JESSUP, Md. (FOX 5 DC) - A man convicted in the rape and murder of a 14-year-old Prince George's County girl has been released from prison Tuesday after serving less than nine years behind bars.

In 1996, Nia Owens was sexually assaulted and strangled on her way to Northwestern High School in Hyattsville.

After more than a decade, police arrested Matthew Bethea in 2010. He was convicted of second-degree murder, but he got a plea deal, making what's known as an Alford Plea, where a suspect maintains his or her innocence.

Because of the plea deal, Bethea was sentenced to 15 years in prison. The sexual assault charges were dropped. His sentence was eventually reduced even more for good behavior, and now, he walks away as a free man who doesn't have to register as a sex offender.

Owens' mother, Angela Wood, told FOX 5 Monday she can't comprehend such a minimal penalty for such a horrendous crime.

"It was the most horrible day of my entire life. Never do I wish that on a parent," said Wood. "And that's why am fighting today to change legislation- a murderer should not be allowed to serve less than nine years."

Trump's record $4.7 trillion budget relies on strong growth

Posted Mar 11 2019 09:02AM EDT

Updated Mar 11 2019 12:11PM EDT

Link: <http://www.fox5dc.com/news/trump-s-2020-budget-seeks-86b-for-border-wall>

WASHINGTON - (AP) -- President Donald Trump proposed a record $4.7 trillion federal budget for 2020 on Monday, relying on optimistic 3.1 percent economic growth projections alongside accounting shuffles and steep domestic cuts to bring future spending into promised balance in 15 years.

The deficit is projected to hit $1.1 trillion in the 2020 fiscal year, the highest in a decade. The administration is counting on robust growth, including from the Republican tax cuts -- which Trump wants to make permanent -- to push down the red ink. Some economists, though, say the bump from the tax cuts is waning, and they project slower growth in coming years. The national debt is $22 trillion.

Even with his own projections, Trump's budget would not come into balance for a decade and a half, rather than the traditional hope of balancing in 10.

Presidential budgets tend to be seen as aspirational blueprints, rarely becoming enacted policy, and Trump's proposal for the new fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, sets up a showdown with Congress over priorities, including his push for $8.6 billion to build the U.S-Mexico border wall.

Titled "A Budget for a Better America: Promises Kept. Taxpayers First," Trump's proposal "embodies fiscal responsibility," said Russ Vought, the acting director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Despite the large projected deficits, Vought said the administration has "prioritized reining in reckless Washington spending" and shows "we can return to fiscal sanity."

Perhaps most notably among spending proposals, Trump is reviving his border wall fight. Fresh off the longest government shutdown in history, his 2020 plan shows he is eager to confront Congress again over the wall.

Speaking on CNBC Monday, Vought confirmed the $8.6 billion border request. He said "the border situation is deteriorating by the day" with "record numbers of apprehensions."

An administration official said Trump's budget proposes increasing defense spending to $750 billion -- and building the new Space Force as a military branch -- while reducing nondefense accounts by 5 percent, with cuts recommended to economic safety-net programs used by many Americans. The $2.7 trillion in proposed spending cuts is higher than any administration in history, they say.

The budget includes work requirements for those receiving food stamps and other government aid as part of the $2.7 trillion in non-defense cuts over the decade.

The plan sticks to budget caps that both parties have routinely broken in recent years. To stay within the caps, the budget shifts a portion of the defense spending, some $165 billion, to an overseas contingency fund, which some fiscal hawks will view as an accounting gimmick.

Conservatives railed for years against deficits that rose during the first years of Barack Obama's administration as tax revenue plummeted and spending increased during the Great Recession.

By refusing to raise the budget caps, Trump is signaling a fight ahead. The president has resisted big, bipartisan budget deals that break the caps -- threatening to veto one last year -- but Congress will need to find agreement on spending levels to avoid another federal shutdown in the fall.

