Fight Like A Mother

Shannon Watts-Founder, Moms Demand Action; Author, Fight Like a Mother: How a Grassroots Movement Took on the Gun Lobby and Why Women Will Change the World

Clara Jeffery-Editor in Chief, Mother Jones Magazine

The United States experiences the highest number of school shootings in the world. Shannon Watts decided to do something about it. In the wake of the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting, Watts, a mother of five and former communications executive, started Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America, an organization that advocates for gun regulation reform. Moms Demand Action has grown into one of the largest and most far-reaching organizations in American politics with a grassroots network in all 50 states and millions of supporters. Under Watts' leadership, Moms Demand Action has enjoyed a 93 percent success rate in beating the NRA in state legislatures.

In her forthcoming book, Fight Like a Mother: How a Grassroots Movement Took on the Gun Lobby, Watts recounts how she and other mothers turned their outrage into action to drive progress in gun safety. The book celebrates the unique strength and power of women and highlights the potential for everyone to engage in everyday activism. In addition to her work with Moms Demand Action, Watts is the founder and board chair of Rise to Run, an organization dedicated to mobilizing young progressive women to run for office, and an active board member of Emerge America. Join Watts live at INFORUM as she shares her inspiring journey of how one woman's cry for change became a driving force in a national demand for action.

Ryan Costello-Former U.S. Representative (R-PA)

Christine Pelosi-Executive Committeewoman, Democratic National Committee

Greg Dalton-Founder and Host, Climate One

When it comes to climate politics, is the U.S. getting closer to bipartisan solutions that are both practical and profound enough to address the scale of the problem? We'll hear former U.S. Representative Carlos Curbelo (R-FL), co-founder of the bipartisan Climate Solutions Caucus in Congress, who introduced a carbon tax bill in 2018; former U.S. Representative Ryan Costello (R-PA), who now manages the political advocacy group Americans for Carbon Dividends; and Christine Pelosi, executive committeewoman with the Democratic National Committee.

The Art Of The Green Deal

Matt Gaetz-U.S. Representative (R-FL)

Miranda Green-Reporter, The Hill

Ed Markey-U.S. Senator (D-MA)

Greg Dalton-Founder and Host, Climate One

With the Green New Deal, New York Democratic Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez's vision challenges her own party to move farther and faster on climate action than ever before. Deal co-sponsor Sen. Ed Markey has spent 40 years in Congress and shares similar experiences pushing for bold climate action—not always successfully. How are the insurgent and veteran working together on this ambitious proposal?

Meanwhile, Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-FL) vigorously supports President Trump—except for when it comes to climate and extreme weather, which have battered his district in the Florida panhandle. Gaetz says climate is a real concern that needs to be addressed through his Green Real Deal, a market-based alternative to the Green New Deal's regulatory approach. Where is the U.S. headed with political action on climate: Green New Deal, Green Real Deal, or no deal at all?

The Future Of Conservatism

George Will-Columnist, The Washington Post; Author, The Conservative Sensibility
In Conversation with Lenny Mendonca-Chief Economic and Business Advisor and Director of the Office of Business and Economic Development, State of California; Member, Commonwealth Club Board of Governors

George Will has been a columnist for The Washington Post since 1974 and is one of the most influential political pundits today. He is vocally dissatisfied with the directions that both the American Right and Left have dragged the nation. His new book, The Conservative Sensibility, asks Americans to revisit their history books and remind themselves of the values America was founded upon—values which he sees both sides of the aisle straying dangerously far from.

The book covers everything from the natural rights of man and the history of American democracy to the modern capitulation of congressional checks on the power of the executive. He believes the solution to many of the high-profile political issues of today can be found by going back to the founders' intentions for the nation, and by grounding modern solutions more solidly in a historical context.

People of all political affiliations have found themselves in agreement with much of what he has to say. Join us for a conversation with one of the most respected journalists and political commentators in the nation.

The Department of Defense is the single largest institution in America, managing the most complex information network, carrying out more research and development than Google, Apple and Microsoft combined, owning and operating more real estate and spending more money than any other entity. In his new book, Inside the Five-Sided Box: Lessons from a Lifetime of Leadership in the Pentagon, former U.S. Secretary of Defense Ash Carter gives us an inside look into all that happens in one of the most secretive and secure locations in the nation—the obstacles it faces and the innovation taking place there.

Secretary Schultz: Thinking About The Future

George P. Shultz-Distinguished Fellow, Hoover Institution; Former U.S. Secretary of State; Author, Thinking About the Future

In Conversation with Dr. Gloria Duffy-President and CEO, The Commonwealth Club

In a rich and varied career that has included roles as U.S. secretary of state, secretary of the treasury and secretary of labor, George P. Shultz has aided presidents, confronted national and international crises, and argued passionately that the United States has a vital stake in promoting democratic values and institutions. In speeches, articles, congressional testimony and conversations with world leaders, he has helped shape policy and public opinion on topics such as technology, terrorism, drugs and climate change. The result is a body of work that has influenced the decisions of nations and leaders and impacted the lives of ordinary people.

In his newest book, Thinking About the Future, Secretary Shultz has collected and revisited key writings, applying his past thinking to America's most pressing contemporary problems. In the more than half a century since Shultz entered public life, the world has changed dramatically. But he remains guided by the belief that "you can learn about the future—or at least relate to it—by studying the past and identifying principles that have continuing application to our lives and our world." Here's a rare chance to hear from one of America's most respected statesmen.

