PUBLIC AFFAIRS PROGRAMS THAT ADDRESS COMMUNITY ISSUES

KINK (FM) "PUBLIC AFFAIRS SHOW":

This locally produced program originates with interviews exploring general topics on a local and state level: from education and youth issues, to crime and political measures affecting our local community.

FOURTH QUARTER, 2023
(October 1st – December 31st)

MOST SIGNIFICANT ISSUES - RESPONSIVE PROGRAMMING

ISSUE: HEALTH / COVID

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIRS

October 1st, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

10:25 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Ashish Jha, Former White House Covid Response Coordinator. Dr. Jha focuses on Covid's current wave, and its impact on the most vulnerable people. Where he says we are right now, in the pandemic, is that we're in a state of a new normal. He says that does not mean we should overlook the long Covid risks to the elderly and immunocompromised. But he believes it's incorrect to believe that with long Covid, anyone can get struck down with debilitating symptoms, even if they're otherwise healthy, young and don't have underlying risk factors.

ISSUE: HEALTH / COVID

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIRS

October 1st, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

9:48 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Paul Cieslak, Oregon Health Authority. Dr. Cieslak is the Medical Director for Communicable Diseases and Immunizations at the Oregon Health Authority. He says there's already an early uptick in Oregon's COVID infections and hospitalizations. What most worries them, is a combination of flu, R.S.V., and the latest strain of Covid 19 overwhelming local hospitals. He touts the benefits of new vaccines for all three illnesses.

ISSUE: HEALTH / COVID

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 1st, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

8:02 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Katie Sharff, Kaiser Permanente NW Chief of Infectious Disease. She also is worried about an uptick in infections swamping Oregon's hospitals, but points out there are new weapons against RSV, including vaccinations available for people age 60 and better, pregnant women, and a brand new one for babies. She says the new Covid vaccine should be widely available in Oregon within weeks. And that people need to not discount the flu, it still causes thousands of deaths and a vaccine is available for it, too.

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

8:55 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Petros Levounis, President, American Psychiatric Association. Dr. Petros Levounis is the President of the American Psychiatric Association. I talked to him about overdoses and deaths in children in the Portland area, and also: what the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration warns as the deadliest drug threat our country's ever faced, the mix of fentanyl and xylazine. He says he thinks Oregon's decision to teach kids about fentanyl in schools is a positive development, and says polling shows a majority of Americans are ready to talk about drug addiction with their children and loved ones. He describes the red flags to watch for, and says don't wait for your loved one to hit rock bottom. Express your love and concern early when there are signs of trouble with addiction. He talks about 988, the new suicide helpline

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

4:20 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Portland Police Captain Jake Jensen. The Portland area's suffered at least 10 overdose cases and five deaths among children recently, mostly linked to fentanyl. We hear from Portland Police Captain Jake Jensen, with the Narcotics and Organized Crime Unit, who has a strong message for local families. He says these are 12 year old or 5 year old children whose lives have been drastically altered, or ended due to fentanyl. He has children the same age, and says this is unacceptable. It mirrors what's going on overall: 240 overdose deaths so far this year including adults, it's a record amount for the Portland area.

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

5:02 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Oregon Congresswoman Suzanne Bonamici. She describes meeting with parents Jon and Jennifer Epstein who lost their son Cal, when he took a fake pill containing fentanyl and it killed him. Only 36% of kids are aware of fake pills that contain fentanyl. She points to a program the Epsteins started in Beaverton Schools, to teach about the dangers. She and Congressman Kiley have introduced a bi partisan bill to mirror this program in schools nationwide. It would include both education and data collection to save lives. She also answers several questions from KXL's Jim Ferretti regarding why and whether it could take an act of Congress, literally, to make this happen so schools educate students about the danger and what's being done to stop drug trafficking.

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

2:05 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: California Congressman Kevin Kiley. Fentanyl is the leading cause of death in teens and young adults, including 200 deaths daily in California. He says there's story after story of promising young lives cut short. He says the smallest of doses can be fatal, but many teens and families don't know how severe the risk is.

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:50 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Laura Didier. Her son Zack lost his life because of one fake pill containing fentanyl. He is buried in a cemetery instead of going to college as he had planned at this time. This crisis is multifaceted and will require a lot of different approaches, but she is supporting the legislation.

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

3:01 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Kristen Gustafson, Beaverton Schools. Beaverton Schools have a curriculum to teach kids about this danger of fake and fatal pills containing fentanyl. Kristen Gustafson is the school district's Drug and Alcohol Intervention Program Educator. She sympathizes with parents because she is a mother of teenagers herself. She talks about the Epstein family's tragic loss of their son Cal and how Beaverton Schools started a community conversation with students, and parents and created lessons with health experts and teachers, so all 6th-12th grade students receive drug prevention lessons throughout the school year. They are planning on adding training on how to teach kids to recognize and overdose, and how to use naloxone. They are also partnering with law enforcement and community organizations.

ISSUE: DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 8th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

2:20 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Ed Ternan, Founder, Song for Charlie. A parent active in this issue, he and his wife Laura are co-founders of the Song for Charlie non-profit, which joins together families who've lost kids to fentanyl poisoning, and they champion knowledge about this issue. He says kids and parents are finally starting to learn and understand the danger, he says it is important to have these discussions in the classroom with input from health experts. He talks about the Beaverton School District's model as a curriculum that could work nationally.

