The listing is by no means exhaustive. The order in which the issues appear does not reflect any priority or significance.

| Description of Issue | Program/Segment | Date | Time | Duration | Narration of Type & Description of Program/Segment |
|----------------------|--------------------------------------|--------|---------|----------|---|
| DREAMERS | | | | | |
| | Noticias 23 | 27-Apr | 5pm | 1:59 | A republican congressman wants to re-introduce a bill to enlist, a project that will allow DREAMers to serve in the military. Legislator Jeff Denham believes that this could be a solution to the absence of an internal immigration reform. Fernando Pizarro with the story from Washington D.C. |
| | Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 30-Apr | 10pm | 2:00 | THROUGH A BIPARTISAN APPROACH AND AFTER SEVERAL REJECTIONS, TWO AMENDMENTS WERE APPROVED IN THE ARMED FORCES COMMITTEE. THE TWO AMENDMENTS WILL ALLOW FOR DREAMERS TO SERVE IN THE UNITED STATES MILITARY. REPUBLICAN CONGRESSMAN MIKE COFFMAN STATED THIS WAS NECESSARY FOR THE FUTURE OF THE NATION. |
| | Noticias 23 | 13-May | 5pm | 0:28 | Democrat and republicans in congress have come to front with a new battles over the proposal that allows DREAMers to serve in the military. Congressman Ruben Gallego of Arizona is spearheading this new proposal and will allow the Pentagon to decide if young undocumented individuals who have DACA or DAPA can be admitted into the military. This proposal which has Republican support such as Congressman Mike Coffman of Colorado, faces a crucial vote in congress this week. |
| | Noticias 23 | 16-May | 5pm | 2:15 | HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES VOTED TO ELIMINATE AN AMENDMENT THAT WOULD HAVE OPENED THE DOOR FOR THE PENTAGON TO CONSIDER ADMITTING DREAMERS WITH DACA INTO THE ARMED FORCES. ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO ALLOW THEM TO SERVE HAS BEEN DEFEATED IN CONGRESS. |
| | Noticias 23 | 15-Jun | 5pm | 2:14 | The press conference which took place at the Consulate General of Mexico was about celebrating the 3rd year anniversary of the executive action also known as Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals. The honorable Clay Jenkins, and several other organizations were in attendance. During the press conference it was stated that out of the estimated 800,000 young Mexican adults eligible for the program only 560,000 of them have presented an initial application. There is the constant worry that many young immigrants are not taking advantage of this program. |
| | Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 10-Jun | 10pm | 2:26 | President Obama announced Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals on June 12 , 2012 and began to implement that same year. From the White House, Maria Rosa Lucchini tells us what have been the benefits and challenges of this immigration relief. According to the organization United We Dream, 64 percent of young people benefiting from the immigration relief say they feel less scared of sharing their legal status and more than half are more able to help their families economically. |
| | Despierta America | 6-May | 6am | :30 | A Superior Court judge on Tuesday ruled that certain undocumented students are eligible for in-state tuition, despite an Arizona law seeking to force them to pay out-of-state rates. Arizona voters in 2006 decreed that only those with "lawful immigration status" can pay in-state tuition at Arizona's colleges, effectively eliminating the ability for most dreamers to get a college education. The Maricopa Community College District two years ago began charging in-state tuition to undocumented students who qualify for Obama's Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Program, contending that DACA approval affords them "lawful presence." |
| | Noticiero Univision | 15-May | 5:30pm | 2:02 | Another attempt to allow them to serve has been defeated in Congress. The house Republicans voted to block a measure that would have allowed the Pentagon to consider allowing young immigrants who are in the country illegally -- but were given temporary legal status under a program started by President Obama -- to enlist in the military. The measure had already won bipartisan support in the House Armed Services Committee when several Republicans joined Democrats to add it to a big defense spending package. But despite several years of outreach, the effort has run into limitations. Congress, in particular, has stumbled as Republicans repeatedly voted against immigrant-friendly measures that many Latino and minority voters support. The measure had already won bipartisan support in the House Armed Services Committee when several Republicans joined Democrats to add it to a big defense spending package. Passage would have meant a sizable shift in Republican thinking on immigration-related matters. |
| | Noticiero Univision Edicion Nocturna | 14-May | 10:30pm | 2:00 | Denver Public Schools is working with the Teach for America program to use illegal aliens with Deferred Action for Childhood Arrival status as teachers. Teach for America is a program that brings people of diverse backgrounds into the classroom to enhance learning. Members of the Walton family, the family that founded Wal-Mart, made a large private donation to help pay for illegal aliens with DACA status to enroll in the Teach for America program. DACA instructors are not licensed teachers but they are issued an alternative license6 from the State of Colorado to teach. These "teachers" are enrolled in classes to attain their traditional teaching license after one year. Under Deferred Action for Childhood Arrival, illegal aliens are offered two years of amnesty, are given a social security number, and are allowed to apply for a work permit. The two-year DACA stay of deportation may be renewed on a case-by-case basis, but it does not confer lawful immigration status, provide a path to citizenship, or alter an illegal alien's existing immigration status. |
| | Noticiero Univision | 4-Jun | 5:30pm | 2:07 | An appeals court in New York on Wednesday announced its decision granting a law license to an immigrant who was brought to the United States illegally when he was a child. Cesar Vargas' mother brought him to the United States from Mexico when he was 5. He went to college and law school in New York City and passed the bar. A court committee recommended against his licensing but said the court should decide. In its decision, the court said it found "no legal impediment or rational basis for withholding the privilege of practicing law in the state of New York from undocumented immigrants who have been granted DACA relief." |

