MOST SIGNIFICANT ISSUE-RESPONSIVE PROGRAMMING

ISSUE: The Big Screen, East and West Religions, Healthy Eating

Bay Sunday
October 2, 2016
6:00am
30 Minutes

Bay Sunday is hosted by Kenny Choi.

Remember those troll dolls with the funny hair?
You probably played with them with you were a kid... and if you're a kid, maybe you still do. Those little troll dolls are coming to the big screen...
Bay Sunday's Liam Mayclem tells us they have a quirky bay area connection.

A mathematical physicist and environmental scientist has found common ground in religions from the east and west...in the studio with us this morning is dr. William Keepin..PHD. He's the author of 'Belonging to God -- Spirituality, Science and a Universal Path of Divine Love'.

Halloween is upon us, and i don't know about you... but for me, that means candy.... and lots of it. Here with some healthy alternatives is 'Fit Chef Katy'.. from "Lean for Life" by Lindora Clinic. 'Lean for life' is opening up five Bay area clinics at local Safeway stores...
Food and fitness expert Chef Katy has some recipes that will trick us into eating healthy well-beyond Halloween...for more information about lean for life by Lindora Clinic, log onto lean for life - dot- com.

Day of the Dead, or... 'dia de los muertos' celebrations are happening all over the bay area this week...

One of the hippest, rockin-est has got to be the third annual dia de los muertos concert at the Regency Ballroom in San Francisco...

Joining us this morning, members of two of the bands performing in this year's concert. Juan Manuel Caipo from the band 'Bang Data' and Marco Polo Sandiago of 'La Misa Negra.' Bang Data and La Misa Negra will be playing at the third annual dia de los muertos concert happening at the Regency Ballroom in San Francisco... on October 31st.

ISSUE: Human Rights, Two Personal Stories

KCBS in Depth

October 2, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

The test of bravery in a life a death situation... fortunately, most of us will never realistically have to face that test...but many of us probably wonder what we'd do "if... "

Imagine IF we lived under ISIS control would we have the guts to smuggle out video to inform the world? If our place of work were bombed to silence us...would we return to that work each day for the greater good? Would we find ways to survive prison camps and human trafficking and still reach back and help others after we'd made our own escape?... Or be clever and determined enough to flout a dictator's chokehold on information by flying balloons with leaflets or drones with USB drives over the DMZ?

Every year at the renowned Oslo Freedom Forum the world gets to meet such inspirational human rights advocates. They come together to testify with their stories and brainstorm about ways to better the human condition of the oppressed of our planet.

The Bay Area got to experience meeting many of these same inspirational people this past week as The Human Rights Foundation brought them to San Francisco's own Freedom Forum.

Today you will meet two of these brave, young, human rights advocates who, through their own suffering are now working to ease the suffering of others. In the second half of In Depth today, We will introduce you to Hyeonsoo Lee... a defector from North Korea now working to help other country women who like her, escaped into China only to be hunted by police and driven into the clutches of traffickers.

But first, Rosa Maria Paya from Cuba... president of the Latin American Network of Youth for Democracy, and is a member of the Cuba Decides campaign. With the new thawing of relations between the US and the Cuban regime...Americans have become eager to know more about the island nation so close to us...yet off limits for so long. But Paya... who lost her democracy advocate father to a mysterious car accident widely believed to be a regime assassination... says the most important thing to know about Cuba is that its people are still very much oppressed.

Rosa Maria Paya continues her late father's push for democracy in Cuba through the campaign, Let Cuba Decide. You can find out more at www.cubadecide.org...and we'll have a link on our website cbsf.com

Today we're meeting two of the inspiring human rights advocates who came from around the world to gather in San Francisco this past week as part of The San Francisco Freedom Forum... an offshoot of the annual Oslo Freedom Forum, brought to the Bay Area by the Human Rights Foundation.

Now meet Hyeonsao Lee.... who escaped North Korea at 17...was forced to live underground in China for a decade before successfully defecting to South Korea....only to go back and lead her family out of North Korea on a long a treacherous escape through Laos and Cambodia. Her incredible story is documented in her memoir The Girl with Seven Names. Hyeonsao Lee is now dedicated to rescuing other North Korean women driven into sexual slavery in China after escaping the Kim regime.

Hyeonsoo Lee is a student, activist, and North Korean defector... now starting her own non-profit called NorthStar...for guiding light... to help rescue others victimized because of their desire for freedom from the Kim regime. It's website is under construction but when operational will be at www.northstarNK.org.

ISSUE: California Women's Wellbeing Index.

