2. Our World with Black Enterprise	02/06/11	11:00AM/30 minutes	Public Affairs	**
------------------------------------	----------	--------------------	----------------	----

 We went to the White House to interview Senior White House Advisor Valerie Jarrett, who shared President Obama's strategy to move the nation forward over the next two years. Our "On the Record" discussion examined the President's agenda to help the black community. Panelists included Reverend Al Sharpton, founder of the National Action Network and a former presidential candidate; Angela McGlowan, Fox News Political Analyst; and Jeff Johnson, MSNBC political commentator.

3. Andrew Young Presents: "Leaving Selma"	02/13/11	10:00AM/1 hour	Public Affairs	***

 This program, coinciding with the Martin Luther King Holiday and Black History Month, told the story of the dramatic march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama, known as "Bloody Sunday", and cut short by violence when law enforcement officers openly and brutally attacked peaceful demonstrators as they attempted to cross the Edmund Pettus Bridge. This event was memorable because it took place in front of news cameras, and the images so shocked the public that America no longer could turn its head to racial discrimination happening in the South. Andrew Young was there, and he tells the personal story behind the march. He focused on the lessons learned, on the present and not the past, and on the fact that a single confrontation on an Alabama bridge changed America for the better.

* Our "On the Record" Discussion concerned the state of education with panelists David Banks, president of the Eagle Academy Foundation; Keli Goff, contributor of TheLoop21.com; and R. L'Heureux Lewis, assistant professor of Sociology and Black Studies at City College of New York. Our "Slice of Life" profiled Diane Latiker, founder and president of Kids Off the Block, an after-school program in Chicago.