| IMMIGRATION | | | | | |
|------------------------------|--------|--------|-----------|---|--|
| Noticias 23 | 17-Apr | 5pm | :49 | The fifth circuit court in New Orleans finished the day without a decision on whether they should or shouldn't eliminate the temporary suspension of President Obama's executive action which a federal judge in Brownsville, TX brought into place. A panel of three judges listened for two hours the arguments of the Department of Justice and the 26 states that sued against the executive action. Activists also voiced their concerns to judges. | |

| Noticias 23 | 7-Jun | 5pm | :16 | Half a million of immigrants will continue in limbo due to the audiences in the courts continue to prolong their cases. This could change due to the reconstruction of an agency. Julio Cesar Ortiz tells us what this means. The restructuring of a major agency within the immigration system could reduce the wait for many cases that have been stalled in federal courts. | |
| Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 25-Jun | 10pm | :48 | Immigration Expert, Gloria Ramirez informs on what is going to happen to the immigrant parents who have citizen children. The expansion of the executive action was going to give those who qualify a work permit. A decision has not been made on when applications will be accepted. It is recommended for parents to prepare by obtaining documents such as children's birth certificates and proof of their presence in the united states starting from 2010. | |
| Despierta America | 8-Apr | 6am | :32 | A federal judge in Texas has kept in place a temporary hold on President Barack Obama's executive action that sought to shield millions of immigrants from deportation, rejecting a U.S. Department of Justice request that he allow the action to go ahead. U.S. District Judge Andrew Hanen in Brownsville refused late Tuesday night to lift the preliminary injunction he granted on Feb. 16 at the request of 26 states that oppose Obama's action. Hanen's latest ruling upholds the status quo -- that the Obama administration is temporarily barred from implementing the policies that would allow as many as 5 million people in the U.S. illegally to remain. The Justice Department had already appealed to a higher court, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, to lift Hanen's injunction. The appeals court was scheduled to hear arguments on whether the injunction should be lifted on April 17. In his order Tuesday denying the government's request, Hanen said the government hasn't "shown any credible reason for why this Directive necessitates immediate implementation. | |
| Despierta America | 27-May | 6am | :05 | President Barack Obama's plan to shield as many as 5 million immigrants living in the U.S. from deportation remained on hold Tuesday after a federal appeals court panel refused to allow it to take effect immediately. Obama announced an executive action in November seeking to expand a program that protects young immigrants from deportation if they were brought to the U.S. illegally as children. The order also would extend deportation protections to some parents of U.S. citizens and permanent residents. Although Obama argued lack of action by Congress forced him to make sweeping changes on his own, Republicans blasted the plan as an executive overreach. Twenty-six states have sued to stop it, and a federal judge based in Texas issued a preliminary injunction against it in February. The administration is appealing that injunction and had asked a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to let the program proceed pending an argument on the merits, tentatively set for July. But, in refusing to stay the Texas judge's injunction, 5th Circuit judges Jerry Smith and Jennifer Walker Elrod said that the federal government lawyers are unlikely to succeed on the merits of the appeal. Judge Stephen Higginson disagreed in a lengthy dissent. Immigrant advocates decried the continued roadblock. And, White House spokeswoman Brandi Hoffine said the two-judge majority in Tuesday's ruling "chose to misinterpret the facts and the law." | |
| Noticiero Univision | 8-Jun | 5:30pm | :00 | A series of legal setbacks have halted the government's intensive preparations to move forward with President Obama's executive actions shielding millions of illegal immigrants from deportation, even as community organizations continue a rapid push to get ready for the programs, according to U.S. officials and immigrant advocacy groups. Since a federal judge first blocked the new programs in February, the Department of Homeland Security has suspended plans to hire up to 3,100 new employees, most of whom would be housed in an 11-story building the government has leased for $7.8 million a year in Arlington, Va. That building, in the Crystal City area, is now sitting mostly unused, DHS employees say. Yet inside and outside the Beltway, community groups are mobilizing, educating immigrants and training volunteers to help them apply for relief, even though it remains unclear whether the program will ever begin. | |