ISSUE: VIOLENCE SURVIVOR

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

3:22 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Roy Moore, Founder, Healing Hurt People. Roy Moore is a gun violence survivor, and the co-director of the Community Care team for Healing Hurt People. He says he witnessed his best friend being shot and killed, has been shot himself and knows what it's like to be in hospital bed. He says an evidence based best strategy is to show up within 4 hours of a traumatic event and start their work at the emergency room bedside, he's intentional with hiring people with similar lived experience. He experienced post traumatic stress disorder, so he uses trauma therapy, and has 14 people enrolled in it right now. He explains that removing person from area, and relocating them, significantly lowers their risk of becoming a victim of gun violence again. He says he currently has 60 people in case management, helping them change their lives.

ISSUE: GUN VIOLENCE PREVENTION

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:32 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Kathleen Carlson, O.H.S.U. Gun Violence Prevention Research Center. Carlson is the Director of the Oregon Health Science University Gun Violence Prevention Research Center. She says there is so much work going on now, and so much more that needs to be done on this problem. Using a public health approach means, it's not a gun rights versus gun violence issue. They're using multi layered approaches, to find causes of gun violence. What can we do right now, and in years to come, that will be most effective? Gun violence does not have easy solutions, it's necessary to partner with multiple agencies and experts.

ISSUE: SHOOTINGS / PREVENTION

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

4:01 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Mackenzie Cook is a surgery professor at O.H.S.U. He is also serving as their Assistant Trauma Medical Director. His work often involves trying to save lives after gun violence. Cook says 2022 shooting numbers are down from 2021, but still much higher than years past. He treats gunshot victims on a daily and weekly basis. He says bullets are designed to kill and injure and the injuries are physical, psychological and social. He advocates for civilian hemorrhage control, training people to stop bleeding. Through the American College of Surgeons, they have trained about 3 million people nationally. What he needs as a trauma surgeon is time. The faster you get the victims to the hospital, the better chance he has to save their life. He says he is saving people with injuries that 5 to 10 years ago would have been fatal. Gunshot victims suffer psychological damage from trauma, p.t.s.d., depression, and social repercussions. If they're shot it's still a life changing event even if a surgeon saves their life. Prevention is essential. The Healing Hurt People program has been game changing.

ISSUE: SHOOTINGS / MENTAL HEALTH

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

4:35 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Michael Zalanka, Legacy Health. Along with physical injuries, gunshot victims also cope with serious mental health issues. Dr. Michael Zalanka, is a psychiatrist, with Legacy Health, treating many of these patients. He grew up in suburban Chicago and one of his friends committed suicide with his father's loaded revolver, He was 12 years old, saw grieving and learned early that every suicide is a type of mass casualty event. He works at a Level 1 Trauma Center, Legacy Emanuel, and sees people after suffering gun violence from suicide attempts, and with post traumatic stress disorder due to mass shootings with four or more victims. It's becoming more common to see people who have survived after trying to kill themselves. Statistics show Oregon has a 40 percent higher suicide attempt rate than the national average. His job involves tragedy prevention, using a model from U.C. Davis, He recommends using lock boxes and safes to keep firearms stored safely. He talks about the use of voluntary temporary transfer, mental health holds, extreme risk protective orders, and domestic violence restrictions on weapons.

ISSUE: CRIMINAL JUSTICE REFORM

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

4:43 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Lt. Ken Duilio, Portland Police. Lieutenant Ken Duilio, is the Director of the Portland Police Bureau's Focused Intervention Team to Reduce Firearms Violence in Portland. He says record levels of gun violence in Portland, have really escalated, to 4 times more than the level from before the George Floyd Case. Now they are rebuilding, many officers have quit and retired. Mayor Ted Wheeler hired the National Institute for Criminal Justice Reform to train police on a cease fire strategy, looking at it as a public health issue. This includes the individual who is shot, the retaliation, the family. They seek to identify the people who are most at risk of gun violence as either a perpetrator or victim, then make referrals for mentoring, mental health, jobs programs, and life coaching. Siera Ellis is in charge of new program connecting services and police to prevent gun violence in Portland. This year the homicide rate is down in Portland but there's still a long way to go to get back to pre-2020 levels.

ISSUE: SHOOTINGS / VICTIMS / SURGERY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

3:06 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Mubeen Jafri, Pediatric Surgeon. Some of the worst tragedies involve children who are victims of gun violence, according to Dr. Mubeen Jafri, an associate professor of pediatric surgery in O.H.S.U, Doernbecher Children's Hospital. He says the impact of gun violence on children is an epidemic and pandemic in and of itself. In 2021 gun injuries became leading cause of death in kids, surpassing car wrecks for the first time. Gun violence is now the top killer of all kids, and it isn't just a problem that impacts one community. He took care of a 4 year old who shot and killed their 4 year old twin. The amount of guns in the community is the horse that's out of the barn. O.H.S.U. has event on October 28th at their Tom Sergeant Safety Center. They will have a gun safety program giving away free gun safety locks. He recommends bringing stop the bleeding program to schools, so teachers and school staff learn how to stop bleeding from gunshot injuries.

