Reimagining Historic Preservation at the Cooper-Molera Adobe

Maintaining historic buildings is expensive and often relies on the goodwill of donors and volunteers. In many places, that model is failing. So the National Trust for Historic Preservation is trying something new. And it's starting with a historic building in Monterey.

Quotes from:

- Nancy Runyon, Alliance of Monterey Area Preservationists
- Katherine Malone-France, National Trust for Historic Preservation
- Doug Wiele, developer at Foothill Partners

Monterey Pop: A Time to Disconnect to Reconnect

The Monterey International Pop Festival half a century ago was iconic. It launched the careers of some legendary musicians and created a blueprint for future music festivals. The producers of this weekend's 50th anniversary of Monterey Pop never set out to recreate the original, but did find ways to celebrate it. And they also set the festival apart from other music festivals today.

Quotes from:

- Jessica Helms, Monterey Pop 2017 attendee
- Langhorne Slim, musician
- Gregg Perloff, Another Planet Entertainment

Monterey Pop: Remembered, Celebrated But Never Duplicated

The Monterey International Pop Festival happened just one time back in 1967. Musically pretty much everyone played at the three day rock n roll event. This weekend its 50th anniversary will be celebrated with a return of the Monterey Pop.

Quotes from:

- Penny Vierrege, attended original Monterey Pop
- Lou Adler, 1967 Monterey International Pop Festival Co-Producer
- Larry Chavez, Monterey Rock and Roll Experience owner

He Shot Monterey Pop

The 50th anniversary of the Monterey International Pop Festival will be marked with a return of the event later this month. The original Monterey Pop not only became the model for later festivals like Woodstock and Coachella, it also launched the careers of rock legends like Jimi Hendrix and the photographers who were there to capture the moment.

Breathing New Life Into Santa Cruz's Cemetery for Everyone

Santa Cruz is known for its free spirit and eclectic mix of people. Look no farther than the Evergreen Cemetery to see it's a culture that dates back to the 1800s. After decades of sitting in disrepair, there's renewed energy to restore the historic site.

Quotes from:

- Sibley Simon, volunteer organizer at Evergreen Cemetery

Artificial Pancreas Technology Offers Salinas Teacher Hope

A Salinas teacher is one of the first people in the country to receive a so-called artificial pancreas to help manage her type 1 diabetes. The FDA approved the device last year and it will hit the market in a few weeks. The device is easing the burden of diabetes, but at a cost.

Quotes from:

- Rebecca Bishop, patient
- Dana Armstrong, Director of Diabetes Services at Salinas Valley Medical Clinic
- Dana Lewis, patient with homemade “artificial pancreas”

First of a Kind Water Recycling Plant Being Built in Marina

Californians are used to the idea of recycling cans, bottles and paper. But the idea of recycling water is a little hard for some to swallow. In fact, the process is sometimes dubbed “toilet to tap.” That’s a phrase the people at Pure Water Monterey quickly dismiss when talking about the new advanced water purification facility being built in Marina.

Quotes from:

- Dave Stoldt, General Manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District
- Mike McCullough, Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency
- Dr. Jean Pierre Wolff, Chair of the Regional Water Quality Control Board

DREAMers Anxious After Local Arrest

A 20-year old Salinas man has become the local face of the nationwide immigration controversy. He's a DREAMer, brought to the United States as a child by his parents. He was supposed to be protected from deportation by the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program. But because of a flaw in the system at the Monterey County Jail, he spent 42 days in federal custody and could be deported. That has other local dreamers worried.

Quotes from:

- Miguel Hernandez, Juan Martinez's Criminal Lawyer
- Steve Bernal, Monterey County Sheriff
- Adrianna, DREAMer
- Zuleima, DREAMer
