MOST SIGNIFICANT ISSUE-RESPONSIVE PROGRAMMING

ISSUE: Relationship with Money, Lend a Helping Hand, Protect our Oceans, Teen Suicide

Bay Sunday
April 3, 2016
6:00am
30 Minutes

Segment 1. Host Frank Mallicoat. We begin on the money watch, more specifically your relationship with your money. It can make your life, control your life, yes it can even ruin your life. Somewhere in the middle is a happy medium, and our next guest has made a living teaching us how to live and coexist and find a little happiness with your money. A financial advisor turned money coach, -say hi to financier and San Francisco's own, Megan Lathrop. For more information on how to relate to your finances, check out Megan's website: finanseer.com

Segment 2. She grew up poor and learned early in life the gift of giving back and now has devoted her life to helping those in need. Her nonprofit, Lend A Hand Foundation, started with humble beginnings some 16 years ago and now is giving over 5000 at risk kids a big dose of hope and inspiration. To inspire others to give, she wrote a book "Facing the Non Profit Blues: Turning Life's Challenges into Life's Joy." Say hi to Jefferson Awardee, Dee Johnson, Oakland bred and born. If you'd like more information about Facing the Non Profit Blues: Turning Life's Challenges into Life's Joy, log onto lendahandfoundation.org

Segment 3. . On land, we've charted just about every piece of Mother Earth. The ocean- well that's a different story. 95% of our oceans are still a mystery? Our guest is trying to change that. He is the executive director of "MARE" Marine Applied Research and Exploration. A nonprofit here in the Bay Area in Richmond which is hoping to protect and restore our oceans' threat and resources by getting to understand them a little bit better. Guest: Dirk Rosen. For more information about the MARE Group log onto maregroup.org

Segment 4. One million people take their lives each year, that's about one death every 40 seconds to suicide. It is the second leading cause of death for 10-24 year olds. Very sad. Our guests, Joi Rhone and Malik Dunbar, are trying to raise awareness with a big fundraiser after losing a loved one of their own to suicide. For more information about Suicide Awareness, Voices, and Education log onto save.org

ISSUE: Autism, Job Search

KCBS in Depth

April 3, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

Springtime is traditionally associated with new beginnings, so...it stands to reason that a new job may be front of mind for a lot of folks.

And, although the economy around the bay area is booming...getting in front of a hiring manager and then landing the position you want is still a challenge.

Now imagine that along with trying to get a potential employer to notice your terrific skill set and wonderful work ethic, you also need them to overcome any hesitation about a disability you may have. And, perhaps the disability is one with which fewer people are either familiar or comfortable...like Autism or another neuro-developmental disorder.

As we mark Autism Awareness month, this is the topic of our discussion today ... in a changing and ever-more challenging job market, a vast segment of potential workers with needed skills is suffering a drastically high rate of unemployment. My guests are working to change that...

Host Jane McMillan interviews Richard Holden is the regional commissioner for the U-S Bureau of Labor Statistics in San Francisco...with three decades of research and analysis of labor markets, regional economies and public policy. Before that he was the research director of the California employment development department.

Michael Bernick is a past director of the California labor department and employment development department...currently a research fellow at the milken institute and counsel to the Sedgwick Law Firm. Mr. Bernick also has more than 3 decades in job development and training.

These two gentlemen have come together on a book called the Autism Job Club...the neuro-diverse workforce in the new normal of employment.

ISSUE:       Politics and the California Primary

KCBS In Depth

April 10, 2016

6:00am

30 Minutes

As California residents, most of us have gotten used to having our home state be identified as a national leader, a pivotal player, a make or break kind of big, important, significant entity in almost every aspect.... except, in the last few decades, shaping the outcome of the presidential primary season and influencing who makes it to the general election.

We have a bunch of delegates to reward to each party's winner...but with the Golden State's primary not on the calendar until June, earlier primaries and caucuses in other states... more often than not...have already cast the dye before we even get to the polls.

Not so this time around! In this quite unusual presidential primary season, it could all come down to California.