KCBS In Depth

October 9, 2016

6:00am

30 Minutes

Comments and claims about women, and women's issues are flying fast and furious in this presidential election season... some based in fact, many not.

Numbers, accurate data...they tell the unbiased story of how women and girls are really faring in the United States...

Here in California, we have the Women's Well-Being Index to give us the straight story, county by county, and in great detail.

Put together in a partnership between the California Budget and Policy Center...and the Women's Foundation of California, the index looks at everything from women's wages and their health to their personal safety ... to simply having enough food to eat on a regular basis.

As you might expect, women in bay area counties may fare better in some categories ... but overall in the state... the disparity women face obvious....in economic security and political influence. And that's not just a problem for women and their children. My guest says it's costing us as a society.

Surina Khan is the CEO of the Women's Foundation of California...

Bullying, name-calling, yelling, threatening... not telling the truth. This sounds like the typical list of issues parents and teachers have to navigate with children. And it is... but it's also just a partial list of behavior exhibited in the presidential campaign. And because this is all played out on TV, radio, and social media... it's bound to have an effect on kids who hear and see it.

How to navigate that with impressionable young ones when we're all called to be civil, honest, respectful.

Our guest today is an expert on that...Jim Steyer, Founder and CEO of Commonsense Media....

An independent, nonprofit advocating for kids...and helping teachers and parents navigate the world of media and technology on their behalf.

Commonsense Media offers independent ratings and reviews of media content for kids from books to video games ... tv to movies.... FREE K-12 learning resources...and advocates for children through public policy engagement.

We just commemorated the 27th anniversary of the Loma Prieta Earthquake...the 6.9 shaker on the San Andreas fault. The shaking of the initial quake lasted a full 20 seconds but the clean-up and economic losses lasted much longer than that...with some affected communities still not back to pre-quake health.

As Californians we know more big ones are coming... and with some new research we now have an updated forecast of where, when and the depth of the economic impact of the aftermath.

Today we are joined on KCBS In Depth by Annemarie Baltay, Research Geophysicist with the USGS Earthquake Science Center...who can help us with the where and when and expected strength of the next shaker... and Richard Holden, Assistant Commissioner for Regional Operations of the Pacific Region for the Bureau of Labor Statistics. He will be filling us in on the expected economic and labor impact of the next big one... from the Bureau's new Hayward Earthquake Employment Loss Report.

KCBS In Depth
October 30, 2016
6:30am
30 Minutes

With just days to go until the General Election... the airwaves, social media and mailboxes are crammed with political ads. It costs a lot of money to run a campaign... and that need in American politics opens the door to favors and influence that goes way beyond one person, one vote.

And in recent years, unlimited and anonymous money has been playing a big role in who gets elected, how they legislate once in office...and the public policy we have to abide by.

The so-called Dark Money donors are known only to themselves and the candidates and legislation they support... and are not bound by law to be revealed to voters. Dark Money...and other vast amounts of identified money form much more than a simple quid pro quo between elected officials and donors... it finances an intertwined network of political influence with long tentacles.

it's become easier for all of us to track the identified political donors, those who accept their money, and related legislative votes.

Daniel G Newman...President and Co-Founder of MAPLIGHT.ORG... a non-partisan research organization that tracks money's influence on politics and public policy.

One of Maplight's latest projects is DARK MONEY WATCH...an attempt to shed some light on sources of hundreds of millions of dollars to campaigns...and whose origins are unknown to voters.

Daniel Newman, welcome back to In Depth in these final days of the General Election Campaign. Let's begin by sorting out all the kinds of campaign financing that's out there... Soft Money, Super Pacs, and Dark Money

ISSUE: HOW VOTERS THINK

KCBS In Depth
November 13, 2016

30 Minutes

This first weekend following a stunning presidential and general election, many of us are still trying to figure out what happened, and why.

We may all be Americans but there seems to be little we recognize in each other... at least politically ... that's familiar or consistent. What words, perceptions, life experiences...drive our world view and political decision-making?

Cognitive linguist Dr. George Lakoff...Professor Emeritus of UC Berkeley.... Author of several books including Moral Politics - How Liberals and Conservatives Think... Don't Think of an Elephant...The Political Mind... (psycho- linguist)

He theorizes that conservatives and progressives simply think differently about politics, based on their world view which likely came from their family structure. Strict father or parent model emphasizes self-discipline and respect for authority and a reward/punishment reference. A Nurturant parent model features empathy, obedience out of respect and love, and a more collaborative model is key. Dr. Lakoff contends these unconscious metaphors are what drive our political reasoning...and now, what have given us the results of the 2016 General Election.

