ISSUE: Moral Politics

KCBS In Depth

July 31, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

Today's guests include cognitive linguist Dr. George Lakoff...Professor Emeritus of UC Berkeley.... author of several books including Moral Politics - How Liberals and Conservatives Think... Don't Think of an Elephant...the Political Mind... (psycho- linguist)

The conventions are over... official nominations for the Presidential contenders are in the books and now... the name of the game is convincing voters. Words, perceptions, images, emotions... are all in play and will be used to sway Americans before they mark their November ballots.

But there may only be so much persuasion can do because according to my distinguished guest... conservatives and progressives simply think differently about politics, based on their world view which likely came from their family structure. Strict father or parent model emphasizes self-discipline and respect for authority and a reward/punishment reference. A nurturant parent model features empathy, obedience out of respect and love, and a more collaborative model is key.

Dr. Lakoff contend these unconscious metaphors drive our political reasoning.
Let's find out how this is playing out in the 2016 Presidential race...

First... how do we know this... how did you come to this conclusion ? Brain vs mind...

How much is taught versus hard wired?

Perception...why is Hillary disliked when on paper she's done everything right, and Trump an extreme? Likeability... labels...why things stick...group think, herd mentality...like popularity in high school.

Authority and morality go together... hierarchy ...western culture...

Winning...strong even if wrong...

Fear vs optimism

Causation... immediate gratification or effect vs long view...

Language... words are not neutral

Complex ideas vs simple solutions...even if factually impossible.

Swing voters... a combination.... how do their brains process and how to win them?

How does one side sway the other linguistically...how do we sway our "crazy" friends and relatives?

ISSUE: Alzheimer's Disease ... Research, Care, Cost

KCBS In Depth

August 7, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

The terrifying and mysterious diseases of the brain... they rob memory, personality...they rob life. These diseases, like Alzheimer's, can lie in wait for decades...laying the groundwork for their systematic destruction of brain function later in life.

Researchers continue to look for answers... and the latest in that work was just presented to the Alzheimer's Association International Conference in Toronto...

BILL FISHER was there... he is the Chief Executive Officer of the Northern California and Northern Nevada Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association...he also serves on the State of California Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Advisory Committee; was a founding board member of the Berkeley Alzheimer's Family Respite Center (now Alzheimer's Services of the East Bay) and is a trustee with the Hubert L. Byrd Foundation for respite care.

Bill Fisher has been serving the Alzheimer's Association for 29 years... and can not only give us the very latest in the fight against this and other diseases like it...he can also give us the long view of how far we've come and how far we still need to go.

*What's new, human trials, new research in earlier detection- gender issues, breakthroughs..drugs

Research... human trials... care costs...

Misdiagnosis of Alzheimers and other dementia-like diseases... could be Lyme, Calcium issues, endocrine problems...

Changes in diagnosis, treatment, is policy/coverage keeping up? Docs knowledge for screening?

Timing is an issue...because the disease (protein build-up) can start decades before symptoms... new drug testing can then take a long time. (patent life issues?...not a money maker for drug companies. what about the govt, as a public health issue?--bump in funding--congress on drug exclusivity time-line, ACA)

When was the last time there was a massive breakthrough ? Few and Far between.

“Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents,” or DAPA (blocks DACA expansion) DREAMers? Original DACA remains in place... other programs?

The DREAM Act (acronym for Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors) is an American legislative proposal for a multi-phase process for illegal immigrants in the United States that would first grant conditional residency and upon meeting further qualifications, permanent residency.

The White House announced the programs in November 2014, issuing a five-page guidance memo enabling qualifying undocumented workers to receive temporary relief from the threat of deportation and to apply for programs that could qualify them for work authorization and associated benefits.

The Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA) targets the nearly 4.3 million undocumented parents of citizens and lawful residents, and the second program expands the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA), initiative aimed at non-citizens who came to the country as children.

It can be a very tall order, a daunting one, and sometimes downright discouraging...but we have an expert on college admissions to help us slog through the ins and outs, do's and don'ts of getting into an institution of higher education.

ISSUE: Coping with a Disability

KCBS In Depth

August 28, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

The state of California...boasting the 8th largest economy in the world, comes in dead last in per capita spending on services for residents with developmental disabilities.

As the most populace state in the nation there are 33-million people making their lives in the Golden State... but about 4-million of our friends and neighbors, are trying to do so...while coping with a disability.

Certainly society and science have made strides in recognition, acceptance and assistance...but funding and accessibility to supportive programs continues to be a challenge, even as California has rebounded from the great recession. And there are still physical and discriminatory barriers facing the disabled.

We're going to find out more from our guest today... Bryan Neider...CEO of Gatepath...a non-profit based in Redwood City...which for 96 years has been serving those with disabilities.

Topics include:

The financial health of non-profits for the disabled, the lack of other safety nets, who is helped and who is hurt.

Integration of the developmentally disabled into mainstream schools, jobs and society.

The history of institutions shifting to privatized and managed care.... and now law enforcement is now a safety net for many with mental disabilities.

State looking at final proposals to close the last three institutions for the severely developmentally disabled...including the Sonoma Developmental Center (in 2 years) which houses about 350. What then? Is there a place in society for institutional care?

ISSUE: The Health of the American Labor Force

KCBS In Depth

September 4, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

This Labor Day weekend, in the eye of the Presidential Campaign storm... we check on the status of the American worker...including new challenges of the so-called shared economy jobs, wages and standards of living... and unions versus so-called right to work states.

Here in the Bay Area, we've been mostly lucky in the employment department...at least by the statistics...