To explain the ins and outs of delegates, contested conventions, even the electoral college come the general, we're joined by KCBS Political Analyst Marc Sandalow. Jane McMillan hosts.

ISSUE: Ubuntu Theater Project, Hip Hop Chess, American Indian Studies, Cuba Caribe

ISSUE:       Disabilities and Acceptance

KCBS In Depth

April 17, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

The state of California...boasting the 8th largest economy in the world is known as a leader in everything from technology, ...food and wine, environmental policies...to pop culture... but according to our guest... the Golden state comes in dead last in per capita spending on services for residents with developmental disabilities.

As the most populace state in the nation there are 33-million people making their lives in the Golden State... but about 4-million of our friends and neighbors, are trying to do so...while coping with a disability.

Certainly society and science have made strides in recognition, acceptance and assistance...but funding and accessibility to supportive programs continues to be a challenge, even as California has rebounded from the great recession. And there are still physical and discriminatory barriers facing the disabled.

Guest... Bryan Neider...CEO of Gatepath...a non-profit based in Redwood City...which for 96 years has been serving those with disabilities.

Hosted by Jane McMillan.

ISSUE:            Protecting the Environment, Fighting World-Wide Pollution

KCBS In Depth

April 24, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

Today we salute those who fight for the health of natural environment...and therefore for the health of us all.

Earth Day itself...this past Friday, April 22nd... saw the signing of the historic Paris Climate Accord at the United Nations by the heads of state or high level diplomats of more than 170 countries... including the world's biggest emitters of greenhouse gas, China and the United States.

As the leaders of the world's nations were in the spotlight this Earth Day... hundreds of thousands of every day heroes around the globe are fighting to save their local natural environments...and those grassroots champions are recognized each April by the Goldman Environmental Prize, based out of San Francisco. This International recognition goes to 6 individuals each year from the planet's 6 continental regions for their... quote..." sustained and significant efforts to protect and enhance the natural environment, often at great personal risk."

At great personal risk... for the adversaries they face are often large, ruthless and money driven. Before we meet 2 of this year's winners of the Goldman Environmental Prize... we take a moment to remember one of last year's winners who was murdered just weeks ago for her continued work to stop a dam project on a river sacred to the Lenca people of Honduras.

Goldman Prize executive Director David Gordon remembers Berta Caceres:

As we mark Earth Day weekend 2016...and meet two of this year's winners of the Goldman Environmental Prize...

First to Puerto Rico...officially known as the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, an unincorporated territory of the US.... UNofficially but widely known as the Island of Enchantment.

And, 3-thousand acres along the north coast is the Northeast Ecological Corridor...home to more than 50 rare, threatened or endangered species, a

UNESCO biosphere reserve called El Yunque National Forest and miles of pristine beaches...important nesting ground for the endangered leatherback turtle.

Luis Jorge Rivera Herrera saw his family's coconut farm taken over and destroyed for development...so when he found out developers had their eyes on the precious Northeast Ecological Corridor...his years of persistent action began:

Guest: Luis Jorge Rivera Herrera, 2016 Goldman Environmental Prize Winner from Puerto Rico.

This year's Goldman Prize winner from North America is young woman from a Baltimore suburb who said enough is enough when yet another in a long line of polluting industries was headed for her neighborhood....in fact, less than a mile from her high school.

Guest: Destiny Watford was a shy teenager when she was inspired to form a student group for social justice...igniting them to fight plans for the nation's largest trash incinerator...Ironically and erroneously touted as a clean energy provider.

Jane McMillan hosts.

ISSUE:           The Woman's Foundation of California

KCBS In Depth

May 1, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

Comments and claims about women, and women's issues are flying fast and furious in this presidential election season... some based in fact, many not.

Numbers, accurate data...they tell the unbiased story of how women and girls are really faring in the United States...

Here in California, we have the Women's Well-Being Index to give us the straight story, county by county, and in great detail.

