Arts & Culture	1/25/2023	6:22am 8:22am	4:14	MA	It may be sacrilege for an English major, but singing an Emily Dickinson poem to the theme from "Gilligan's Island" is a sort of party game. Some try it to the tune of "The Yellow Rose Of Texas." Songwriter Andrew Bird heard about this from an academic friend who teaches Dickinson's poetry. Bird ended up composing an original melody to accompany words written long ago by the Belle of Amherst.
Arts & Culture	2/2/2023	6:22am 8:22am	7:14	MA	Every family is different in how they speak of their ancestors, or even what parts of family history they're proud of or ashamed of. Author Sarah Dixwell Brown learned the story of her 7-greats-grandfather John Dixwell, and wrote "Regicide In The Family: Finding John Dixwell," chronicling her transatlantic journey to discover her roots.
Arts & Culture	2/14/2023	5:44pm	4:44	MA	The Lviv National Philharmonic Orchestra of Ukraine has performed around the region in recent days and played before a crowd of 800 at the UMass Fine Arts Center in Amherst, where NEPM's Dusty Christensen met a Ukrainian family that fled the country when the war with Russia began.
Arts & Culture	2/15/2023	7:45am	4:44	MA	The Lviv National Philharmonic Orchestra of Ukraine has performed around the region in recent days and played before a crowd of 800 at the UMass Fine Arts Center in Amherst, where NEPM's Dusty Christensen met a Ukrainian family that fled the country when the war with Russia began.
Arts & Culture	3/2/2023	5:40pm	4:53	MA	The UMass women's basketball team plays George Mason this week in the quarter-final round of the A-10 tournament, coming into the tourney as the number-one seed for the first time in school history. Daily Hampshire Gazette reporter Hannah Bevis says coach Tory Verdi has turned the team into a contender in his six seasons at the helm.
Arts & Culture	3/3/2023	6:40am	4:53	MA	The UMass women's basketball team plays George Mason this week in the quarter-final round of the A-10 tournament, coming into the tourney as the number-one seed for the first time in school history. Daily Hampshire Gazette reporter Hannah Bevis says coach Tory Verdi has turned the team into a contender in his six seasons at the helm.

Arts & Culture	3/10/2023	6:34am 8:34am	8:13	CT	In the 1970s, Connecticut sports was all about the Whalers hockey team, which flourished despite mergers, acquisitions, and the collapse of the Civic Center where the team played. The franchise moved to North Carolina in 1997. A new book by Globe sportswriter Christopher Price explains how the team thrived during its years in Hartford.
Arts & Culture	3/23/2023	6:45am 8:45am	5:05	MA	A few years ago, photographer and preservationist Terri Cappuccio was given 4000 antique glass plates. She developed many and found that the images provide a glimpse into life in western Massachusetts in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Because many of the photographers and subjects are unknown, she called the project "Somebody Photographed This."
Community Voices	1/20/2023	6:45am 8:45am	4:46	MA	Ann Hamilton, who led the Franklin County Chamber of Commerce for over three decades, has died. She was a driving force behind some of the county's most high-profile events, including Cider Days and the Green River Festival. Jim Olsen curates the music portion of the festival and spoke with NEPM's Monte Belmonte about Hamilton's legacy.
Community Voices	1/25/2023	6:22am 8:22am	2:35	MA	"Don't get in the cars of strangers," most of us--- quite sensibly---have been told. But commentator Susan Johnson says hitch-hiking has led to connecting with people who turn out to be like her, and not strangers at all.
Community Voices	2/28/2023	6:34am 8:34am	2:41	MA	In January, 4 people were arrested for trespassing at Boston City Hall. They had staged a sit-in outside the mayor's office, calling for a public hearing to consider renaming Faneuil Hall. Commentator Nick DeLuca says the protest provides the opportunity to face some uncomfortable history.
Community Voices	3/16/2023	6:34am 8:34am	9:21	MA	Oncologists often advise their patients to stick to their usual routines during treatment, as the familiarity might help them relax and avoid rumination. Plumber Frank Marchand of Whately, Massachusetts knows this instinctually: diagnosed with colon cancer seven years ago, he hasn't taken time off throughout his chemotherapy, and he explained why to NEPM's Karen Brown.
Community Voices	3/24/2023	6:34am 8:34am	5:06	NH	When Russia invaded Ukraine last year, a promising teenage tennis player and her mother had to flee. They were eventually approved to relocate to the U-S and settled in New England. As NHPR's Todd Bookman reports, the young player is finding her way in America...through the sport she loves.