The Democratic chairman of the House Budget Committee, Rep. John Yarmuth of Kentucky, called the proposed cuts to essential services "dangerous." He said Trump added nearly $2 trillion to deficits with the GOP's "tax cuts for the wealthy and large corporations, and now it appears his budget asks the American people to pay the price," the Democrat said.

While pushing down spending in some areas, including the Environmental Protection Agency, the proposal will seek to increase funding in others to align with the president's priorities, according to one official.

The administration will invest more than $80 billion for veterans services, a nearly 10 percent increase from current levels, including "significant" investments in rehabilitation, employment assistance and suicide prevention.

It will also increase resources to fight the opioid epidemic with money for prevention, treatment, research and recovery, the administration said. And it seeks to shift some federal student loan costs to colleges and universities.

The proposal will also include $1 billion for a child care fund that would seek to improve access to care for underserved populations, a White House official confirmed. The one-time allocation is championed by the president's daughter Ivanka Trump, who has focused on economic advancement for women in her role as a White House adviser.

It also provides $200 billion toward infrastructure, much lower than the $1 trillion plan Trump once envisioned. The plan says that money would be leveraged with private dollars, but Congress has largely panned that approach.

White House economic adviser Larry Kudlow said Trump's budget "points a steady glide path" toward lower spending and borrowing as a share of the nation's economy. He also told "Fox News Sunday" there was no reason to "obsess" about deficits, and expressed confidence that economic growth would top 3 percent in 2019 and beyond. Others have predicted lower growth.

The border wall remains a signature issue for the president and is poised to stay at the forefront of his agenda, even though Congress has resisted giving him more money for it.

Leading Democrats immediately rejected the proposal.

"Congress refused to fund his wall and he was forced to admit defeat and reopen the government. The same thing will repeat itself if he tries this again," said House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-

Calif., and Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer of New York. They said the money "would be better spent on rebuilding America."

In seeking $8.6 billion for more than 300 miles of new border wall, the budget request would more than double the $8.1 billion already potentially available to the president for the wall after he declared a national emergency at the border last month in order to circumvent Congress -- although there's no guarantee he'll be able to use that money if he faces a legal challenge, as is expected. The standoff over the wall led to a 35-day partial government shutdown, the longest in U.S. history.

Along with border wall money, the proposed budget will also increase funding to increase the "manpower" of Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers and Customs and Border Patrol at a time when many Democrats are calling for cuts -- or even the elimination -- of those areas. The budget also proposes policy changes to end sanctuary cities, the administration said.

The budget arrives as the Senate readies to vote this week to terminate Trump's national emergency declaration. The Democratic-led House already did so, and a handful of Republican senators, uneasy over what they see as an overreach of executive power, are expected to join Senate Democrats in following suit. Congress appears to have enough votes to reject Trump's declaration but not enough to overturn a veto.

Trump invoked the emergency declaration after Congress approved nearly $1.4 billion for border barriers, far less than the $5.7 billion he wanted. By doing that, he can potentially tap an additional $3.6 billion from military accounts and shift it to building the wall. That's causing discomfort on Capitol Hill, where even the president's Republican allies are protective of their power to decide how to allocate federal dollars. Lawmakers are trying to guard money that's already been approved for military projects in their states -- for base housing or other improvements.

The wall with Mexico played a big part in Trump's campaign for the White House, and it's expected to again be featured in his 2020 re-election effort. He used to say Mexico would pay for it, but Mexico has refused to do so.

Mind-altering, ketamine-like drug OK'd for severe depression

POSTED MAR 05 2019 11:23PM EST

UPDATED MAR 05 2019 11:27PM EST

Link: <http://www.fox5dc.com/health/mind-altering-ketamine-like-drug-okd-for-severe-depression>

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mind-altering medication related to the club drug Special K won U.S. approval Tuesday for patients with hard-to-treat depression, the first in a series of long-overlooked substances being reconsidered for severe forms of mental illness.