This bill was approved in the Texas House of Representatives and is now headed to the Senate. Republican Representative Drew Springer considers that this measure will protect licensed gun carriers from being arrested at a security check. |
| Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 30-May | 10pm | :25 | | The Texas Senate approved the bill that would allow guns on university campuses. An amendment was added to bill which allows University Presidents to designate areas where guns can be carried. Private universities are not subject to law. |
| Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 1-Jun | 10pm | 3:25 | | For the first time in Texas, the legal use of a medical marijuana component was approved. Texas governor Greg Abbott signed SP-339 into law, which gives authorization to patients who suffer from untreatable epilepsy to use marijuana oils to combat their attacks. Thousand others will have to wait for a broader medical use of marijuana. The law will be regulated by the Department of Public Safety and by September of 2017 there will be at least 3 certified distributors of the oils in Texas. |
| Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 13-Jun | 10pm | :35 | | Governor of Texas Greg Abbott, approved two gun laws. One law would allow those who have a concealed handgun permit to be able to publicly carry their firearm. The other, will permit licensed concealed handgun carries to do the same on college campuses. This is the liberty for which Washington, Jefferson and Regan fought for and I am proud to expand it in Texas, Governor Greg Abbott said. Both these laws will go into effect in 2016. |
| Noticiero Univision Edicion Nocturna | 6-Jun | 10:30pm | 2:01 | | Students and faculty members at public and private universities in Texas could be allowed to carry concealed handguns into classrooms, dormitories and other buildings under a bill passed over the weekend by the Republican-dominated Legislature. The measure is being hailed as a victory by gun rights advocates and criticized by many students and professors as irresponsible and unnecessary. The so-called campus-carry bill is expected to be signed into law by the Republican governor, Greg Abbott. It would take effect in August 2016 at universities and August 2017 at community colleges. Supporters say it will make college campuses safer by not preventing licensed gun owners from defending themselves and possibly saving lives should a mass shooting occur, such as the one that unfolded at Virginia Tech University in 2007. |

| Noticiero Univision Edicion Nocturna | 3-Apr | 10:30pm | 1:48 | The UC Berkeley study found that four-fifths of the nation's Mexican American toddlers lagged three to five months behind whites in pre literacy skills, oral language and familiarity with print materials. Although earlier studies have shown that Latino children are raised with emotional warmth and develop social skills on par with others when they enter kindergarten, the new research found they are not receiving sufficient language and literacy skills at home, said Bruce Fuller, a UC Berkeley professor of education and public policy and co-author of the study. Mothers of toddlers who fell behind were more likely to be foreign-born, low-income and less educated. They were also less likely to read to their children daily or give them as much praise and encouragement as those whose children kept pace with white peers. The study found, for instance, that only 18% of Mexican American mothers who spoke Spanish at home read to their children daily, compared with 59% of white mothers. Among Mexican American mothers who spoke English at home, 28% read daily. In addition, other research has found that parents with more education limit television, ask their children more questions, give them more opportunities to articulate their feelings and have them show off their skills -- counting to 10 for grandma, for instance. Latino mothers also have been found to issue more commands -- set the table, turn off the TV -- which may stem from the need to maintain order in larger families, Fuller said. And Latino mothers tend to believe that children should wait for kindergarten to learn to read, compared with white mothers who see age 2 as the appropriate age for such learning, according to a UCLA study. Fuller said that difference may stem from the traditional Mexican respect for teachers. |
| Despierta America | 19-May | 6am | :30 | Do you want your children to do better in exams? Then take away their smartphones! At least, that's what one study seems to suggest. The details... Straight ahead. New study finds students may actually perform better on tests... if they don't carry cell phone to class. The study by the London school of economics found a link between banning smart phones in schools and increased test scores. Researchers looked at how cell phone policies at 91 schools in England have changed since 2001. They compared the information with results of national exams taken by students at the age of 16. Researchers found that school test scores improved by six-percent following a ban on phone use. For underachieving students the Average test scores went up 14-percent following a ban. |
| Noticiero Univision | 13-Jun | 5:30pm | 2:13 | Your baby, even when in the womb, has preferences. A new study published in PLOS One found that fetuses move and respond more when their mothers touch their own stomachs than when they talk to the babies from outside the womb. Specifically, researchers found that when mothers touched their stomachs fetuses showed "more arm, head, and mouth movements than when the women did nothing or when they spoke to the baby." To find this, researchers brought 23 healthy pregnant women into a dark room and had them all practice three different behaviors. One behavior had the mothers rub their abdomen, another had the mothers talk to their babies and the last had mothers keep their arms at their side. The researchers tracked the fetuses' movements with sonography. The first behavior had the most responses from the fetuses. |