Here's the conversation we had following the party conventions this summer: (28:00)

That was my conversation this summer with Cognitive Linguist George Lakoff...author of Several Books including Moral Politics, How Liberals and Conservatives Think... and The Political Mind.

Just retired after 50 years at UC Berkeley he remains Professor Emeritus there...and is launching the new Center for Brain Mind and Society at Cal.

ISSUE: COVERED CA

KCBS In Depth

1.5 million Californians have healthcare under the state created, state run health insurance exchange we know as Covered California. It is a participant in the federal Affordable Care Act many of us know as Obamacare... and through that legislation an expansion of Medicaid (the federal version of medical) these federal subsidies allow for additional health coverage for some 12 million Californians...

What happens now with a Republican Congress and Senate and a President elect who have all promised a repeal of the ACA?

We are joined this week on InDepth by Peter Lee, Executive Director of Covered California:

Regardless of the outcome of the presidential election...and renewed promises to repeal the Affordable Care Act, or, Obamacare... California's Health Insurance Exchange continues to encourage new sign-ups during this open enrollment time frame.

Covered California Executive Director Peter Lee says no matter what happens in Washington D-C in the near future, any change of policy will take time and Californians can enroll for guaranteed coverage through 2017...and that the standard of coverage will remain high as enacted in Obamacare. Lee tells KCBS' Jane McMillan he is concerned about that standard being maintained should the A-C-A be completely repealed and a lesser replacement take it's place.

Peter Lee, Executive Director of Covered California, is Jane McMillan's guest this weekend on In Depth... Sunday at 8:30am and 8:30pm on KCBS.

By the way, the deadline to sign up for health coverage through Covered California and be covered as of New Year's Day is December 15th. We have a link to Covered California on our website, cbssf.com.

Nearly one and a half million residents of California currently have health insurance coverage through the state's health care exchange, Covered California, created under the provisions of the Affordable Care Act...A-C-A..or... Obamacare.

Because of the expansion of Medicaid through the A-C-A, another 12 million Californians are covered. So, what happens to this coverage if the promises of the Republican House and Senate and the President-Elect are kept to repeal the landmark legislation?

Nobody really knows. But, Covered California Executive Director Peter Lee says coverage through the Golden State's exchange is guaranteed through 2017 and he's encouraging people to sign up.

And, Lee tells KCBS' Jane McMillan he continues to debunk some of the stubborn arguments against it:

Peter Lee, Executive Director of Covered California, is Jane McMillan's guest this weekend on In Depth... Sunday at 8:30am and 8:30pm on KCBS.

By the way, the deadline to sign up for health coverage through Covered California and be covered as of New Year's Day is December 15th. We have a link to Covered California on our website, cbssf.com.

With the fate of Obamacare, or... the Affordable Care Act .. in jeopardy following last week's election...so is the access to health care for nearly one and a half million Californian's covered through the state's health exchange Covered California.

Add to that another 12 million Golden State residents covered through Obamacare's expansion of Medicaid.

Covered California Executive Director Peter Lee tells KCBS' Jane McMillan that while California's exchange isn't perfect, it's pretty successful and will proceed with guaranteed coverage for 2017... and he encourages people to sign-up now during open enrollment.

Peter Lee, Executive Director of Covered California, is Jane McMillan's guest this weekend on In Depth... Sunday at 8:30am and 8:30pm on KCBS.

Although practiced for millennia in the East...Mindfulness Meditation began to get some traction in the U-S back in the 70's... although for much mainstream America it was linked with unfamiliar religions and erroneously lumped in with some fringe practices of the era.

But this secular practice of sitting quietly for a short period of time, and focusing on something in the here and now...one's breathing, for example...has gained mainstream recognition for its health benefits...most importantly for the brain. And this recognition is not just from Mindfulness Meditation practitioners... but from the highest levels of the scientific, medical and business communities... including studies involving the Harvard Business Review and a variety of medical teams and universities. Their studies have found Mindfulness Meditation increases gray matter in the hippocampus which deals with emotions, memory, stress, resilience... and positively stimulates at least 7 other areas of the brain including the anterior cingulate cortex (ACC) dealing with self-regulation, problem-solving, learning from past experience, decision-making.

If Harvard Business Review says Mindfulness Meditation is essential to CEO's and those in a complex and quickly changing environment...(and that's just about all of us)... how might this help children navigate their ever-changing and stressful growing years?

