entering a third patient's room. CHRISTMAS LIGHTS

Each year, for the past 15 years, Thomas and Kris Apruzzi have decorated their home in Old Bridge Township for Christmas and each year, many came from miles around to see it. As time went on, the extent of the Apruzzis decorating began to draw families and children to see the display from the far reaches of New Jersey. Now, the township of Old Bridge is trying to force the Apruzzis to turn the lights off permanently after fielding complaints from the neighborhood Grinches, one of them being the town's mayor himself.

CASH GRAB FOLO

People that grabbed coins and cash off Route 3 after the door of a Brinks truck opened should return the cash, according to police. East Rutherford police reported calls at 8:30 a.m. on Thursday morning that an armored truck was spilling cash along Route 3 westbound near MetLife Stadium. Motorists ditched their vehicles and running around grabbing the money which caused multiple crashes. An individual would be likely be charged with theft but it depends on how much they took, according to former Morris County Prosecutor Robert Bianchi said. And that could be hard for prosecutors to prove, he said.

GENDER SANTA

A new survey found that over 27% of people asked would rebrand Santa Claus as a woman or gender-neutral. The survey by the logo-making company Graphics Springs asked the public in the United States and the United Kingdom, "If you could 'rebrand' Santa for modern society, what gender would he be?" Over 10% of the people surveyed said that Santa should be a woman and over 17% said that Santa should be gender-neutral.

HOLLAND TUNNEL DECORATIONS

Commuters' true feelings over holiday decorations at the Holland Tunnel will be unveiled Monday. The Port Authority unveiled the results of a poll regarding the decorations over the Holland Tunnel. The poll comes after a Change.org petition garnered thousands of signatures to move the tree decoration to hang over the "A" in "Holland Tunnel." Its current placement over the "N" has garnered complaints that it's an eyesore for many.

MURPHY NJ TRANSIT POSITIVE TRAIN CONTROL ANNOUNCEMENT

Governor Phil Murphy announced that the state will meet its deadline to install positive train control on all NJ Transit rail lines by the end of the year. Murphy touted the achievement, saying it took years too long to advance PTC implementation under the previous administration. The move will bring New Jersey into compliance with federally mandated requirements.

MORE NJ TRANSIT CANCELLATIONS

The state Legislature on Monday passed an NJ Transit reform bill that lawmakers said won't solve all the plagued system's problems but should make it more accountable and responsive to riders. The legislation, which sponsors said was borne from tens of hours of public hearings investigating the problems at the transit agency, would revise the makeup of its board, mandate public meetings, create an ethics officer to investigate unethical conduct and illegal activity and protect whistleblowers, require regular audits and submit multi-year budgets to the Legislature.

SANTA VS. PARENTS

For children from poor families, this time of year can seem especially harsh and cruel. If there was something the rest of us could do to alleviate just a tiny bit of their suffering, a way to temper their feelings of low self-worth, it would seem like a no-brainer, right? Yet one simple idea that could do just that has been met with a surprising level of resistance. Parents: please stop giving your kids big-ticket gifts from Santa. Children inevitably compare notes and kids from less fortunate families will wonder why Santa only brought them socks and a coloring book when he brought Suzie from down the street an iPad.

WRESTLER'S DREADLOCKS

The family for Buena Regional High School wrestler Andrew Johnson released a statement through an attorney on Monday stating referee Alan Maloney was late to the meet and didn't address the length of Johnson's hair at a customary pre-match meeting. He then issued an ultimatum for the junior to cut his hair or forfeit his bout against Oakcrest Wednesday just before the bout was set to begin. Johnson consented to having his hair cut before going out on the mat and winning by sudden victory in Buena's 41-24 win over Oakcrest. A video of a visibly distraught Johnson having his hair cut and winning the match posted by SJN's Mike Frankel went viral with many comments suggesting asking the dreadlocked wrestler to cut his hair was racially-motivated.

RESCUED COW GIVES BIRTH

Just a few short days after her daring run down Route 80, recently rescued Brianna the cow gave birth to a female calf Saturday afternoon. Brianna fell 8 feet out of the second level of a truck headed to a Paterson slaughterhouse around 2:45 a.m. on Thursday night. She wandered around the highway until Skylands Animal Sanctuary and Rescue came to corral her. The slaughterhouse decided to let Skylands keep her, so she will join another 70 cows in the sanctuary.