| Noticias 23 | 3-Jun | 5pm | 2:25 | More than 6 million people could lose their subsidies that they received through the health care program Obamacare. The Supreme Court will decide if those people have the right to receive said benefits. Almost 6 million and a half people who bought medical insurance with Obamacare, are at risk of losing their subsidies which helps them pay for primary healthcare. |
| Noticias 23 | 7-Jun | 5pm | 2:30 | IMMIGRANTS PAY FOR TAXES HOWEVER MANY OF THEM DO NOT QUALIFY FOR HEALTH INSURANCE, IMMIGRANT RIGHTS ORGANIZATIONS SAY THIS IS NOT FAIR. |

|------------------------------|--------|--------|------|--|
| Noticias 23 Edicion Nocturna | 25-Jun | 10pm | :46 | The Supreme Court backed the subsidies that millions of people have received to purchase medical insurance under the affordable care act. Texas Governor Greg Abbott criticized the decision and said that the Supreme Court abandoned the constitution to rescue a law that has flaws. The organization Texas Organizing Project applauded the efforts. In a statement, TOP stated it is a great victory for Texans considering the state government has been insensible and indifferent to the health needs of their workers. |
| Despierta America | 30-Apr | 6am | :34 | Congressional Republicans are divided over how to respond to an approaching Supreme Court decision on President Barack Obama's health care law; even as growing numbers concede that their long-sought goal of repealing the statute will have to wait. Should the plaintiffs prevail in the GOP-backed lawsuit, the justices could annul one of the law's backbones: federal subsidies helping around 7.7 million people afford health insurance in more than 30 states. Republicans broadly agree that Congress should react by temporarily replacing that aid, aware that abruptly ending it would anger millions of voters before the 2016 presidential and congressional elections. Yet when it comes to choosing an overall response to a court ruling, GOP lawmakers have suggested at least five different proposals -- so far. None has won consensus backing from Republicans. The divisions underscore the challenge Republicans face between satisfying conservative supporters who want the law dismantled and providing help should millions lose their ability to afford coverage. But the sheer existence of the GOP proposals could help in court because it might suggest to the justices that despite Democrats' claims that eliminating the subsidies would spark health insurance chaos, Congress is already working on ways to avoid that. |
| Despierta America | 26-May | 6am | :24 | A Supreme Court ruling due in a few weeks could wipe out health insurance for millions of people covered by President Barack Obama's health care law. But it's Republicans -- not White House officials -- who have been talking about damage control. A likely reason: Twenty-six of the 34 states that would be most affected by the ruling have Republican governors, and 22 of the 24 GOP Senate seats up in 2016 are in those states. Obama's law offers subsidized private insurance to people without access to it on the job. In the court case, opponents of the law argue that its literal wording allows the federal government to subsidize coverage only in states that set up their own health insurance markets. Most states have not done so, because of the intense partisanship over "Obamacare" and in some cases because of technical problems. Instead, they rely on the federal HealthCare.gov website. If the court invalidates the subsidies in those states, an estimated 8 million people could lose coverage. The results would be "ugly," said Sandy Praeger, a former Kansas insurance commissioner. "People who are reasonably healthy would just drop coverage," she said. "Only the unhealthy would keep buying health care. It would really exacerbate the problem of the cost of health insurance." |
| Noticiero Univision | 9-Jun | 5:30pm | 2:06 | President Barack Obama on Tuesday declared his health care law a firmly established "reality" of American life even as the legality of one of its key elements awaits a decision by the Supreme Court. "This is now part of the fabric of how we care for one another," Obama said of the law, one of his most prized domestic policy accomplishments. For the second day in a row, Obama mounted a stout defense of a law that remains unpopular with the public and under legal challenge but that has contributed to 14.75 million adults gaining coverage since its health care exchanges began signing up people in 2013. Obama's remarks, made at the annual Catholic Health Association Conference in Washington, amounted to a political argument for the law just weeks before the high court is expected to render its decision in a case that could wipe out insurance for millions of Americans. |
| Noticiero Univision | 25-Jun | 5:30pm | 2:32 | Another big victory in the Supreme Court for President Barack Obama's health care law. In a six-to-three ruling today, the justices upheld the nationwide tax subsidies that help make insurance affordable for millions of Americans. Nationally, 10.2 million people have signed up for health insurance under the Obama health overhaul. That includes the 8.7 million people who are receiving an average subsidy of $272 a month to help pay their insurance premiums. |

