January of 2023...

- Jan. 3 -- Our Terry Frank looks back on the past year... and, highlights several stories... including the two main ones: Public Safety and the Homeless Crisis. In the area of public safety... City Council President Tony Dolce hosted a forum in September that drew a large crowd of people. However... one of the main topics ended up being the number of homeless, and what to do with them. Mayor Eddie Sundquist says the number of homeless people had skyrocketed in recent months for several reasons. One was the cost of housing and other items, and the other was the ending of the state's Eviction Moratorium put in place during the COVID Pandemic. As for public safety... we discuss the increase in gun violence in the city, and Chief Tim Jackson noted it's been everywhere - "not just one or two places." We also spotlight the major fire at the former Crawford Furniture factory building just outside the city. The drug crisis is also highlighted with a Fla. woman being arrested late last year after being found with nearly 10 pounds of Fentanyl pills in her possession. We also look at economic development... and, the landing of lithium-ion battery producer Electrovaya in Jamestown's Mason Industrial Park... and, a new owner purchasing Wells Enterprises in Dunkirk.

- Jan. 10 - This week, News Director Terry Frank speaks with Chautauqua County Executive P.J. Wendel about a number of issues, including New York Gov. Kathy Hochul's 2023-24 budget plan. Wendel says the county has a couple of items they would like to have in the $227-billion dollar proposal. He says one is the need for a constant funding source to help maintain and protect Chautauqua Lake and even the county's other lakes. He says the other is getting some of the $1-billion dollars Hochul is proposing to help boost mental health needs... and, the north county especially needs that. He says another concern is a possible move by the state to take in the federal Medicaid Reimbursements the county receives from the federal government. Wendel says that would be a $4.3-billion dollar hit to the county's budget. We also discuss the Climate Action Council's Scoping Plan, that was recently approved by the panel... and, concerns with moves away from natural gas to heat gas stoves... as well as the Chautauqua Lake Protection and Rehabilitation Agency panel's decision against a taxing district to help fund maintenance of the lake.

- Jan. 16 - Our Terry Frank speaks with Jamestown Mayor Eddie Sundquist this week on a number of topics, including last week's visit by U.S. Senate Majority Leader Charles Schumer to the site of the Crawford Furniture Factory fire last November. Schumer announced he'll be pushing the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to expedite the environmental review, and clean-up of the former factory site. Mayor Sundquist says most of the solvents, varnishes and other materials were cleaned out of the structure over the previous year or so, but, there's still onsite contamination. Schumer says there's also the reinstated Superfund Cleanup Tax that would be available to allow the EPA to take the factory owners to court and sue for damages. We also discuss the fact the city's Senior Housing Improvement Program funded by American Rescue Plan Act funding has spent it's $1.5-million dollars, but, some 63 projects still need money, and there's some confusion over whether the city requested the $1.5-million or $1.8-million for the program. We also talk about Sundquist's decision, and recent announcement that he's running for a second-term in office.

- Jan. 23 - This week, our Terry Frank talks with Jamestown City Council President Tony Dolce on a number of topics, including what council is looking forward to in 2023. Dolce says allocating the rest of what remains of the city's $28-million in American Rescue Plan Act funding remains front and center. He adds that, depending on what lawmakers learn about discrepancies in the money put into the Senior Housing Improvement Program, they will likely put in the money needed to cover all, eligible projects. We also discuss the fact that 2023 is an election year. Dolce acknowledges that he's a potential mayoral candidate, but, maintained that he's not reached a final decision on that, as he is still teaching at Jamestown High School. However... he does say that the city's Republican Committee plans on fielding a candidate this Fall against incumbent Mayor Eddie Sundquist, who recently announced he's running for re-election. Dolce adds that all seven current GOP council members appear to be running for re-election. If he doesn't run for mayor, Dolce will likely run again to represent the second-ward.