ISSUE: MENTAL HEALTH

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 15th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

5:20 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Katie Iossi, Portland V.A. Medical Center. Dr. Katie Iossi is an O.H.S.U. Professor and she also works with the Portland V.A. Health Care System. She says the V.A. trains doctors to counsel patients who are at high risk of suicide, primarily by guns. Veterans often own guns, so she says doctors have to talk to them about the issue as one impacting their health and safety. When she brings up firearms to them she cites statistics showing that people with firearms in their homes are 4 times more likely to die by suicide and 2-3 times more likely to die by homicide. She says she's convincing veterans she is not going to put them on a registry or take their guns away. She says having a credible messenger can make patients more likely to have better results. Clinicians fear addressing firearms, but owners are open to these conversations.

ISSUE: HOUSING

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 22nd, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

2:55 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Katrina Holland, Urban League of Portland. She is the Urban League of Portland's housing director. She says growing homelessness is a tragedy, and we look to our elected leaders to find solutions. We see steps that are vital, with housing and wrap around services to maximize success, and eradicate homelessness or at least makes it short if it occurs, including tenant protections and catching people before they fall off a cliff. She says solutions include shoring it up with staffing, adequate medical professionals and counselors, expanding transitional shelter beyond emergency shelters, constantly creating more opportunities to create more affordable housing, can all help to maximize people we get inside so they can stay inside.

ISSUE: HOUSING

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 22nd, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

6:12 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Oregon State Rep. Maxine Dexter. She represents Oregon House District 33, including downtown and NW Portland. She is a practicing physician and what she tries to address in the hospital emergency room is what she's also trying to address as a state representative. We must prioritize people having food and housing, they are basic needs. In the legislative session of 2023 the state allocated $200 million in funds for the governor's executive order, and built on land use laws, make housing the top goal. Production of housing for the next hundred years is the first priority, while protecting the environment and the urban growth boundary. Lawmakers also made investments in student housing. The legislature's 2024 session starts in February, and she is building lists for what they want to accomplish including addressing gaps we didn't get to in the first session. She's working with the governor to deliver on housing after getting more revenue than expected. She is the leader of the housing committee in the Oregon House of Representatives. For 2025 her goal is solutions for housing medically complex elders, a vulnerable population, and a landlord registry with rental properties. She says we are at a critical moment in Oregon to ensure people have safe and affordable housing.

ISSUE: HOUSING

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 22nd, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

4:02 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Oregon State Senator Kayse Jama. He represents District 24, including outer east Portland and northern parts of Clackamas County. He agrees with Representative Dexter's vision that they must have a successful effort to prioritize affordable housing. He started working in this issue in a social justice organization. He was a renter for 12 years of his marriage, and wants to make sure people who are impacted most are able to address this issue. There's a framework that housing must be a fundamental human right, must ensure people can stay in their homes, and make sure people have access off the streets and into shelters, and must increase supply of homes, and programs to help people buy them. He says a senate bill capped rent increases, and lawmakers worked with the governor's office to provide $200 million for shelters and shelter beds. He emphasizes first time home buyer programs, and says the state needs to build 140,000 units, says we've been underbuilding for decades. We've invested 4 billion dollars, but we need to invest more.

ISSUE: HOUSING

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 22nd, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

7:48 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Multnomah County Chair Jessica Vega Pederson. Vega Pederson says in addition to being the Multnomah County Chair, she is also the chair of a new committee addressing housing along with the city of Portland. She says the county board passed $62.5 million dollars of one time funding for homeless services. She described it as the most collaborative effort she's seen to make people successful in housing, including rental assistance for those at high risk of homelessness. Also included are more shelter beds, behavioral health, services and homelessness prevention resources. 6.85 million dollars for a stabilization center, 30-90 days where people can sober up and not be on the street. She says these are things that the state, city and county can do right away. She says we also need policies that make it easier to build new housing.

ISSUE: HOUSING

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 22nd, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

8:02 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Portland City Commissioner Carmen Rubio. Rubio now leads the City of Portland's housing and homelessness initiatives, including permitting for housing builders, and planning. She has been overseeing the bureau for 10 months. She describes her journey, as a housing insecure child, moving 12 times before she turned 14 years old, and from that experience knows how grounding housing is for families. She also worked with non profits that help people in low income and Latino communities to get into housing. We know the housing crisis is not a new issue. The rising prices have been underway for a long time. We're experiencing a severely underfunded housing eco-system. With the support of voters, $400 million dollars in bonds have been allocated for affordable housing.

ISSUE: CIVIL RIGHTS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 29th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

25:33 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Jonathan Eig. The author of a new book about Martin Luther King Junior, came to Portland, to be the first speaker of the Oregon Historical Society's latest Mark Hatfield Lecture Series. Jonathan Eig says he spent 6 years researching the civil rights leader's life, and writing, "King, a Life." I talked to him, about King's story, and how it links to current events going on in Portland, such as the Black Lives Matter protests that broke out in Oregon after the killing of George Floyd in Minneapolis. We also discussed how there are still economic disparities in Oregon and throughout the world. We talked about the tendency for groups of people to see other groups and classify them as inferior.

ISSUE: CIVIL RIGHTS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

October 29th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

2:14 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Judge Adrienne Nelson. Adrienne Nelson, made history herself, as the first Black woman to become a federal judge in Oregon. She explains how important King's legacy was in influencing her own life, and that he fought a battle that enabled her to achieve her goals.