Put together in a partnership between the California Budget and Policy Center...and the Women's Foundation of California, the index looks at everything from women's wages and their health to their personal safety ... to simply having enough food to eat on a regular basis.

As you might expect, women in bay area counties may fare better in some categories ... but overall in the state... the disparity women face obvious...in economic security and political influence. And that's not just a problem for women and their children, but it is costing us as a society.

Today's Guest, Surina Khan, the CEO of the Women's Foundation of California...

Host: Jane McMillan

ISSUE: Legalization of Marijuana

KCBS In Depth

May 8, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

We've had some big news on the California marijuana legalization front in the last few days...

One of the initiatives to legalize pot for personal use appears to have gathered enough signatures for the November ballot...

A local survey by the Bay Area Council showed 50 percent support for legalization from bay area residents...

The Feds have dropped a long-pursued forfeiture case against Harborside HealthCenter... the largest medical cannibus clinic in California with locations in Oakland and San Jose.

To talk more about all of this we're joined by Steve DeAngelo co-counder and executive director of Harborside Health Center. He's a longtime advocate of cannibus legalization, was recently named one of the cannibus industry's most influential people by Forbes magazine... and has authored the book The Cannibus Manifesto.

Hosted by Jane McMillan.

ISSUE:       The Human Decision Making Process

KCBS In Depth

May 15, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

Analysis Paralysis... information overload... decision-making dilemmas...

Who doesn't experience this? And who hasn't been given some gimmicky advice for streamlining your life with tricks for decisive action?

Our guests have a theory about some of that advice... about how your brain sifts and sorts information like a computer...or vice versa... and so, they ask, why wouldn't an algorithm work for easing the human decision-making process much as it does for a computer coming with answers?

Choosing a mate, a career, a place to live...

What about intuition, what about fate, what about serendipity?

Brian Christian, computer scientist and author of the bestseller The Most Human Human... and Tom Griffiths, a cognitive scientist at U-C Berkeley. Friends and colleagues, they've written a new book together called Algorithms to Live By: The Computer Science of Human Decisions.

Hosted by Jane McMillan.

ISSUE: California Drought

KCBS In Depth

May 22, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

What a relief this winter has been...with goodly amounts of rainfall giving us a respite from the drought. But... it's only been a respite... and we're closing in on another warm dry summer in California. While some mandatory limits on water use have been eased in some jurisdictions... no one has called the drought over.

There are other threats to California's water supply outside of weather patterns: Supply and demand, even in wet years, is out of balance...as is access...who has the right to what water.

Bring in climate change... and one rainy season takes it rightful place in this scenario as a gift rather than a promise.

Our Guest, Ellen Hanak is director of the PPIC Water Policy Center and a senior fellow at the Public Policy Institute of California.... a non-profit, non-partisan research center which has become a guiding source of information for California Public Policy.

Along with directing research, and authoring books and reports on water policy, Ellen Hanak is also an expert on climate change and infrastructure finance.

Before joining the Public Policy Institute Ms. Hanak served in the French agricultural research system, the President’s Council of Economic Advisers, and the World Bank.

ISSUE: National Safety Council

KCBS In Depth
May 29, 2016
6:30am
30 Minutes

Deborah Hersman ... became a very familiar name and voice to bay area listeners in the summer of 2013 when , on July 6th of that year, Asiana flight 214 crashed as it attempted to land at San Francisco International Airport. As then Chairwoman of the National Transportation and Safety Board, Ms. Hersman and her team were on the ground here within hours and oversaw the investigation into the cause of the crash.

National Safety Council research shows unintentional injuries are the 5th leading cause of death in the United States and the majority of these deaths, 48%, occur in the home. The three peaks of fatalities through a lifetime are teen crashes, unintentional poisoning in middle age and falls near the end of life.

Deborah Hersman was in fact sworn in Chairwoman of the NTSB three times before joining the National Safety Council last year as PRESIDENT AND CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER.

Beginning its 2nd century The NSC works to prevent accidental or unintended injuries and deaths of Americans...whether at work, at home...on the roads...or in our communities.