- Jan. 31 - Our Terry Frank talks with Chautauqua County Legislature Chairman Pierre Chagnon this week about a number of topics... but, mainly about the recent decision by the Chautauqua Lake Protection and Rehabilitation Agency panel to discontinue looking at creating a lake taxing district to support maintenance of the lake. We talk about a number of questions that have arose following that 7-4 vote to stop the process, even before receiving a report from the consulting firm, Barton and LoGuidice. That firm will continue on with completing it's report and will provide it to the county once it's completed. Chagnon says, even if a lake district was to be approved, there were a number of questions about what property owners would be taxing, and how much they would pay. He says the amount of funding for the projects isn't even known at this point. Otherwise, we talk about the past year and what to look forward to in 2023. Chagnon says the legislature's main task remains keeping up with the budget, especially with inflation now an issue. As for accomplishments, he feels getting the first phase of the West Chautauqua Lake Sewer project completed has been a major one.

Feb. 2023...

- Feb. 6 -- Our Terry Frank talks with Chautauqua County P.J. Wendel about a number of topics on this week's program... including what he was looking forward to in New York Gov. Kathy Hochul's 2023-24 budget proposal. One of the key items, he says, is the need to avoid taking the individual counties federal Medicaid reimbursement funding. For Chautauqua County... Wendel says that would create a $4.3-million hole in the county's 2023 budget. We also discuss the county legislature's recent approval of a local law establishing the salary for a new media communications coordinator in his office. The legislature voted 13-3 in favor, but, Democrats complained it would create an eighth person in the executive's office. Wendel says that's not the case... adding that there has been a shifting of positions with one person going to the Human Resources Dept., and the Deputy County Exec. for Economic Development being moved into the county's Planning and Economic Development Dept. He also reflects on the death of a former Southwestern Central School Classmate, Jackson Rohm, who recently died where he lived in Florida, and SWCS Graduate Nick Sirianni coaching the Philadelphia Eagles in the upcoming Super Bowl.

- Feb. 13 - This week... News Director Terry Frank speaks with Jamestown Mayor Eddie Sundquist about a number of topics and issues, led by his reaction to NYS Gov. Kathy Hochul's 2023-24 budget proposal. Sundquist says the $227-billion dollar proposal is very good for local public school district, but, not so much for local municipalites. He says that was driven home during the New York State Conference of Mayor's (NYCOM's) annual legislative gathering in Albany. Sundquist says small cities have seen no increase in their Aid and Incentives to Municipalities (AIM), nor for maintenance local governments are required to perform on state roadways in their municipalities. We also discuss the city's most recent numbers in American Rescue Plan Act funding outlays. City Council learned this past week that, so far, $25.3-million dollars has been either doled out, or committed to various projects and other items. There's about $2.7-million dollars in ARPA funds left that has to be spent by the end of the year. We also discuss progress on the city's new Public Works Maintenance Building on Washington Street, and where things stand on the state's project on Washington Street itself.

- Feb. 20 - Our Terry Frank speaks by phone this week with local NYS Senator George Borrello of Sunset Bay. The Republican says there are some good points to Gov. Kathy Hochul's 2023-24 state budget proposal. Borrello says the biggest plus is the $1-billion the Buffalo-area Democrat is proposing to boost inpatient Mental Health beds, and other supports in the state. He says that's especially critical in the north county area. We also discuss the Climate Action Plan final scoping document, which he opposes because it would phase-out natural gas use over the next several years. We also delve into farming, since Borrello is the ranking minority member of that Senate committee. He says he's got three goals in the 2023 session... the first being curbing the impact of the lower overtime threshold for farm laborers. He's pushing for a tax credit that would have "no strings attached" to that credit. Borrello is also pushing to strengthen the Nourish-New York program... which was started by himself and Democratic Assemblywoman Catalina Cruz during the early days of the COVID-19 pandemic to help residents in "food deserts." He's pushing to have the annual program's funding increased from $50-million to $75-million. Borrello says the third area is a push to clarify language in the Climate Council's final scoping document to allow farmers to be exempt from the phase-out of natural gas being allowed to power machinery and appliances.