According to the state's Employment Development Department... or EDD;

All of California's economic markets added jobs over the last six years... but the high technology-oriented Bay Area has been the driver of employment expansion in the Golden State...growing by nearly 22 percent compared to the state-wide job growth of 15-half percent.

But the well-being of workers isn't just a question of statistics... it's also how well those jobs are matching the demands of life. And there is the question of social philosophy... is it all for one and one for all... or one for one....which leads us to questions about union strength and collective bargaining.

My guest this Labor Day weekend is Labor Expert and U-C Berkeley Professor Harley Shaiken... also the Director of Cal's Center for Latin American Studies.

Topics Include:

Union membership, challenges to unions

Wage stagnation

The new sharing economy... a recovered economy but stagnant wages...drive for $15...successes.

Wisconsin...ground zero in collective bargaining damage

Federal contracts...POTUS using that to end discrimination, raise minimum wages, union rules for contractors: Labor Dept issues new rules on state retirement savings.

President Obama's executive order on Fair Pay and Safe Workplaces.

CA most powerful unions...

Public opinion of unions...

Gender issues in the workplace

Right to work states

SCOTUS rulings or non-rulings on labor-- On June 28th, the U.S. Supreme Court denied the petition from nine California public school teachers to rehear their First Amendment challenge to mandatory union fees. The plaintiffs petitioned the Court to rehear their case after a 4-4 decision was issued in the wake of Justice Scalia's death. When the split decision was issued, it was not accompanied by an opinion on the merits of the argument. All that was issued was a one-line statement that the decision was split 4-4.

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court handed organized labor a major victory on Tuesday, deadlocking 4 to 4 in a case that had threatened to cripple the ability of public-sector unions to collect fees from workers who chose not to join and did not want to pay for the unions' collective bargaining activities.

A ruling allowing workers to refuse to pay the fees would have been the culmination of a decades-long campaign by a group of prominent conservative foundations aimed at weakening unions that represent teachers and other public employees. Tuesday's deadlock denied them that victory, but it set no precedent and left the door open for further challenges once the Supreme Court is back at full strength.

As humans grapple with our earth-bound challenges.... climate change, wars, politicians... even gravity... it's sometimes good to remember we are just one piece of matter in an unknowable vastness of space. While we pass time here on our own planet, struggling and changing... things we can't yet imagine are going on, and have been going on all around us in space. In the past few weeks alone we've heard about what might have been a signal from space, we learned about Dragonfly 44 galaxy... and more evidence of Planet Nine... and competition getting to Mars...

So to help us look to the heavens this week on InDepth, we welcome back Seth Shostak... Senior Astronomer at the SETI Institute in Mountain View... a private, nonprofit organization dedicated to exploring, understanding, and explaining the origin and nature of life in the universe.

The Institute comprises three centers, the Center for Education, the Carl Sagan Center for the Study of Life in the Universe and the Center for Public Outreach.

TOPICS INCLUDE:

Why we search... exploration and discovery is essential to civilization

Investigating an "Interesting signal from space"

99% Dark matter the ultra-diffuse galaxy Dragonfly 44. Astronomers have discovered a galaxy as big as the Milky Way that consists almost entirely of dark matter, a mysterious and invisible substance that scientists have been trying to figure out for decades. Only one-hundredth of one percent of the galaxy is ordinary, visible matter like stars and planets. The other 99.99 percent of the stuff in this galaxy can't be seen.

Mars colonization

China plans to go to Mars in 4 years... this month launching Heavenly Palace lab as beginning of future Space Station.

Planet Nine

*Space for earthly answers like energy: For more than half a century now, the world's top scientists have been trying to build a fusion device that would essentially replicate and miniaturize the power of the Sun. This so-called Star in a Jar vision would provide the Earth with clean, safe and practically limitless energy -- forever. U.S. Dept. of Energy, plans for a viable nuclear fusion device are officially on the table. Hosted by Jane McMillan.

ISSUE: Current State of the Bay, Climate Change and Sea Level Rise

KCBS In Depth

September 25, 2016

6:30am

30 Minutes

Today we're talking about the center of our universe here in the Bay Area... our ecological heart, lungs...our beautiful San Francisco Bay.

It feeds us, in more ways than one, warms us, cools us, mesmerizes us...entertains us, sustains us. Because the bay makes northern California the desirable place it is... it also feels the pressures of a region continuing to grow and push the boundaries of space and resources.

Joining us to talk about the health of San Francisco bay...challenges, threats and solutions... is the Executive Director of Save the Bay ...David Lewis.

It's thanks to the founders of this organization that we have the bay at all...

Topics include:

Current state of the bay ... the original view or plan for the bay versus how it's seen/valued now?

Biggest threats now. (increasing housing, traffic, runoff)

Climate change and sea level rise

Sylvia McLaughlin... 99... January with Kay Kerr and Esther Golick....co-founded the San Francisco Bay Conservation Group save the bay and helped pioneer the tradition of grass-roots environmental activism in California...saving it from the plan in 1961 to fill it in to just a river, but 2020....for the transport of commerce.

The 2020 strategic plan is a three pronged effort: habitat restoration, driving public policy around healthy bay issues, smart communities (mega-region bay area council)

Delta Tunnels... SF Estuary master plan (drought, recycled water)...Port of Oakland (waterfront development, trucks/pollution/night gate...Richmond port expanding, Redwood City

Ferry expansion? Invasive species?

Plastic bags... policy-setting to protect the bay

Hosted by Jane McMillan.