ISSUE: CONFLICT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 5th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

24:20 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Professor Emeritus Joel Beinin. Local families are in grief or anxiously waiting for word about whether their loved ones have survived, as the conflict between Israel and Hamas intensifies. I talked to a Portlander whose family members have been kidnapped. And he also has unique insight on this situation. Joel Beinin and his family have been waiting every day, hoping they'll hear from his niece Liat, and her husband Aviv. Hamas attacked their community in Israel and took them hostage on October 7th. He has not heard anything about their condition or survival since then. Overall, the suffering has intensified he says. Many are starving, and many more are dead in the airstrikes including innocent children. Beinin worked as a Professor of Middle East History at Stanford University, before retiring and moving to Portland in 2018.

ISSUE: CONFLICT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 5th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

3:30 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus. Horrific, beyond description. That's how the leader of the World Health Organization describes what's happened in Israel and Gaza, since the Hamas attacks last month. Dr. Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, is the director general of the W H O, and spoke out about the dire health situation in Gaza and Israel. He describes how basic survival is impacted with little food, medicine and clean water, able to get to the people who need it, and that many children are dying in the airstrikes.

ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

24:53 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley, Oregon. I listened in as the Oregon League of Conservation voters held a town hall, about stronger safeguards for the environment, bringing pollinators back, and protections for Oregon's famous canyon lands, carved by desert rivers winding toward the Pacific Ocean, the last great unprotected expanse of the American West, and home to a rich array of wildlife. The town hall started out with Oregon U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley, who also talked about the benefits for Oregon that are likely with new federal climate investments, plastics reduction, and his work to support pollinator recovery. He estimate Oregon should get $3.5-$4 billion dollars from the Inflation Reduction Act for projects like planting and maintaining trees, expanding access to nature, cool heat islands and low and no emission vehicles.

ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

:45 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Clark Brockman. He says he lives Northeast Portland and is an architect focused on climate policy and advocacy. He asks, "Are there things that you and the Senate as a whole can do to help all of the affected federal agencies deploy and publicize the available funding from the IRA, the BIL, and the CHIPS Act?" He says he's concerned that the Pacific Northwest is going to leave money on the table.

ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

:17 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Metzin Rodriguez. Rodriguez is the Climate and Environmental Justice Policy Coordinator for Unite Oregon. She asks about electrification and building climate resilience.

ISSUE: FARMING / WATER

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

:42 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Donna Champeau. Champeau serves on the Polk County Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Directors. She also has a 160 acre farm in the Willamette Valley. She says on her farm, she's working to transition to methods of regenerative farming. She wants to know if the reauthorization of the Farm Bill this year will help in her efforts.

ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

:28 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Gretchen Valido. The Bend resident and Sierra Club member leader, she wants an update about Oregon U.S. Senator Ron Wyden's Senate Bill 1890, which adds permanent protection to parts of the Owyhee Canyonlands.

ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

:20 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Renne Windsor White. Renee Windsor White lives in Lebanon, Oregon and is interested in what the federal government is doing with pollinators. She asks, “Are there any specific programs that the federal government has in place or is planning to help and support honeybees and monarch butterflies?”

ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 12th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

:33 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Keely Wang. Wang lives Happy Valley, Oregon, and asks about specific initiatives or actions for environmental justice and equity, and prioritizing youth and indigenous communities. She also asks about what measures are going after corporate polluters to take accountability?

ISSUE: MENTAL HEALTH

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:50 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Multnomah Co Commission Chari Jessica Vega Pederson. She opens this talk about the crisis services and the needs around crisis services in Multnomah County. She says everyone has important perspectives to bring not as experts, but as people tasked with policy direction and increasing community voice on this topic. She notes this is also a chance to exchange ideas. The interventions they’re talking about span very complex systems of care. She says they must invest in providing people experiencing mental illness and substance use disorders with the resources that they need to live healthier lives.

ISSUE: HEALTH / DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

3:51 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Multnomah County Commissioner Julia Brim-Edwards. Brim-Edwards in charge of coming up with a plan for a new sobering and crisis center. She details work over the next several months. On September 28th, the Multnomah Commission approved a set of investments, including $6.8 million for a 24-7 stabilizing center with emergency detox. And then the Chair tapped her to lead the planning and design work for the reestablishment of a 24-7 sobering center with a directive that it be ready for the commission to consider as part of the 2024- 25 budget cycle. She says they're shooting for having something no later than March 1st, because sobering services were highlighted by this board, first responders and the community as a whole, as a critical need.

ISSUE: HEALTH / DRUGS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

4:03 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Gresham Police Captain John Rasmussen. Rasmussen supervises operations for Gresham including the behavioral health unit and all street patrol response. He says when they're dealing with somebody who is intoxicated to a level that's concerning, there's limited options they can use. A sobering center closing took away option number one. Then the pandemic hit with an increase in mental health cases. He believes the passage of Measure 110 has brought more drug use in public.