The nasal spray from Johnson & Johnson is a chemical cousin of ketamine, which has been used for decades as a powerful anesthetic to prepare patients for surgery. In the 1990s, the medication was adopted as a party drug by the underground rave culture due to its ability to produce psychedelic, out-of-body experiences. More recently, some doctors have given ketamine to people with depression without formal FDA approval.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Spravato as a fast-acting treatment for patients who have failed to find relief with at least two antidepressants. Up to 7.4 million American adults suffer from so-called treatment-resistant depression, which heightens the risk of suicide, hospitalization and other serious harm, according to the FDA.

The drug will cost between $590 and $885 depending on the dosage and before various insurance discounts and rebates.

There have been no major pharmaceutical innovations for depression since the launch of Prozac and related antidepressants in the late 1980s. Those drugs target the feel-good brain chemical serotonin, and can take weeks or months to kick in.

Ketamine and J&J's version work differently than those drugs, targeting a chemical called glutamate that is thought to restore brain connections that help relieve depression.

When the drug works, its effect is almost immediate. That speed "is a huge thing because depressed patients are very disabled and suffer enormously," said Dr. John Mann, a psychiatrist and researcher at Columbia University. If the drug doesn't work, physicians can quickly switch to other options, he noted.

The FDA approved Spravato, known chemically as esketamine, based on study results that showed patients taking the drug experienced a bigger improvement in their depression levels than patients taking a sham treatment, when measured with a psychiatric questionnaire.

The drug is designed to be lower-dose and easier to use than ketamine, which is normally given as an intravenous infusion.

Robin Prothro, 60, began taking antidepressants more than 20 years ago. But she says none of the five medications she tried relieved the depression that has stymied her personal and professional life.

Since enrolling in a Spravato trial two years ago, Prothro says her depression has lifted and she's returned to hobbies she abandoned years ago, like gardening.

She takes the drug every two weeks at her psychiatrist's office while reclining in a comfortable chair.

"You can feel it coming on, it's a strong drug," she said, describing colors and shapes that drift before her eyes. "I just let the drug work. I close my eyes and my mind is amazingly quiet."

PSYCHEDELICS RECONSIDERED

The ketamine-like drug is the first of several psychoactive substances making their way through the U.S. regulatory process as physicians search further afield for new therapies. Researchers are conducting late-stage trials of psilocybin, the active ingredient in magic mushrooms, and MDMA, a euphoria-inducing club drug, as potential treatments for depression and post-traumatic stress disorder.

“Substantially different agents are only rarely appearing from pharmaceutical companies or other laboratories,” said Dr. Paul Summergrad, a psychiatrist at Tufts University. “That’s prompting people to investigate other compounds.”

Unlike ketamine, psilocybin and MDMA have no legal medical use. Classified in the same category as heroin and LSD, they are tightly restricted by the federal government. But the FDA’s approval of esketamine could smooth their path.

BURDEN OF DEPRESSION

Depression is among the leading causes of disability in the U.S. and is being closely monitored by health authorities amid rising suicides nationwide. In 2017, the U.S. suicide rate rose to 14 deaths per 100,000 people, the highest rate in at least 50 years, according to federal records.

Government officials haven’t suggested an explanation for the trend, though academic researchers point to the nation’s widening income gap, financial struggles and divisive politics.

J&J’s drug will be subject to a number of restrictions due to its abuse potential, side effects and lingering safety questions.

The drug will only be given by accredited specialists who must monitor patients for at least two hours after administration, due to its trippy, disorienting effects. Additionally, all patients will be tracked in a registry to monitor long-term safety and effectiveness.

The immediate impact of ketamine is thought to last just four to seven days and there’s no consensus yet on how long patients can benefit from ongoing treatment.

Still, there are few other options for patients who fail to respond to antidepressants. The most effective treatment in such cases, electroshock therapy, requires patients to be fully sedated and can cause persistent memory loss.

Wall Street has high expectations for J&J’s medication, with analysts predicting more than $600 million in annual sales by 2022. But J&J will face competition in the marketplace.

A decades-old drug, ketamine is already used off-label to treat depression by some doctors. At least 150 clinics around the U.S. provide treatment with various forms of the drug, which is available as a low-cost generic. Patients often pay hundreds or thousands of dollars for intravenous infusions of the drug over several weeks or months. Such therapies are generally not covered by insurance because they haven't been approved as safe and effective by FDA regulators.

