Guthrie takes readers behind the closed doors of venture capital, an industry that transforms economies and shapes how we live. Through their experiences juggling work and family, the featured leaders and others continued to shape the tech landscape we know today while overcoming unequal pay, actual punches, betrayals, and the sexist attitudes prevalent in Silicon Valley and in male-dominated industries everywhere. Despite the setbacks, they would rise again to rewrite the rules for an industry they love, paving the way for the next generation of women along the way.

In Conversation with London Breed-Mayor, City of San Francisco

Despite the almost constant streams of media reporting on the White House, very few people know what really goes on in the West Wing. Valerie Jarrett, senior adviser to the president in the Obama administration, is one of those people. From the day she interviewed a young Michelle Robinson in July 1991 to the night of January 20, 2017, when the first family departed the White House, Jarrett has been a trusted confidante and a close friend of the Obama family.

In her book, Finding My Voice: My Journey to the West Wing and the Path Forward, Jarrett shares her story of growing up with American parents in the town of Shiraz, Iran, living in Chicago during the civil rights movement and ultimately finding her voice in public service. Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi

Nancy Pelosi-Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives (D-CA 12th District)

In Conversation with Dr. Gloria Duffy-President and CEO, The Commonwealth Club

From the time Nancy Pelosi spent helping her father while he served as the mayor of Baltimore, working for Jerry Brown's presidential campaign or serving as the Democratic Party chair of California, she developed skills that would propel her to the peak of American politics. As the speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, she is now the most powerful woman in the political history of the United States.

In the first 100 days of the 116th Congress, Speaker Pelosi and House Democrats have worked on their "for the people" agenda, passing legislation to clean up corruption and restore ethics to Washington, D.C., a bipartisan background checks bill, and what many Democrats call a landmark paycheck fairness bill. House Democrats are also pursuing a bipartisan infrastructure deal, looking at ways to expand and protect the right to vote, tackling climate change, and lowering health care costs and prescription drug prices for all Americans.

How will the Democratic Party try to recreate the success it saw in the 2018 midterm elections? As America heads toward the presidential election in 2020, join us for a conversation with the iconic face of the Democratic Party, and bring your questions.

Rep. Adam Schiff, Chair of the House Intelligence Committee

Adam Schiff-U.S. Representative for District 28 (D-CA); Chair, U.S. House Intelligence Committee

In Conversation with John Diaz-Editorial Page Editor, San Francisco Chronicle

After eight years of Republican control, the blue wave of 2018 put Democrats back in charge of the U.S. House and made Representative Adam Schiff chair of the House Intelligence Committee. With broad power and jurisdiction, Schiff's committee oversees the nation's intelligence agencies, from components of the Departments of Defense and Homeland Security, Justice, and the CIA. While his investigations and public comments have made him one of the president's favorite Twitter targets, Schiff has defended them as vital to American security.

As one of the leading Democrats in Congress, Schiff's voice is one of the most important coming out of Washington, D.C. With their new majority, how will Democrats lead until the 2020 election? How will the completion of the Mueller investigation impact domestic politics? Join us for a timely and important conversation about politics and the integrity of the American political system.

Sea Changes: Why Oceans Play a Bigger Role in Climate Than You Think

Sara Aminzadeh-Commissioner, California Coastal Commission

Ken Caldeira-Scientist, Department of Global Ecology at the Carnegie Institution for Science

Daniela Fernandez-Founder and CEO, Sustainable Ocean Alliance

Greg Dalton-Founder and Host, Climate One

Global temperatures would be soaring even higher were it not for a powerful heat-trapping ally: oceans. From regulating the temperature of the planet to generating half of the oxygen we breathe, oceans are a vital part of sustaining life on Earth. Increasing their temperature as little as two degrees, however, has an opposite effect, threatening marine biodiversity and turbocharging dangerous hurricanes and typhoons.

But there are bright prospects on the horizon for humans and oceans. Underwater, large-scale marine protected areas are an example of how ocean life can thrive with bold conservation efforts. Above the surface, offshore oil rigs are being replaced with wind farms, poised to be a significant driver of clean energy. Will coastal communities that once shunned offshore drilling welcome fossil fuel free wind power? What is the future for coastal communities and ocean biodiversity threatened by climate change?

Join us for a conversation on the health and future of our oceans with Sara Aminzadeh, commissioner with the California Coastal Commission; Ken Caldeira, scientist with the Department of Global Ecology at the Carnegie Institution for Science; and Daniela Fernandez, founder and CEO of the Sustainable Ocean Alliance.

Boy: A Story from Our Americas; Activist

Mina Kim-News Anchor, KQED; Host, Friday's "Forum"

Join Dustin Lance Black, influential LGBTQ+ activist and the Academy Award-winning screenwriter behind Milk, as he reveals his unexpectedly conservative origins in his new memoir, Mama's Boy: A Story from Our Americas, providing personal and philosophical insight into the complicated divide between red and blue America.

Black's memoir chronicles his coming of age in a military, Mormon household in Texas and moving to more liberal California after his mother's remarriage. Finding himself at odds with the religious and political atmosphere of his family and his community's condemnation of his sexuality, Black kept his identity a secret. He ultimately found release and professional success in the arts and reveals that throughout his often difficult childhood, he and his mother always managed to share a powerful bond of support. When Black played an instrumental role in the overturning of California's antigay marriage Proposition 8, she was next to him despite a lifetime of opposition.

Join Dustin Lance Black live at INFORUM as he reflects on his personal journey to self-acceptance and success and shares his unique perspective on bridging the many divides in our country today.

Janet Napolitano: Homeland Security Since 9/11

Janet Napolitano-President, University of California; Former U.S. Secretary of Homeland Security, Author, How Safe Are We? Homeland Security Since 9/11
In Conversation with John Diaz-Editorial Page Editor, San Francisco Chronicle

The Department of Homeland Security seems to appear in the headlines and in the media more and more often. Covering everything from terrorism prevention, law enforcement, disaster recovery and public safety, the department's goals can often seem self-contradictory and overly politicized, especially today. Few people understand this better than Janet Napolitano, who served as the Secretary of Homeland Security from 2009-2013.

In her new book, How Safe Are We? Homeland Security Since 9/11, Napolitano unabashedly acknowledges the shortcomings and challenges facing the Department of Homeland Security today, especially the politicization of border security and our lagging cybersecurity sector. But she also makes a pragmatic and honest case for its successes and explains the ways in which Homeland Security does indeed make us safer. Join us for a discussion that chronicles the evolution of our national security and cuts through the political noise that too often dominates these conversations.

Bring Change to Mind (BC2M) is a national nonprofit organization dedicated to encouraging dialogue about mental health and to raising awareness, understanding and empathy. Award-winning actor and advocate Glenn Close co-founded Bring Change to Mind in 2010 after her sister Jessie Close was diagnosed with bipolar disorder and her nephew Calen Pick was diagnosed with schizoaffective disorder.

Science and evidence-based programs are essential to achieving the work of BC2M. The organization's seven public service announcements have provided stigma-reducing messaging to more than four billion individuals. By mobilizing deeply engaged change agents, especially youth, to collectively talk about mental health, BC2M is able to encourage healthy help seeking behavior, greater resilience and self-care techniques. It is transforming feelings of isolation and despair into feelings of community and hope. The organization's peer-led high school clubs, operating in 16 states, are a great example of how youth can, and will, change the perspectives on mental illness in our lifetime. Join Glenn Close and other BC2M leaders for a conversation about the power of advocacy, science and youth leadership to reduce stigma and create positive change in the world of mental health.