- Feb. 27 - This week, we lighten things up a little as our Terry Frank interviewed several of the Jamestown-area inductees into the Chautauqua Sports Hall of Fame during the annual Induction Dinner at the Lakewood Rod and Gun Club. We include large portions of the interviews with former Jamestown High School football and track stand-out Sheldon Battle, former JHS football stand-out, and current Co-Director of College Scouting for the Kansas City Chiefs, David Hinson... and, former Southwestern Head Football Coach Jay Sirianni, who led the Trojans to state titles in 2008 and 2009. We also talk with Hinson and Sirianni about the recent Super Bowl, in which Kansas City edged out the Philadelphia Eagles. Philadelphia is coached by Jay Sirianni's younger brother, Nick. While they were there watching the game and not directly involved, it was great to be a part of it. Terry also interviews former JHS girl's stand-out Kirsten Green, who later worked under legendary Basketball Coach Mike Krzyzewski at Duke Univ. and is now Assistant Athletic Director at Harvard Univ... Post-Journal Sports Editor Scott Kindberg... and, long-time and still current Frewsburg High School Boy's Swimming Coach, Bruce Johnson.

March 2023...

- Mar. 6 - This week, our Terry Frank hosts Chautauqua County Executive P.J. Wendel, who had just returned to the county following the three-day New York State Association of Counties -- or NYSAC -- annual legislative conference. Wendel, who was elected to the NYSAC Board during the conference, says they were all very united on a number of measures they oppose in Gov. Kathy Hochul's budget proposal. He says the main one is the fact the state would be taking the federal Medicaid eFMAP pass through monies... which totaled $4.3-million to the county this past year. He says there were also other measures they opposed... including changing local county executive races to Presidential election years. We also discuss the six-point plan for Chautauqua Lake offered to the county legislature recently for lake maintenance. He says there needs to be more of a "team effort" to get and keep the lake well maintained, and will discuss that, and economic development in detail during his annual State of the County Address at the end of March. We also discuss firefighter safety and risk in the wake of the recent death of a Buffalo firefighter in a major, downtown fire.

- Mar. 13 - Our Terry Frank discusses a number of matters with Jamestown Mayor Eddie Sundquist this week, including controversy over possible conflict of interest accusations against the Jamestown Local Development Corporation. The controversy stems over three American Rescue Plan Act grants made by the JLDC to entities with ties on JLDC board members. Sundquist says they are working with the state, and have contacted federal officials about the matter. A couple of residents have charged that the grants to City Councilman Jeff Russells wife's business, Jamestown Skate Products, and St. Luke's Church should not have taken place. We also talk about possible new projects that could receive portions of the remaining $2-million in ARPA funding. We also get an update on the city's homeless issue, and that the two new "code blue" shelters are having to remain open because of late Winter weather. Sundquist also gets a plug in for the city's "Turning the River Green" event along with Chadakoin River in Brooklyn Square next Saturday on St. Patrick's Day.

- Mar. 20 - Our Terry Frank interviews Chautauqua County Chamber of Commerce President, and Chief Executive Officer Dan Heitzenrater this week about a number of issues, including concerns over the state budget now being negotiated between the legislature and Gov. Kathy Hochul. Heitzenrater says there are three concerns they have, including: unemployment insurance, and, possible minimum wage increases. We also discuss labor and supply chain concerns. Heitzenrater says one business expert believes we'll be seeing labor shortages for another 7 years. As for the recent default of a couple of U.S. Banks, he says a chamber member who operates a local credit union says there should be no significant issues for local businesses and residents. We also discuss the chamber's upcoming State Legislative Breakfast at Chautauqua Suites in Mayville on Friday, Apr. 28. It will feature local New York State Assemblyman Andy Goodell, and State Senator George Borrello.

- Mar. 28 - Jamestown Board of Public Utilities General Manager Dave Leathers is in the spotlight this week to discuss a number of topics, including the energy future in Jamestown and the rest of New York State. He tells our Terry Frank that it's all based around the state's new Energy Standards, which were put in place in August of 2016, and, the NYS Climate Action Plan, which was approved in 2019. Leathers says the BPU is actually well positioned to weather the changes, but, adds the cost for those approved changes are already adding about 20% more costs to BPU electric customers. He says the board's New York State Power Authority allocation of about 90% of the city's power will continue to come from the Niagara Hydropower Project through at least 2040. He adds the future of the BPU's gas turbine should be good through 2035. We also discuss the State Research and Development Agency's recent awarding of a $95,000 grant to the BPU, and the city School District to develop a plan for changing the district's bus fleet to all-electric in the next few years. In addition... we discuss current and future projects to replace old water mains around the city.

There you go,

Terry