ISSUE: HEALTH / SAFETY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:30 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Portland Police Commander Rob Simon. The opening of a sobering center would benefit both the community and first response system in Multnomah County. From a police specific perspective he says they recognize this is not a treatment model, it is a non criminal solution for an acute problem that we're facing. People on the street who are unable to care for themselves due to intoxicants often are victimizers. There are some victims, victimizers and victimized. T So there's a definite need for a non criminal solution for people who are unable to care for themselves before they become victimized.

ISSUE: HEALTH / SAFETY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:50 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Portland Police Sergeant Sarah Taylor. She says they're getting several calls for service on the same person and potentially several people with several calls for service over the course of the day. Ambulances aren't available and jail is not a good option. So having a place to take these people would make the community feel safer.

ISSUE: HEALTH / SAFETY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:50 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Portland Police Commander Craig Dobson. He has the entertainment district in his area, and every weekend he has individuals who end up in a state where they've had too much to drink or have taken some other substance and are unable to care for themselves. The sobering center would allow them that opportunity to get those folks to a place that's safe, compassionate, and off the street where they can't be victimized as well. In the summertime, they have up to 30,000 individuals in those areas in the entertainment district and need to have a place to take them.

ISSUE: HEALTH / SAFETY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

1:00 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Multnomah County Commissioner Lori Stegman. She questions whether people who are intoxicated and need the services are going to agree to go to a sobering center, especially the high acuity folks.

ISSUE: HEALTH / SAFETY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 19th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

5:03 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Multnomah County Commissioner Dr. Sharon Meieran. She is an emergency room doctor and volunteers with Portland Street Response. She says what the others said resonates exactly with what she's seen, that most people actually end up voluntarily going. In the emergency departments, they can hold people for mental illness, up to 72 hours if they're an imminent danger to themselves or others. They have the authority to hold someone for 48 hours if they suspect someone is acutely intoxicated.

ISSUE: FARMING

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

November 26th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

11:40 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Andrea Salinas, U.S. Congresswoman, Oregon. In January of this year, newly elected Oregon Congresswoman Andrea Salinas joined the Agriculture Committee. They have the task of reauthorizing this year's Farm Bill, which happens once every five years. It's an omnibus multi year law that governs an array of agricultural and food programs, including crop insurance for farmers and access to healthy foods for low income families. Salinas says she is holding listening sessions because the Farm Bill is going to be significant for her district. She is meeting with farmers, rural stakeholders, and workers to hear about the challenges they're facing and to identify how the federal government can better serve Oregonians and treat the land better. She says she sees firsthand how the deck is stacked against small family farms. She has introduced 2 bills, the "Healthy Soils, Healthy Climate Act," and the "Soil Care Act." She says they would give farmers the tools they need to improve soil health and be more resilient in extreme weather and climate events.

Guest: Michael Basquez. P.C.U.N. trade union for farm workers, National Policy Coordinator. His role as P.C.U.N.'s National Policy Coordinator is to ensure that lawmakers pass and protect farmworkers rights at the federal level. In the last couple of years, he says farm workers have seen a rise in temperatures, drought, and other effects resulting in lost wages and even deaths. The climate is a big factor in keeping his community safe and thriving. At the state level, he says they were able to push for excessive heat and heat smoke rules through the agency rulemaking process, and that would protect farm workers from being exploited working in inhumane conditions. He hopes to bring a similar approach to the federal level with disaster relief.

Guest: Alice Morrison, Director, Friends of Family Farmers. She says the 1600 Oregon farmers that Friends of Family Farmers represents have seen climate change impact them, in the ongoing drought, changes to the water landscape, and a general lack of predictability in season conditions year to year. There have been many more natural disasters, including wildfires, ice storms, heat domes and changing seasonal conditions in general. So, she says, the way that people have farmed in Oregon for generations or even for the last 10 years are now almost irrelevant and they have to keep adapting over and over. She is calling for disaster relief because there always will be a climate driven natural disaster every season. But she also says they need to focus on resilience, helping people accommodate these new conditions and plan for the inevitability of these disasters moving forward so that they don't have the big impact that they have over the last few years.

Guest: Ben Larson, Co-owner/operator, My Brother's Farm, Southern Willamette Valley. On his South Willamette Valley farm, orchard and ranch, he grows hazelnuts and apples, and raises bison and pigs. He has seen from the summer droughts, the heat stress on the trees and animals. In the winter extreme ice storms that have looked like a bomb went off in the orchards, and were devastating. He says they've been looking for adaptations, but especially in the summer the drought is paired with so much wildfire smoke that it's hard to go out and farm. He says he knows spending time out there is decreasing farmers' lifespans. It's elevated fear and uncertainty for farmers asking, should we grow into this or should we hold back and see what's going to make sense in a few years from now when these things are expected to get worse?

Guest: Ben Owens , Congresswoman Salinas' Legislative Director. He works on agriculture issues in Oregon, for Congresswoman Andrea Salinas's office. He says they do have to focus on climate change prevention in agriculture, and mitigation. That includes wildfire prevention. He says one of Salinas' bills, the Civilian Conservation Center Enhancement Act would strengthen a training program and allow direct hiring authority through the Forest Service, which would put more, trained wildland firefighters out there to try to reduce and mitigate the effects of climate driven fire disasters. He says ensuring that things like healthy soils, healthy climate and the Soil Care Act and incentives for farmers to adopt climate smart practices are also central in what his office is pushing for in the farm bill.

