ISSUE: Health concerns during the holiday season

PROGRAM: Life Issues

DURATION: 26 min.

AIRE: 12/6/20, 7 pm

DESCRIPTION: Host Don Wight and Lori Shemek, nationally known speaker, TV guest and author of "Fire Up Your Fat Burn" and "How To Fight FATflamation" discussed the challenges people face in making healthy eating choices during the holidays and when times are stressful. Dr. Shemek also explained the serious problems that inflammation caused by too much unhealthy sugar can cause, such as diabetes, heart disease and cancer. Dr. Shemek explained the negative tie between brain chemistry and sugar intake. She also discussed the addictive nature of sugar and that it is a form of addiction that is as destructive as other forms of addiction. Dr. Shemek suggests that moderation, especially during the holidays can be contained by making firm decisions to limit sugar and committing to making firm decisions ahead of time and to have a plan to do healthier things when being tempted to eat sugar when tired, depressed or when feeling like a victim that needs to be rewarded.

ISSUE: Barriers and benefits of manure use in fields

PROGRAM: Beefwatch

DURATION: 15 min.

AIRED: 11/7/20, 330 pm

DESCRIPTION: University of Nebraska Extension Educator Aaron Berger and a panel of experts discussed the benefits and problems that can be encountered in using manure in cropping systems. They also discussed a survey and input from 957 farmers and their advisers to get their perspective on this issue. A wide range of challenges associated with animal manure, such as the cost of transporting manure were discussed. They pointed out that as manure is moved greater distances costs can exceed manure value. Berger and the experts encouraged farmers to carefully plan out and weigh the overall costs when making management decisions about using manure and fertilizer. The survey revealed that planning a fertility program that takes advantage of the strengths of both manure and fertilizer improves the opportunity for yield gains for new users of manure.

ISSUE: Frosted forage dangers for cattle and cattle producers

PROGRAM: Beefwatch

DURATION: 15 min.

AIRED: 10/10/20, 2:30 pm

DESCRIPTION: Nebraska Extension Educator Aaron Berger discussed the dangers that exist for grazing cattle when some forages are frosted. Berger explained that when grazing alfalfa in the fall, bloat remains a potential problem to cattle, especially during the first 3-5 days after alfalfa has been exposed to freezing temperatures. Berger says when grazing sorghums, forage or grain, sorghum-sudangrass hybrids, and sudangrass, certain conditions may cause livestock to be poisoned by prussic acid. Frost is one of these conditions. Berger says producers should remove cattle before a frost and then wait 5-7 days after the frost to turn livestock onto these plants. Another option is to wait several days after the entire plant and shoots are killed by subsequent frost before grazing.

KLWD/KWCF ISSUES/PROGRAMS- 4TH QUARTER 2020

ISSUE: Coronavirus pandemic and its impact on Wyoming residents

PROGRAM: Gov. Mark Gordon press conference

DURATION: 30 min.

AIRED: 12/7/20, 2 pm

DESCRIPTION: Wyoming Gov. Mark Gordon, citing rising COVID-19 hospitalizations and deaths, announced a new statewide indoor face mask order and further restrictions on gathering sizes and reduced hours for certain businesses. The order goes into effect Dec. 9th and extends to Jan. 8th. Dr. Alexia Harrist, State Health Officer, explained that 16 Wyoming counties already have a mask mandate and expressed hope that the further measures being taken will slow the case rate as well as hospitalizations and deaths in the state. Gov. Gordon explained that Wyoming counties can opt out of the restrictions as COVID-19 transmission rates fall below benchmarks designated by the White House guidelines. Gordon also said federal COVID relief dollars from the CARES Act will expire at the end of the month. He urges businesses needing to participate in the program to move as quickly as possible in applying.

ISSUE: Beef replacement heifer value for 2020-2021 production season

PROGRAM: Beefwatch

DURATION: 15 min.

AIRED: 12/26/20, 3:30 pm

DESCRIPTION: Nebraska Extension Educators Aaron Berger, Randy Saner, T.L. Meyer and Matt Stockton discussed the factors involved in determining a respectable heifer value for the coming 2020-21 production season. They discussed the four factors that affect value for both retained and purchased replacements; longevity, costs vs. value, genetic and phenotypical compatibility with herd mates and operator goals and management styles. They also pointed out that producers must know two things about their operation; the annual cost of production per cow and the replacement rate, the number of heifers needed to replace culled cows.