Community Voices	3/28/2023	6:45am 8:45am	5:43	MA	Educator Gwen Agna and author and photographer Shelley Rotner wanted to create a book to help elementary and middle-school students explore the meaning of gender. They say many kids are starting to reject the male and female binary altogether. They spoke with NEPM's Nirvani Williams about their book, "True You: A Gender Journey."
Economic Development	1/10/2023	5:51am 7:51am	7:25	VT	Over the past year, a pair of cousins bought two vacant industrial properties in Vermont towns that have seen better economic days. They think they have the right business to bring new life to the properties---processing industrial hemp. The hemp industry has stumbled badly since being legalized in 2019; while 1300 Vermonters grew hemp that first year, the number has since fallen to just 99.
Economic Development	2/24/2023	6:34am 8:34am	9:17	MA	Employers in the region need workers and business leaders are ramping up their warnings about long-term threats to the state's competitiveness. AIM is the state's largest business association, with 3500 members across 150 different industries. Its executive vice-president, Chris Geehern, discussed the situation with NEPM's Carrie Healy.
Economic Development	3/15/2023	6:34am 8:34am	7:31	MA	Employers in western Massachusetts have a lot of jobs to fill, but not enough applicants. Almost all businesses, including those paying minimum wage, require online applications---and employers may be missing out on people who don't have the digital know-how to apply.
Education	2/8/2023	5:45am 7:45am	5:07	MA	After a unanimous vote by the board of Mount Holyoke College, the school has chosen a new president. Noted legal educator and social-justice scholar Danielle Holley will be the first black president in the school's 186-year history. She told NEPM's Carrie Healy what the distinction means to her.
Education	2/10/2023	6:45am 8:45am	5:30	MA	One of the two finalists in the search for a new UMass-Amherst chancellor visits the campus today. Paul Tikalsky is dean of the college of engineering at Oklahoma State. Next week, the other candidate, Javier Reyes will visit; he is presently interim chancellor of the University of Illinois-Chicago.
Education	2/17/2023	6:45am 8:45am	5:50	MA	The University of Massachusetts board has unanimously approved Javier Reyes as the new chancellor of the flagship Amherst campus. Trustees yesterday praised retiring chancellor Kumble Subbaswamy. Reyes was asked if he felt any pressure to fill his predecessor's shoes.

Energy & Environment	1/12/2023	6:45am 8:45am	4:36	MA	The gas you exhale during a 3-hour surgery could deliver the same global-warming effects as driving a car a long distance. That's because some anesthetic gases trap more heat than others. A new 'green' plan at Massachusetts General Hospital includes monthly reports to doctors and nurses showing the climate impact of their care.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	1/10/2023	4:44pm	4:40	MA	The trial has begun in the case of a suspended Springfield police officer in connection with a 2015 fight outside a city bar involving off-duty officers and four black civilians. Jose Diaz was acquitted of assault charges early last year, but had agreed to plead guilty to a charge of misleading investigators. He later changed his mind and withdrew the plea deal. His case is now before a judge.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	1/24/2023	4:44pm	4:11	MA	The US Department of Justice is investigating Worcester police over complaints alleging excessive use of force, false arrest, and discriminatory policing based on race or sex.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	2/8/2023	6:34am 8:34am	9:08	MA	Beating up suspects, violating civil rights, and abuse of authority are among allegations contained in complaints filed by civilians against officers of the Holyoke Police Department from 2010 through 2019. NEPM's Dusty Christensen spent a year and a half trying to obtain those records.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	3/14/2023	6:34am 8:34am	8:05	MA	In the new podcast "Up Against The Mob: The Springfield Crew," host and former prosecutor Elie Honig revisits one of his most pivotal cases in the fight to bring down the Italian mafia---a mob murder that helped unravel a notorious American crime family.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	3/24/2023	6:34am 8:34am	2:49	MA	One year ago, Miguel Estrella, a 22-year-old Pittsfield Massachusetts man, was fatally shot by a city police officer. At the time he was in the midst of a mental health crisis. Since that incident, Pittsfield police have added more mental health professionals to their staff.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	3/29/2023	5:44pm	4:25	MA	A top officer in the Holyoke, Massachusetts police department has been suspended amid allegations that he sexually assaulted and harassed a subordinate. Independent reporter Dusty Christiansen has followed the story involving one of the four captains on the force.

Public Health	2/28/2023	6:34am 8:34am	5:02	MA	Toxic chemicals known as PFAs have contaminated drinking-water supplies across Massachusetts. Cleanup is not cheap.
Public Health	3/1/2023	6:34am 8:34am	5:35	MA	More than half a million people in Massachusetts get their drinking water from private wells. But there are no federal or state rules about those private wells and the toxic chemicals known as PFAS, which have been linked to a growing list of health concerns. As WBUR's Barbara Moran reports, this lack of oversight leaves private well owners vulnerable to these so-called 'forever chemicals.'
Public Health	3/2/2023	6:34am 8:34am	6:05	MA	PFAS are manufactured chemicals found in many everyday products, from food packaging to outdoor gear to hand lotion. They have been linked to a long and growing list of medical concerns. WBUR's Gabrielle Emanuel reports on what happens when PFAS get into the human body.
Public Health	3/3/2023	8:40am	5:09	MA	PFAS chemicals are all around us---on our air, in some lakes and streams, and in a lot of consumer products. They were invented in the 1930s and now scientists are concerned about their impact on human health. As part of our series on PFAS, experts discussed ways to reduce the effects of these so-called 'forever chemicals.'
Public Health	3/22/2023	6:45am 8:45am	4:11	MA	Political and civil unrest continues to disrupt life in Haiti, which has been in crisis since the 2021 assassination of President Moise. Many in the country say resources are limited, especially access to adequate health care. One western Massachusetts college has stepped up to offer help.