Guest: Amy Wade, with Right to Be. The Anti-Defamation League reports incidents of anti-semitic hate have increased to record levels in Oregon and Washington. Amy takes us through recent incidents, for a free training offered with the anti-hate group “Right to Be.” They focus on the historic and current incidents that have resulted in the discrimination and hate, centuries before the events of October 7th this year in Israel and the war in Gaza. On October 27th, 2018, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, 11 people were killed and 7 were injured in a mass shooting at the Tree of Life Walesimchah congregation in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. On January 15th, 2022, in Collieville, Texas, 4 hostages were held for over 10 hours at Congregation Beth Israel. In October 2022, throughout the country, 59 anti Semitic incidents directly referencing Yi, the artist formerly known as Kanye West, occurred from October through December across the U. S. following his anti Semitic comments on Twitter. These included 44 cases of harassment, 13 cases of vandalism, and two cases of assault. And in February of 2023, This year in Los Angeles, California, two people were shot at Point Blake Range by the same assailant within a 24 hour period in the Pico Robertson area, a Jewish neighborhood in Los Angeles. In 2022, there were approximately 3700 anti Semitic incidents officially recorded in the United States. That is a 37% increase from 2021. She explains what anti Semitic harassment actually looks like.

Guest: Tabarak Habib, with Right to Be. The Council on American Islamic Relations is also reporting an increase in incidents targeting Muslims. I listened in on these two trainers for specific steps people can take to recognize and safely intervene. Tabarak takes us through recent incidents, for their work in free trainings with the anti-hate group “Right to Be.” She focuses on the historic and current incidents that have resulted in the discrimination and hate, centuries before the events of October 7th this year in Israel and the war in Gaza. These include right after September 11, 2011 in Mesa, Arizona, a Sikh American entrepreneur and franchise owner was murdered, the first ever hate crime after 9/11, and the first ever anti Muslim hate crime that we saw on a national level. And then we, in Canada, there was a Quebec City mosque shooting, and then in New Zealand, a gunman fired open fire at a mosque, killing over 15 Muslim worshippers and injuring many others. And very recently, on October 16th of this year, a six year old Palestinian American, Wadiyan Fayyumi, was stabbed to death.

10:22 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Maxine Dexter. She explains how in congressional races, you can run for a seat that's not where you live. "We came from the Eastside, moved to the Westside when my daughter was going to start at Grant High School, and they were remodeling." She says she feels very comfortable on both sides of the river and loves both sides. She thinks she'll be a good representative for the city of Portland in Congress. Meantime she says she is invested in housing work for the last year and a half in the state legislature. The Speaker and the Majority Leader have asked her to stay on, so she says her top priority is housing production. She also supports putting health clinics in schools, and universal health care, informed by her work as a physician.

Guest: U.S. Senator Ron Wyden, Oregon. As Hanukah begins, the Senator explains why a lot of people feel their celebrations are more muted because of the war in Israel this year. He says he is talking to people from his desk in D. C. with folks in the state, who, are still dealing with these horrifying kind of situations of having relatives that they can't get to freedom. He explains that in the Wyden family it's a somber time of year, and how his relatives fled the Nazis in the 30s. Not all of them got out alive.

ISSUE: CONSPIRACY THEORY

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIR

December 10th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

6:40 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Cameron Givens, Historian. He is a co-author of a new commentary just published in Time Magazine about Pearl Harbor Day and conspiracy theories. Although the original Pearl Harbor Day December 7th spurred enormous national unity, he explains how that unity actually concealed really deep and historically grounded divisions and suspicions. He thinks it's important as we remember this event to also look at the deeper history that produced the national response to that event, namely the incarceration of Japanese Americans, including here in Oregon. He thinks they're dangerous on a number of levels. On the popular level, can serve to justify practices of discrimination, of violence. We still see this a lot today. They're also dangerous when they're absorbed and acted on by the federal state. So when suspicions and racially grounded suspicions that have no merit are translated into practices and into policy by the federal government on the grounds of national security, that's extremely dangerous. And that national security justification often lends a veneer of legitimacy. And that is the most dangerous when unfounded suspicions crystallize policies that everyone's behind the intent of them of keeping the nation safe. We all share that goal. But they're able to take these kind of broad brush, suspicions that group entire categories of people together often on the basis of say, for example, as was the case with Japanese Americans, that's extremely harmful.

Guest: Dr. Christopher McKnight Nichols. He is a co-author of a new commentary just published in Time Magazine about Pearl Harbor Day and conspiracy theories. When a crisis happens, you should anticipate that there may be hate crimes and there may be things that universities can do to. To prevent that or slow that there may be things that other communities can do. But acting as if this won't happen is probably the worst thing you can do because we know that there are historical patterns of these kinds of crimes and of these kinds of speech acts, at least, that then can lead to worse sorts of outcomes, including policy makers. There's a kind of feedback loop in this moment. We've seen this in some states where, right now, out of the pandemic, anti-Chinese kinds of sensibilities have led to attempts at passing laws, singling out partnerships with China as opposed to other countries that might also be equally worthy of sanctions by states or by the State Department.