That concept has been addressed in a new children's book called Puppy Mind... and its author is our guest this week on In Depth. Andrew

Nance has three decades in education and has been teaching Mindfulness to students in the San Francisco Unified District for 2 of those years. He founded Mindful Arts San Francisco which facilitates volunteers to teach the practice at underserved schools. Andrew Nance is also an actor and director and served as the Conservatory Director of San Francisco's New Conservatory Theater Center.

ISSUE: The 75th Anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor

KCBS In Depth

December 4, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

This week we commemorate the 75th Anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor ...December 7th 1941. We're very fortunate today on In Depth to introduce you to two local heroes of the Greatest Generation who were serving that day at Pearl Harbor and survived.... Both were teenagers...from mid-west farming communities... who saw the world change that Sunday morning ...right before their eyes.

Mr. Michael Mickey Ganitch now of San Leandro... was born in a farming town near Akron Ohio in 1919... and upon joining the navy in California, was assigned to the flagship of the Pacific Fleet based at Pearl Harbor Hawaii:

Mickey Ganitch is making the journey back to Pearl Harbor this December 7th to mark the 75th Anniversary of the attack.

That Sunday morning, just across the channel from Mickey and the Pennsylvania, was Charles Chuck Kohler, now of Concord, but then a 17-year old from far northwest Minnesota on the adventure of his young life.

Chuck says just as he'd figured out what was going on, he was ordered, with others, to take cover in a ditch... that didn't sit well with him.

And he didn't obey it! He and another sailor grabbed a 30 caliber machine gun, ran to some parked PBY boat planes, mounted the gun inside and started shooting:

Like Mickey Ganitch, Chuck Kohler served in the Pacific theater throughout the war...

For your service.. and your continued devotion...Thank you...

On December 7th, Chuck Kohler will be speaking at the annual lighting ceremony of the Mt Diablo Beacon which commemorates the attack on Pearl Harbor. He...and Mickey...and all the survivors and their loved ones ask that we all spare a thought that day.

ISSUE: The Arts after Ghost Ship

KCBS In Depth

December 11, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

It's been a week now since the deadly Ghost Ship Warehouse fire in Oakland rocked the bay area... the deadliest fire in the city's history.

We've learned the names of all 36 victims...and a bit about their lives and loves. They range in age from 17 to near 40... mourned and memorialized by family and countless friends... as well as the wider bay area community.

The tragedy has brought a multi-faceted issue to the fore... calling into question everything from code enforcement, live/work space rules, affordable housing, and the value of art and artists in an era and area of gentrification...

We're going to talk about all of that today with the Director and CEO of the Oakland Museum of California... Lori Fogarty.

The Oakland Museum of California is a unique art venue with deep roots in the Oakland and regional art community...tapping the talents and stories of the people of Oakland and championing local art of every kind ...everything from crafting, cooking, music, and the industrial arts.

And like so many in the bay area and the art community...the Oakland Museum of California has been touched by this tragedy.

ISSUE: Electoral College

KCBS In Depth

December 18, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

It's usually considered a "ceremonial vote"... but this time, Monday's vote by the Electoral College to officially select a President of the United States may be anything but...

It almost stands to reason... because nothing about this just concluded presidential campaign or election or aftermath has been what one might call "normal".

If it's been a while since your last civics class...or you haven't been swept up in the Hamilton craze and read up on this Founder's critical role in creating the Electoral College... we have the perfect guest for you this week on InDepth.

Matthew Coles is professor of Election Law at UC Hastings College of the Law... the former Deputy National Legal Director of the ACLU, and Director of the ACLU's Equality Center.

Hosted by Jane McMillan.

ISSUE: EINSTEIN'S GREATEST MISTAKE

KCBS In Depth
December 25, 2016
6:30am
30 Minutes

More than a century after publishing perhaps his greatest work... The Theory of General Relativity...Albert Einstein, the brilliant physicist whose work has helped us understand the very workings of the universe... remains a revered and beloved figure, and not just by scientists. Einstein is, and always has been...cool.

His image... wild hair, big moustache, soulful yet mischievous eyes... remains emblazoned on everything from T-shirts and mouse pads to the covers of volumes of books on HIS life and his contribution to OURS. Einstein's popularity, due as much to the force of his personality as his brilliance, has never really waned ...

even if some of his theories did.

Among the many books written about Einstein was the New York Times best-seller $E=MC^2$. You may have seen the PBS NOVA documentary Einstein's Big Idea...which was based on it.

The author of $E=MC^2$ is back with a new book on the genius...and he joins us today on IN Depth... DAVID BODANIS... welcome to In Depth and congratulations on your new book; EINSTEIN'S GREATEST MISTAKE.

Hosted by Jane McMillan.