Some doctors plan to offer both ketamine and the new J&J drug.

Dr. Steve Levine says having FDA-approved standards for dosing and administering the new drug should raise standards in the field and drive out some of the bad actors who are not qualified to treat depression.

“This is going to bring in some standards, regulation and it's going to make it safer and more accessible to patients,” said Levine, who serves as vice president of the American Society of Ketamine Physicians, a group representing doctors, nurses and others using ketamine for treating depression or other nonapproved uses.

MCLEAN, Va. (FOX 5 DC) - One person is dead after a fire in the McLean area on Saturday afternoon.

Fairfax County fire officials could not confirm the victim's identity. Neighbors told FOX 5 that a "sweet, elderly" woman inhabited the home.

Fire officials say crews needed to fight through thick brush to reach the home in the 1400 block of Brookhaven Drive around 12:15 p.m.

They also encountered what they described as "hoarding conditions" within the home, as well as heavy fire.

They had received reports that someone might be inside the structure, but were turned back by flames and smoke.

ARLINGTON, Va. (FOX 5 DC) - A new overnight traffic pattern will impact drivers who travel across the Arlington Memorial Bridge as the rehabilitation project to fix the deteriorating structure continues.

Beginning on Monday, March 11 through the fall of 2019, the National Park Service will reduce the number of lanes going across the bridge beginning at 9 p.m. each night until 5 a.m. the following morning. Officials say the new overnight traffic pattern will involve closing one of the bridge's three open lanes for several hours at a time.

They also say they will temporarily close an additional lane for about 15 minutes at a time. During the 15 minute periods when only one travel lane will be open, flaggers will direct traffic across the bridge in either direction.

Officials say workers will use the extra room to install large, pre-cast, concrete panels.

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (FOX 5 DC) - - A Montgomery County high school's recent warning to parents about vaping is shining a spotlight on what has become a national epidemic according to federal health officials.

Quince Orchard High School Principal Beth Thomas sent a note to parents last week warning about the "recent rise in vaping and Juuling incidents."

According to the email, in the last two weeks' administrators caught students using, buying or selling vaping devices with nicotine or marijuana a dozen times.

Sources tell FOX 5 that administrators have even locked bathrooms during periods such as lunch to prevent students from going in to smoke electronic cigarettes.

A Montgomery County Schools spokeswoman said the bathrooms were locked temporarily during an investigation.

Vaping is not just a problem at Quince Orchard or unique to Montgomery County.

The Surgeon General took the recent step of calling teen vaping an epidemic and experts worry e-cigs have the potential to get an entire generation hooked on nicotine, especially given the fruity and exotic flavors seemingly aimed at teens.

The note from Quince Orchard's principal warned that consequences for students found vaping included in or out of school suspension, detention and even a possible citation from Montgomery County Police.

The Los Angeles County Medical Examiner identified the body of a girl found dead last week on a Hacienda Heights hiking trail as 9-year-old Trinity Love Jones.

The screenshot shows a web browser displaying the FOX 5 website. The page features a navigation bar with 'FOX 5' and 'Sections' (Live, News, Local, Weather, Mornings, Traffic, Sports, Contests, FOX 5 Plus, Podcast, About Us). Below the navigation, there are several news snippets with 'More Stories' links. The main content area is titled 'Videos' and features a large video player showing a portrait of a young girl. To the right of the video player is a 'NOW PLAYING' section with the title 'Child's body dumped near hiking trail identified' and a 'MORE VIDEOS' section with several smaller video thumbnails. At the bottom of the page, there is a 'myeyeDR.' advertisement with the text 'WE CAN'T PREVENT A DROPPED PHONE FROM GIVING YOU A BLACK EYE.' The browser's address bar shows 'www.fox5dc.com/news' and the system tray at the bottom indicates the time is 3:08 PM on 3/11/2019.