December 17th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

Guest: Governor Tina Kotek, Oregon. She says there's progress in Portland. Times of crisis can lead to a desire for drastic change. To tear down and rebuild again and to overlook the progress that we've made in favor of something different. But when she looks at this city what she sees is potential, momentum, a fortitude to act. We have come this far and we're beginning to see what's on the other side of our challenges. And that is precisely the moment when you keep going and push even harder. That is the moment we are in. Lack of affordable housing, poverty, racism, violence and substance abuse have been issues in the city for decades, like most American cities. However, these issues have become more prevalent during and after the pandemic, the human suffering has been at a scale that we cannot afford to normalize or downplay.

Guest: Jessica Vega Pederson, Multnomah County Chair. She says the biggest concerns of people living in Multnomah County and those spending time in our central city are homelessness, lack of affordable housing, addiction, and supporting those people living in crisis on our streets. The Central City Task Force gave us a critical opportunity to bring more people into that work and collaborate across local, state, and private sectors to develop tangible goals that can keep us all accountable and focused. That has also been the most important work of the county from the moment she stepped into her office in January. Her priorities from that first moment have been moving people off the street into safer, more stable places.

December 24th, 2023

5 am to 5:30 am

9:11 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Dr. Karen Fingerman, Professor of Human Development and Family Sciences. Merry Christmas, Happy Hanukah, Happy Kwanzaa, Happy holidays... these are all important to acknowledge. Taking the time, to hand write messages and send holiday cards... doesn't just make YOU feel good. There is actual scientific research, showing it can improve the health of those you send them to, even among people you don't know extremely well. I recently joined in a talk with several experts on the topic of social connection's impact on our health. Among them, was Dr. Karen Fingerman. She's a Professor of Human Development and Family Sciences at the University of Texas Austin. She did a study about those holiday greeting cards. She says they got people to fill out a survey for each of their cards. And what they found is that these cards made a difference in terms of their sense of belonging at the holiday season, which in many ways is the opposite of loneliness. So receiving these from people they've known for a long time, who might not be a part of their life, the college roommate who only touches base once a year, enhance their sense of belonging. And what that tells us is that at the holiday season, very small gestures make a difference for other people. Different kinds of social ties enhance a sense of belonging and prevent loneliness. If you think a little bit about what the social world does for you, why does it matter? They're going to help you in a crisis. They're going to get you to the doctor. They're going to be there. They're also emotionally rewarding.

Guest: Julianne Holt Lunstad, Professor of Psychology and Neuroscience. Julianne Holt Lunstad is a Professor of Psychology and Neuroscience and the Director of the Social Connection and Health Lab at Brigham Young University. She studies the link between our social health and our physical health. She cites evidence that social connection could increase your survival by as much as 50%, reduce your risk for cardiovascular disease by 29% and stroke by 32%. It can reduce your likelihood of developing depression and dementia. It also can increase your immune responses to vaccines and viruses. And in fact, it also comes with few side effects and actually can increase your well being. Although it's not a new treatment, everyone should invest in their social connections.

Guest: Dr. Ashwin Kotwal. Dr. Ashwin Kotwal is an Assistant Professor in Geriatrics at the University of California San Francisco School of Medicine. He points out, that as we spend more time with loved ones and family members during the holidays, there are things you can do, if you notice something is not quite right, or if they are coping with a loss or life change. One key point he makes is that loneliness and social isolation are not unique to older ages. This affects us all and in recent years we've noticed that young people may be particularly vulnerable and he wants to counter some of the ageist stereotypes that are prevalent of older adults being locked away in their rooms, not engaging with the rest of society. In fact, many studies indicate that older adults tend to be more engaged with community groups and quite participatory compared to other age groups. Social isolation and loneliness impact health along many different aspects of well being for older adults. People who are lonely or isolated can have a higher mortality or shorter lifespan than we would hope, and it greatly impacts quality of life. So older adults have a greater likelihood of loss of independence that includes functional impairment, frailty and being more relegated to their home or being homebound. They're more likely to require nursing home assistance. This was just demonstrated in a recent study published in 2023 in the Journal of the American Medical Association. And they can have poorer quality of life. Loneliness is associated with higher levels of pain, depression, fatigue, poor sleep, and the cluster of these symptoms. Older adults who are lonely tend to have higher use of medications with adverse side effects, including benzodiazepines, opioids, and antidepressants. The first step is if you're noticing something is off with a loved one, or they're experiencing a major life or health transition, start a conversation, ask them how they've been feeling lately.

Guest: Oregon State Representative Maxine Dexter. Oregon State Representative Maxine Dexter, a parent with teenagers, offers her thoughts about the strike and the lessons learned from it. Her son was a senior this year, and seniors across Portland, like every other grade of Portland public school students really were in a bind. Her son lost three weeks of instruction time for his International baccalaureate exams. That's happening for advanced placement exams across the district as well. She explains how upper level students really did have harm as a result of the strike. She also says the state legislature must find a way to prevent school districts across the state from going through this again, and notes the Salem School District is in even worse financial shape. She explains how the lawmakers did fund the districts at the level they requested, which was not enough to give teachers the cost of living adjustments their union demanded.

Especially as businesses are more wide open, the economy in 2023 has been pretty good and we've seen a real boost of wmployment. While the state legislature is the primary responsible party for funding PPS is incumbent upon both the union and district to be realistic about their bargaining demands. I've been in contact with a number of elected officials on how we can address this crisis collectively. All elected officials need to make sure families are centered in decision making in the city. A return to school as soon as possible is priority for all of us.