Cyber Threats In The Digital Age

Richard Clarke-Former U.S. National Coordinator for Security, Infrastructure Protection and Counterterrorism; Co-Author, The Fifth Domain: Defending Our Country, Our Companies, and Ourselves in the Age of Cyber Threats; Twitter @richardclarke

In Conversation with Audrey Cooper-Editor in Chief, San Francisco Chronicle

Cyber warfare is at the intersection of innovation and danger. It can be comical, like the malware which blasted AC/DC's song "Thunderstruck" at full blast in the middle of the night in Iranian nuclear facilities. It can also be catastrophic, like EternalBlue, the 2017 cyber battle that closed hospitals in Britain and froze shipping crates in Germany in midair. Richard Clarke, former U.S. national coordinator for security, infrastructure protection and counterterrorism, takes us behind the scenes with the scientists, executives and government officials who are on the forefront of cyber technologies.

In the new book, The Fifth Domain: Defending Our Country, Our Companies, and Ourselves in the Age of Cyber Threats, Clarke explains that the threat of cyberattacks is manageable and provides concrete steps that can be taken toward cyber resilience, including building more resistant systems, raising the costs for cyber crime and avoiding the trap of overreacting to digital attacks. From the quantum-computing labs racing to develop cyber superweapons to the boardrooms of corporations that have been hacked to the corridors of U.S. intelligence agencies that work to defend against these attacks, Clarke effortlessly guides readers through the complexities of this fifth domain. Join us for a timely discussion with a former White House terrorism czar on this pressing issue.

An Evening With Dr. Cornel West

Cornel West, Ph.D.-Professor of the Practice of Public Philosophy, Harvard University; Professor Emeritus, Princeton University; Author, Race Matters

In Conversation with Sheryl Davis-Executive Director, San Francisco Human Rights Commission

Dr. Cornel West says his passion is to keep alive the legacy of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.—a legacy of telling the truth and bearing witness to love and justice. In addition to his posts at Harvard and Princeton, West has taught at Union Theological Seminary, Yale and the University of Paris. He graduated Magna Cum Laude from Harvard in three years and obtained his master's and doctorate in philosophy at Princeton.

Sheryl Davis is the executive director of the San Francisco Human Rights Commission (HRC), a city agency mandated to address the causes of and problems resulting from prejudice, intolerance, bigotry and discrimination in San Francisco. Davis previously served as commissioner from 2011 to 2016, including a tenure as vice chair of the commission. Prior to her work with the HRC, she was the executive director of Collective Impact, a community-based organization in the Western Addition neighborhood of San Francisco.

In a polarized country, with issues of voter disenfranchisement, police shootings of unarmed African-Americans and discussions of reparations at the forefront, our guests will explore the possibilities for improved life outcomes and opportunities for black people, particularly in cities such as San Francisco as the wealth gap continues to swell. In commemoration of the 55th anniversary of the HRC, created in response to antiblack racism in businesses, government services and community investments, join us for a conversation with one of the nation's most prominent and provocative civil rights champions about America's (and San Francisco's) present and future racial equity.

Michael Isaac: The Battle For Uber

Mike Isaac-Technology Reporter, The New York Times; Author, Super Pumped: The Battle for Uber

In Conversation with Molly Wood

Host, "Marketplace Tech"; Co-Host, "Make Me Smart with Kai and Molly"

Since its launch in 2009, ride-hailing service Uber has undergone major shifts to become a worldwide transportation network despite severe setbacks. Harassment allegations that led to the firing of 20 employees and the resignation of former CEO Travis Kalanick publicly embarrassed the company, yet Uber has grown to become the highest valued private tech company in Silicon Valley. In his new book, Super Pumped: The Battle for Uber, New York Times tech reporter Mike Isaac delves into the ambition, excess and massive loss of Uber and Kalanick over the last few years.

Isaac has nearly a decade of experience writing about technology industry in the San Francisco Bay Area. He has spent the past few years covering the controversial ascent of Uber and the company's issues of workplace harassment, sexism and allegations of misconduct that reveal the problematic work culture of Silicon Valley tech companies. Join us as he narrates the deception and bad behavior of Uber that culminated in one of the most controversial periods in American corporate history.

Esther Wojcicki: How To Raise Successful People

Esther Wojcicki-Educator; Author, How to Raise Successful People: Simple Lessons for Radical Results

In Conversation with Roy Eisenhardt-Lecturer, UC Berkeley Law School

What does it take to raise successful people? Esther Wojcicki, lovingly referred to as the Godmother of Silicon Valley, has a simple answer to this million-dollar question. It comes in the convenient form of an acronym: TRICK (Trust, Respect, Independence, Collaboration and Kindness). It also comes in the form of her new book, How to Raise Successful People: Simple Lessons for Radical Results. Her tried-and-true advice for parents, employers and mentors of all kinds is to trust individuals to follow their passions and to work hard, to be supportive of their achievements and, above all, to relax. Her wisdom applies to the corporate hiring process, to young parents raising children, to teachers trying to be the best advocates for their students they can be.

Wojcicki is a revered high school teacher in the media arts program she founded at Palo Alto High School, a role model for Silicon Valley legends such as Steve Jobs (and his daughter Lisa), and the mother of three successful daughters: the CEO of YouTube, a professor of pediatrics at UCSF medical school and one of the co-founders of 23andMe.
