10/13/20 01:49pm 47:52

RACISM/ART - The Metropolitan Museum of Art has hired its first full-time curator for Native American art. At a moment when the nation is opening its eyes to legacies of racism, The Takeaway asks Patricia Norby about the role of Native American art in understanding our country's history...and future. And then as the first curator of Native American art at the Met how does she see the potential to engage people in this work outside elite institutions, and outside New York? 8:58

10/15/20 01:06pm 61:22

POLITICS/RACISM - There have been only 10 Black Senators throughout American history...but this year could be a turning point for Black representation in the United States Senate. Some of these candidates are also bringing in a record amount of money- something that candidates of color have historically struggled to do. 13:28

10/21/20 01:06pm 82:44

RELIGION/POLITICS - White evangelicals make up about one quarter of the U.S. electorate, and in 2016's election, 80% of white evangelical voters backed Trump. But in 2020, that figure seems to be slipping, according to the most recent data. 21:22

VOTING/MISINFORMATION - Concerns over misinformation have been at the heart of the 2020 race since its earliest days. Now with only a few days left to Election Day, The Takeaway takes a big look at where misinformation is cropping up, the effect it could have on the votes not yet cast, and how big tech has done on its pledge to shut it out of the 2020 race. 13:28

11/02/20 01:06pm 108:40

ELECTIONS/VOTING - Nearly 100 million people have already submitted their ballots in early voting. That's more than 71% of the total number of votes cast in 2016. Across the country voters are taking to the polls today in their last opportunity to cast a ballot. The Takeaway checks in with public radio reporters around the country in key states to see how the voting process is playing out. 13:28

Date - Time Cumulative Length (in minutes)

COVID/POTUS - Nothing about President Trump's experience with the coronavirus is typical. From the combination of experimental treatments he is receiving all at once, to the way the outbreak is unfolding in his inner circle. The list of those testing positive continues to grow. For those who specialize in infectious disease control, it's setting a bad precedent for the world. Host Marco Werman speaks with Dr. Tom Frieden, former director of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention about best practices for curbing that pandemic. Then: China, Russia or other actors who don't have America's best interest in mind may seek to take advantage of the U-S in this precarious moment, when the commander-in-chief has been sidelined by the coronavirus. Author Garrett Graff talks with The World's Marco Werman about what's happening with US national security interests as pandemic worries distract government officials.

10/08/20 02:06pm 20:50

COVID-19/AFRICA - As countries across Africa begin to gradually reopen, many people are worried that complacency could hinder attempts to revive economies there. Another challenge facing the continent's 1.2 billion people is gaining access to a vaccine, despite most of the world's potential vaccine supply through locked up by wealthy countries. Host Marco Werman speaks with Dr. John Nkengasong, head of the Africa Centers for Disease Control (CDC). 9:15

10/14/20 02:50pm 28:45

LGBTQ/ELECTIONS - The global LGBTQ community is fighting for a range of rights and protections. 11/05/20 02:06pm 62:40

ELECTIONS/IMMIGRANT WINNERS - The election this week saw a continuation of a national trend that began in the 2018 midterms -- an unprecedented wave of first and second generation Americans running for office. The World's Rupa Shenoy tells us about some of those who won office, including Iman Jodeh, the daughter of Palestinian immigrants and refugees, who's now Colorado's first Muslim lawmaker, and Chinese American anesthesiologist Michelle Au, who won a seat in the Georgia State Senate. 5:30

11/09/20 02:22pm 69:20

FOREIGN RELATIONS/ELECTION REAX - The last four years of the Trump presidency have tested America's traditional alliances in Europe and forged other unconventional ones. Now, with President-Elect Biden poised to take office in January, European leaders are looking ahead. Host Marco Werman speaks to The World's correspondents in Europe, Orla Barry in London and Lydia Emmanouilidou in Athens. 7:00

11/19/20 02:21pm 75:40

CLIMATE/SEA-LEVEL RISE - NASA and the European Space Agency on Saturday will launch a new satellite to measure sea levels more accurately than before. The World's Carolyn Beeler reports on the new capabilities brought by this first-of-its-kind EU/US partnership, and how satellite data helps us know what we know about our changing climate. 6:20

THAILAND REFORMATION - Suddenly the rules are being rewritten in Thailand. Young brash protesters are calling for reforms with the Thai monarchy. For conservatives, the royal family is considered sacrosanct. And criticizing the monarchy, for many Thais, is blasphemy plain and simple. The World's Patrick Winn reports on how the establishment, from royalists to Buddhist monks, see the protest movement. 7:00

NAGORNO-KARABAKH - Two weeks ago the former Soviet republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan ended a six-week war that has killed more than a hundred civilians and thousands of soldiers. The conflict was fought over lands in and around the contested territory of Nagorno Karabakh, which have been under Armenian control since a previous war in the nineties. Armenia was on the losing side this time and, as part of a peace agreement mediated by Russia, the region of Kelbajar was today handed back to Azerbaijani forces. Reporter Andrew Connelly was there just before the handover. 6:35

POLITICS/LATINX - Last week, President-elect Joe Biden's chose Alejandro Mayorkas as his nominee for secretary of the Department of Homeland Security. If confirmed, Mayorkas will be the first immigrant and the first Latino to lead DHS. Host Marco Werman speaks with Immigration attorney Leon Fresco, who was the Deputy Assistant Attorney General, in the Office of Immigration Litigation during the Obama administration, he also worked closely with Alejandro Mayorkas. 5:15

COVID-19/VACCINE - Wealthy nations have pre-ordered millions of coronavirus vaccines to inoculate their entire populations as soon as possible. For poorer countries, the rollout may take many years. The World's Marco Werman talks with the International Rescue Committee's Dr Michelle Gayer about how low-income countries might address disparities in vaccination access and distribution. 7:00

12/07/20 02:21pm 109:10

FOREIGN RELATIONS/SYRIA - There's been much speculation on what comes next for Syria, after nearly 10 years of conflict in that country. The incoming Biden-Harris administration is tasked with finding a new direction for US policy toward Syria. So, how will Biden's approach differ from his predecessors? The World's Marco Werman speaks with Wa'el AlZayat a former State Department official on the Syria desk and CEO of the Muslim advocacy group, Emgage. 7:40

ARAB UPRISING ANNIVERSARY - The World presents a special edition focusing on the start of the Arab Uprisings in 2010. The uprisings began in Tunisia and quickly spread to several Arab countries, leading to the fall of dictators. Ten years on, we ask what is the legacy of the Arab Uprisings and how are people remembering the events? The World's Shirin Jaafari speaks with Leila Bouazizi, the sister of Mohammed Bouazizi, the fruit vendor in Tunisia who set himself on fire and sparked the start of the Arab Uprisings. Then, the Arab Uprisings were among the first major protests in the social media age. Collectively they've been described as an internet revolution. An uprising powered by Twitter and Facebook. But how big a role did social media really play? The World's Lydia Emmanouilidou reports. 12:45