Guest: Michael Harrington / President Fisher Roofing. KINK's Brett Reckamp gets a one on one interview with Michael from their location in Tulatain. Michael describes how their business was purchased from Jim Fisher and how they have grown it over the years. He talks about some lean times in the market and some boom years as well. Michael says Fisher Roofing tries to do things the right way by doing right by their employees first. They keep all their crews in-house which means no subcontractors. That in turn creates loyalty and craftsmen who want to take care of the customers which leads to quality jobs and repeat business. Michael also provides listeners with some good gutter tips as we move in the rainy season here in the Northwest.

Guest: Joel Baynen / Portland resident and former Stanford University Professor with family that has been kidnapped in Israel by Hamas. KINK's Annette Newell hears a personal and tearful story from Joel about his 2 family members who have been lost in Israel - presumed captured or killed by Hamas. The interview is a short reprise from one of Annette's longer pieces in Speaking Freely.

ISSUE: ROAD TOLLS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIRS

November 5th, 2023

5:30 am to 6 am

19:20 minutes of a: 30 minute show

Guest: Anna Howe / ODOT Communications Manager for Urban Mobility Strategy - includes tolling. KINK's Brett Reckamp gets an in-depth interview with Anna on ODOT's positions and desires for tolling on I-5 and I-205. Anna contacted our KINK Newsroom unsolicited to make sure the stories were being reported accurately. ODOT has changed their strategy a few times about what roads they want to toll along with which bridges and other projects. They say they are narrowing their focus on the I-205 tolling to count for only the Abernathy Bridge and not the Tualatin Bridge. Adding another lane to I-205 is also not part of this plan. It's a complicated issue that continues to develop. Governor Tina Kotek has installed a moratorium on tolling until at least 2026. Meanwhile, there's a grassroots effort to gather enough signatures to put the tolling issue on the 2024 November ballot. That's one of the other sides of this issue and we have an in-depth interview on that as well that we will air next week.

5:30 am to 6 am

3:23 minutes of a 30 minute show

Guest: Chris Moschovitis/ KINK Cyber Security Expert. KINK's Brett Reckamp & Veronica Carter hear from Chris about a recent cyber attack on the Washington Department of Transportation. Chris says their mobile app was down for part of the week and their website went dark. They believe that their breach was limited and did not include the release of personal information. But, Chris says it was a serious issue that hurt commuters around the state that use WASHDOT as a resource for getting around on area freeways and for real time data on the state's ferry system. He believes they have a lot of work to do to try and dial things back in.

3:08 minutes of a: 30 minute show

Guest: Mary Rosenberry / Portland Resident & hero. KINK's Veronica Carter talks with Mary who was nominated by her husband to be our KINK Everyday Hero. Mary found out she had cancer last year around this time and has continued to struggle. She says she has an adult daughter with special needs who requires her attention most all the time. Mary also works full time and maintains a household, so it's tough. But, Mary's husband says she never gets upset or depressed and continues to provide a great example in the face of difficulty.

ISSUE: TOLLS

KINK (FM) PUBLIC AFFAIRS

November 12th, 2023

5:30 am to 6 am

22:26 minutes of a: 30 minute show

Guest: Dean Suhr / Author and Co-Petitioner of IP4. KINK's Brett Reckamp follows up on last week's in-depth interview with ODOT by speaking with Dean about their efforts on IP4. Dean says they are working to gather enough signatures to put their initiative on the 2024 November ballot. If they are successful, Oregon voters may have a chance to say yay or nay to tolls in the Portland Metro area. Dean admits he is not a transportation expert, but says he is a driver and a concerned citizen who does not think tolls are the answer for raising money to pay for bridge upgrades and highway improvements. They believe there is too much to this issue to not let voters be involved with part of the decision making. They believe ODOT is going about this the wrong way and that there are other revenue streams to pay for bridge and highway improvements besides tolling. The interview follows last week's with ODOT.

Guest: Michael Allen Harrison, Portland based pianist and musical artist. KINK's Brett Reckamp goes in-depth with Michael during their once per year conversation. Harrison has been performing at Portland's Old Church for decades - bringing together some of the best artists not only in Portland and the Northwest but from around the world. Michael talks about the tradition of the series of concerts. He says many families love to pick a certain night to take it in every single year. Michael also raises money for charity by taking in new or gently used instruments to give out to underserved youth. He gives Brett a special behind the scenes look at how he creates music by telling stories and visualizing things - with beginnings, middles and ends that tell complete stories - even without lyrics.

Guest: Dylan Rivera / Communications Manager - Portland Bureau of Transportation. KINK's Brett Reckamp and Veronica Carter have Dylan from PBOT on live on Portland's Morning News to talk about their leaf cleanup and possible towing. Dylan says every year they sweep the city for leaves. And there are some neighborhoods where vehicles can get in the way of them doing their jobs. So, they send out notices in a variety of ways and then on November 20th, begin towing vehicles that are parked in clearly marked no parking areas. Dylan says they hate to do it but have no choice. He says they have towed about 80 cars on the first day in the past, and around 400 total during the 3+ weeks. But, leaf cleanup is critical because they must keep them out of the storm drains.