| Despierta America | 15-Apr | 6am | 2:10 | Diabetes that develops early in pregnancy may increase women's chances of having a child with autism, according to a new study. The risk was seen in young children whose mothers were diagnosed with diabetes during the most crucial period of fetal brain development. Reasons for the potential link are uncertain but it's possible that exposure to high levels of blood sugar from the mother disrupt fetal brain growth, especially in brain regions important for communication and social behavior, said study co-author Dr. Edward Curry, a learning and behavior specialist for Kaiser Permanente in Fontana, California. The researchers looked at medical records for more than 322,000 children born at Kaiser Permanente hospitals in Southern California between 1995 and 2010. Those whose mothers developed gestational diabetes by the 26th week of pregnancy were 40 percent more likely to be diagnosed with autism than those whose moms didn't have diabetes. Of about 3,400 autistic children, 130 were exposed to diabetes early in pregnancy. Autism affects about 1 in 68 U.S. children. In the study, youngsters whose mothers had pre-existing diabetes or developed it later in pregnancy faced no extra autism risk. |

Religious and community organizations such as Latinos Por la Salud (Latinos for Health) and the Mission de Vida, Fe y Esperanza (Life, Faith and Hope Mission) have received requests for help from people arriving from the neighboring states of Wisconsin and Minnesota, while others have traveled much farther, coming from Georgia, New York, Washington and Texas. The Illinois legislature last October passed a law that provides funds for kidney transplants for undocumented migrants, the first such legislation in the United States. |
| Noticiero Univision | 19-May | 5:30pm | 1:56 | A new recent US study is the first to estimate the impact of making the morning-after pill available over the counter without prescription on abortions and risky sexual behavior as measured by sexually transmitted infection (STI) rates. Moreover, risky sexual behavior such as engaging in unprotected sex and number of sexual encounters increases as a result of over-the-counter access to EC. Analysis estimated that over the counter access increases STI rates by approximately 12% for women aged 15-44 and 9% for teenagers; these numbers are also consistent with the 12-17% increase in gonorrhea rates found in Washington as a result of expanded access. The FDA approved access to emergency contraception, or Plan B, through US pharmacies without a prescription in 2012 nationally. This followed pilot programmes in several states starting with Washington in 1998. |