ISSUE: California's New Tobacco Rules

KCBS In Depth

June 5, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

As of June 9th of this year, young Californians have to flash an ID that shows they are 21 before they can buy a pack of cigarettes... same as a six pack of beer.

Governor Jerry Brown signed a package of tobacco related rules into law including bills regulating the manufacture and sale of e-cigarettes.

Big tobacco fought the bills... and the governor did veto one that would have allowed individual counties to tax tobacco products...rather than wait for tax legislation to pass statewide.

Still health advocates says this move has loosened big tobacco's hold on Sacramento legislators, and solidified California as a leader in the smoke and tobacco-free fight.

To help us understand the impact of California's new tobacco rules, we're joined on In Depth by Dr Steve Schroeder

Distinguished Professor of Health and Health Care at UC San Francisco, and Director of The Smoking Cessation Leadership Center...

The SCLC was established in 2003 to drive down smoking rates across the nation, and drive up the number of health professionals who are equipped to help smokers quit.

It's no secret how tough it is to keep one's financial head above water in the bay area... with astronomical costs for housing, education and healthcare... so getting, keeping and advancing in a job or career is a top priority.

But in real life, all of us have more than one priority... families, kids, parents... people who need us. And the number of us juggling caregiving and jobs is growing. So, what happens when those priorities collide?

There are safety mechanisms in place, in the law, to protect workers in these situations from losing jobs unjustly...but caregiver discrimination in the workplace continues and is growing, as is the number of lawsuits filed, and won, by employees.

This trend has been documented in a new report by the UC Hastings Center for WorkLife Law... called Caregivers in the Workplace: family responsibilities discrimination litigation.

Our guest today is Joan Williams... Distinguished Professor of Law, and the Founding Director of the Center for WorkLife Law at UC Hastings College of the Law.

A well-known advocate of gender equity and legal scholarly work, Joan Williams has authored countless articles and book chapters, along with eight books including Unbending Gender: Why Family and Work Conflict and What to Do About It ...and most recently, with her daughter Rachel Dempsey... What Works for Women at Work: Four Patterns Every Woman Should Know.

We find ourselves in a weekend In Between... Next weekend is Pride Weekend in San Francisco...the 46th Annual Pride Celebration and Parade. The San Francisco Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Pride Celebration Committee says the annual event is dedicated to education, the commemoration of LGBT heritage, the celebration of its culture and...Liberation...this year focusing on Racial and Economic Equality.

But, of course, it was just LAST weekend the community, and the nation, suffered a horrific loss of life at Pulse Gay nightclub in Orlando...and so hearts are also heavy and Pride Celebrations will also focus on remembering and honoring those who were lost.

This week on In Depth, on this in between weekend of continued mourning and Pride celebration we're not going to focus on the particulars of the Orlando shooting itself, or on the shooter...but in the wake of this travesty, we are going to look at the challenges still facing the gay community across America and here at home.

Guest: Executive Director of the San Francisco LGBT Community Center... Rebecca Rolfe, and Development Director Roberto Ordenana.

The happiest time of the year for most American kids is now upon us...Summer Vacation.

And these long, warm days may also have many of us thinking longingly back to our own childhood summers... and the more carefree days of our youth, in general.

But, do kids of today experience childhood in the same context as previous generations? As with all things, time brings changes...to society, and to the individual experience.

Our guest on this week's In Depth has taken the long view of American childhood...as it fits into the full history of our nation and how the two have shaped each other.

Paula S. Fass, historian of childhood and education at the University of California, Berkeley where she is the Margaret S. Byrne Professor Emerita.

Her books include: The End of American Childhood, Inheriting the Holocaust: A Second Generation Memoir ...and Kidnapped: Childhood Abduction in America.

Her latest book is THE END OF AMERICAN CHILDHOOD

A History of Parenting From Life on the Frontier to the Managed Child

We're talking about American childhood...it's uniqueness and how it's changing... our expert is UC Berkeley Professor Emerita Paula Fass...
