The City of Taylorville is receiving a grant of $1.5 Million to help redevelopment projects within the city. The improvements are part of a Fast Track program from the Illinois Department of Economic Opportunity. Senator Andy Manar says that this started during last spring's budget negotiations.

“The past few months have had devastating effects on communities that were already underserved. Through the FastTrack program, the State is not only bringing jobs to those communities, but we're also prioritizing long overdue construction projects. I commend Governor (JB) Pritzker for his continued commitment to ensuring the vitality of the downstate economy during this difficult time.”

The project will be used to repair East Main Cross Street, Improve curbs, gutters, and ADA ramps, and rehabilitate utilities along East Main Cross Street from Walnut Street.

The FastTrack Program is putting over $39.5 million into new grants for 27 projects across the state. Taylorville Mayor Bruce Barry says that he didn't think Taylorville wouldn't get it and thanked the Governor.

With July 1st, comes new rules and new laws to follow in Illinois. The Illinois Department of Transportation announced two new laws that will take effect today (July 1st) which will establish tough penalties for drivers who injure others while texting and driving.

The first law establishes a 12 month license suspension and minimum fine of $1,000 for a motorist who while texting or driving causes great bodily harm, permanent disability, or disfigurement to another person.

The second law, referred to as Mason's Law amends the Illinois Vehicle Code by establishing a 12 month license suspension for any motorist who, while violating the right-of-way at crosswalks and in school zones, causes serious injury to another person.

Other new laws that came out on July 1st, include the raising of the minimum wage. The minimum wage which got an increase on January 1st to $9.25 will also see a jump to $10 an hour starting Wednesday. The raise is part of a mandated number of raises to eventually get the minimum wage to $15 an hour in 2025.

State Senator Andy Manar has been keeping busy and today pushed for ethics reform. Senator Manar called on the Joint Commission on Ethics and Lobbying Reform to consider some new guidelines for Illinois politics in the future.

Senator Manar is encouraging the Joint Commission to consider the following changes: Term limits on legislative leadership, enacting a policy to remove a legislator as a leader during a criminal investigation or if they are charged/indicted. The Senator is also asking for a one year prohibition on legislators leaving their offices and working as lobbyists, and expanding disclosure of legislators' outside income. The Senator also wants the Inspector General to self-initiate investigations and making it an independent agency for the purposes of budgets and hiring.

Senator Manar says he believes this should be a bipartisan effort. "This is a list of very simple things that I believe could receive broad support from both Democrats and Republicans and at the same time would have a profound impact on restoring trust in state government."

The Illinois Commerce Commission or ICC announced that several of the state's utility companies will be extending the moratorium on disconnections for residential customers due to COVID-19. Nicor Gas, Northshore/Peoples Gas, Illinois American Water, Aqua Illinois, and Utility Services of Illinois have extended disconnections until September 30th. Ameren and ComEd have extended through September 10th.

Consumer Gas and Liberty Utilities also have a moratorium as well and they will not disconnect until well past September. 13 different utility companies negotiated to come up with a plan to help including holding off disconnection and waiving late payment fees and reconnection fees.

Chairman Carrie K. Zalewski says that she is encouraging residents who are struggling to set up a deferred payment plan so they don't lose service when the moratorium is lifted.

ICC Executive Director Christy George says that "The ICC is continuing to monitor the situation and is working to help residents impacted by COVID-19 from losing access to life-saving utility services."

September is National Preparedness Month. This is the time of year that the Illinois Emergency Management Agency along with local emergency managers are encouraging Illinoisans to take the time and prepare for potential emergencies at home.

Along with considering COVID-19 guidelines, some other things you should do is make a plan for when a disaster strikes. Know where you are supposed to go and know what your family would do in case of a tornado, flood, or earthquake.

You should also build a weather kit. In your weather kit, you should have basic survival items such as food, water, weather radio, batteries, medication, and supplies for each member of your family. Emergency kits should be kept in your home, work, and in your car.

Prepare for disasters by practicing tornado drills, fire drills, and walking your family through procedures, that may take place. It is recommended that you keep a two-week supply of groceries on hand in case you have to quarantine due to COVID-19.

Teach your kids how to prepare for disaster. Children make up roughly a quarter of the US population, and it is important that you take the time to get kids involved. One way that you can do that is by helping them or having them build their own emergency kit. Things to include is your child's favorite toys, board games, books, or music to comfort them in case of a disaster.