| Despierta America | 20-May | 4pm | 1:36 | Under pressure from U.S. safety regulators, Takata Corp. has agreed to declare 33.8 million air bags defective, a move that will double the number of cars and trucks included in what is now the largest auto recall in U.S. history. The chemical that inflates the air bags can explode with too much force, blowing apart a metal inflator and sending shrapnel into the passenger compartment. The faulty inflators are responsible for six deaths and more than 100 injuries worldwide. The agreement adds more than 18 million air bags to existing recalls, covering both the passenger and driver's side. The recalls of passenger-side air bags, previously limited to high-humidity states along the Gulf Coast, are now expanded nationwide by 10.2 million vehicles. A nationwide recall of driver's side air bags was expanded to include an additional 7.9 million vehicles. "We know that owners are worried about their safety and the safety of their families," said Mark Rosekind, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, as he announced the agreement. "This is probably the most complex consumer safety recall in U.S. history." Safety regulators sparred with Takata for the past year over the size of the recalls and the cause of the problem. For the most part, the air bag maker refused to declare the inflators defective and even questioned the agency's authority to order it to conduct a recall. |
| Noticiero Univision | 2-Jun | 5pm | 2:00 | After an exclusive report by ABC News, Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson has demoted the acting head of the Transportation Security Administration and directed the new acting chief to revise airport security procedures, retrain officers and retest screening equipment in airports across the country. The directives come after an inspector general report showed agents posing as armed passengers were able to smuggle prohibited items, such as mock explosives or weapons, through TSA checkpoints in 67 out of 70 attempts. The tests, and findings, were first reported by ABC News. The tests were designed to push the boundaries of the screening system -- set up after 9/11 -- to prevent weapons from getting onto planes. These tests are covert and designed to be as challenging as possible. Johnson reportedly sought a briefing on the findings last week at TSA headquarters. |

| Despierta America | 7-May | 6am | 1:35 | The southern Plains states from Texas to Kansas are bracing for another rough round of high winds, damaging hail and possible tornadoes through Saturday after a wild ride Wednesday that ripped up homes in Oklahoma and Nebraska and brought some of the biggest floods ever to the Oklahoma City area. Around 50 reports of tornadoes were documented in Wednesday's severe weather outbreak, along with numerous hail and wind reports, No storm-related deaths were reported. Several homes were destroyed by apparent tornadoes southwest of Oklahoma City and 12 people were reportedly transported to the hospital from a trailer park inside the city limits. |
| Noticier Univision Edicion Nocturna | 27-May | 10:30pm | 1:50 | At least 32 people -- 13 in northern Mexico, 13 in Texas plus six in Oklahoma -- have died in the severe weather, from tornadoes, to flooding, to raging rivers. Another 13 people are missing, two of them an elderly couple lost after their rescue boat in Houston capsized. The rest are in Hays County, where 400-odd homes got destroyed when the Blanco River swelled many times over in a few hours. Searchers' efforts were hindered by the wreckage, as well as a near constant threat of thunderstorms -- an inevitable part of late spring in south Texas, but a dangerous one if it whips up floodwaters into a frenzy once again. |
| Noticier Univision Edicion Nocturna | 30-May | 10:30pm | 2:02 | At least 28 people have been killed in storms that began pummeling Texas and Oklahoma over Memorial Day weekend. Twenty-four of the deaths have been in Texas alone. Eleven were still missing early Saturday. Rivers and lakes around Houston, San Antonio and Dallas have all swelled. And forecasters are predicting more rain this weekend. The Colorado River in Wharton and the Brazos and San Jacinto rivers near Houston are the main areas of concern as floodwaters move from North and Central Texas downstream toward the Gulf of Mexico. Forecasters said the Colorado River at Wharton could crest on Saturday, causing major flooding in the community 60 miles southwest of Houston. |
| Noticier Univision | 25-May | 5:30pm | 1:17 | Record-setting rains left officials in Texas and Oklahoma scrambling to assess the scope of the damage and destruction Monday as an emergency coordinator told reporters that a dozen people were missing in one county. The 12 people missing in Hays County, Texas, come from families who had gathered for the long weekend. The severe weather has left at least four people dead, including one in Texas and three in Oklahoma, and washed away hundreds of homes. The storms are easing up, but it doesn't mean the threat is gone. The torrents that those storms dumped are still too much for river and creek banks to contain, and runoff was peaking early Monday, threatening continued flooding, the National Weather Service warned. |
| Noticier Univision | 16-Jun | 5:30pm | 1:45 | The eastern half of Texas was preparing for renewed flooding as Tropical Storm "Bill" approached the state's Gulf Coast. The National Hurricane Center predicted the storm would make landfall Tuesday morning somewhere between Baffin Bay, south of Corpus Christi, and High Island, just up the coast from Galveston. Galveston County officials already have directed voluntary evacuation of the low-lying Bolivar Peninsula, where Hurricane Ike wiped out most structures in 2008. School districts from Galveston to the Houston suburbs have canceled Tuesday's classes. According to the National Weather Service, parts of North Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma could get up to 9 inches of rain over the next five days, and Missouri could get more than 7. After last month's historic rains and floods, the forecast was expected to complicate ongoing flood-containment efforts. |
