Description	Health officials are scrambling tonight to destroy a deadly strain of the flu virus, fearing it could cause a pandemic if mishandled. The samples were shipped to nearly 4,000 medical labs in 18 countries as part of a routine test kit. In 1957 the virus killed more than a million people worldwide. All indications are that the virus has not spread and health officials say they hope to have all the samples destroyed by the end of the week.
