Arts & Culture	10/2/2020	6:45am 8:45am	4:56	MA	Northampton, Massachusetts author Tiffany Jewell's activity-driven book, titled "The Book Is Anti-Racist," is today's selection in our series Books For Young People. It's written for everyone middle-school age and up, and lays out the work kids need to do before a lifetime of bias is instilled in them. Jewell shared a key instance of racism she witnessed growing up.
Arts & Culture	10/9/2020	6:45am 8:45am	5:10	MA	The story of how thousands of rescued Yiddish books became the Yiddish Book Center in Amherst, Massachusetts, has been told a few times---but not as an illustrated children's book, says author Sue Macy. Her book "The Book Rescuer: How A Mensch From Massachusetts Saved Yiddish Literature For Generations To Come" wraps up our Books For Young People series.
Arts & Culture	10/27/2020	6:34am 8:34am	4:54	MA	In Turners Falls, Massachusetts, a small park is undergoing renovation. Spinner Park was established in 1985 in honor of women who worked in the area's long-gone textile mills. The park's statue was removed for restoration---and one local artist saw its empty pedestal as a way to stage a new tribute to women and their tools.
Arts & Culture	11/3/2020	6:45am 8:45am	5:20	CT	The new movie "I've Got Issues"---now streaming---is described as an absurdist comedy about suffering. Connecticut filmmaker Steve Collins teaches film at Wesleyan, and he told NEPM's Jill Kaufman that he wrote this humorous meditation on despair in response to the 2016 election.
Arts & Culture	11/18/2020	7:51am	2:49	MA	A fire destroyed an important dance performance theater at Jacob's Pillow in Becket, Massachusetts, this week. As NEPM's Nancy Cohen reports, dancers, choreographers, and residents say it's a huge loss.

Arts & Culture	11/20/2020	6:45am 8:45am	5:48	MA	Last month, the Native American playwright Larissa Fast Horse won a MacArthur Genius grant. Among her achievements is "The Thanksgiving Play"---which is now on virtual stage at WAM in Lenox, Massachusetts. The video went live last night and is up through the weekend, as NEPM's Jill Kaufman reports.
Arts & Culture	11/30/2020	7:45am	5:22	MA	Merriam-Webster has released its list of the most-looked-up words of 2020. Dictionary editors Peter Sokolowski and Emily Brewster say several words are connected to Covid, though that word itself is too new to qualify for this year's list. They spoke with NEPM's Kari Njiri.
Arts & Culture	12/2/2020	6:45am	6:35	MA	Robert Johnson might be the most famous blues musician of all time, but few details of his personal life have emerged since his untimely death in 1938. In a new book, Johnson's step-sister, who lives in Amherst, Massachusetts, sets the record straight.
Arts & Culture	12/4/2020	8:38am	6:12	MA	A prestigious show from the Smithsonian's National Art Gallery has made a stop at the Springfield Museums. The portrait exhibit "The Outwin" is in town until April, and it gave local curators the idea of installing a parallel exhibit of art created closer to home.
Arts & Culture	12/29/2020	5:51am 7:51am	5:38	MA	Eric Jay Dolin wanted to be the next Jacques Cousteau. Today, the historian and author lives near the sea in Marblehead, Massachusetts, and says he still has that strong connection to the ocean. His latest book is "A Furious Sky: The 500-Year History Of America's Hurricanes." He spoke about the 'Great Colonial Hurricane' of 1635 that affected New England.
Community Voices	10/29/2020	5:45am 7:45am	4:17	NH	Transgender, non-binary, and gender nonconforming voters in New Hampshire face difficulties ahead of this year's election. Many encounter misgendering at the polls, and they say this can make voting very stressful.

TOPIC	AIRDATE	NEWSCAST	LENGTH	STATE	SUMMARY
Community Voices	11/4/2020	6:45am 8:45am	4:43	MA	Well over 3 million voters cast ballots in Massachusetts. NEPM had reporters at the polls in several Western Massachusetts communities. In addition to asking voters who they supported and why, we also asked them about the biggest challenges facing their communities and the country, as well as their hopes for the future.
Community Voices	11/6/2020	5:51am 7:51am	2:53	MA	On Tuesday, polling place workers across the country took time away from their lives to help voters cast their ballots. That effort included our commentator, Tinky Weisblat, who says she loves working at the polls in her hometown of Hawley, Massachusetts.
Community Voices	11/10/2020	5:51am 7:51am	2:50	MA	President-elect Joe Biden is known for his uncomplicated ways. That's what commentator Martha Ackmann discovered when she dove into the Atlantic with him one cold day.
Community Voices	11/17/2020	6:45am 8:45am	5:19	MA	For decades, democrats have relied on the growing Latino population, but the 2020 election showed that the Latino vote is deeply divided. President Trump gained some support in Massachusetts cities with significant Latino populations, such as Holyoke and Springfield. WBUR and "El Planeta" explored the shifting politics among the state's diverse Latino communities.
Community Voices	11/19/2020	6:45am 8:45am	3:32	MA	A grim milestone in the coronavirus pandemic was recently marked in Massachusetts: the state has lost more than ten thousand residents. Each was an individual who left memories with loved ones and family members. We now hear about 96-year-old Mildred Stopa.
Community Voices	11/25/2020	6:45am 8:45am	5:08	MA	A walking bridge in western Massachusetts was badly damaged in an October storm, but the town doesn't own the land under it. So residents have banded together to take on the project for practical and historical reasons.

Community Voices	11/26/2020	6:45am 8:45am	2:09	MA	Mario Seide works at Boston's Logan Airport, where it's been a busy week for travel despite a downturn during the pandemic. Airport staff like Seide are in a tight spot---although he's glad not to have been laid off, it still feels risky to be working during the pandemic.
Community Voices	11/26/2020	6:45am 8:45am	2:44	CT	An iconic tree was recently cut down in commentator Johannes Evelein's neighborhood in West Hartford, Connecticut. Evelein says the town has lost a dear old friend.
Community Voices	12/3/2020	6:34am	7:39	MA	Since the pandemic began, more than 1.6-million Massachusetts residents have applied for unemployment benefits. Some were laid off, others furloughed, and there were some who made the tough choice to leave their jobs.
Community Voices	12/8/2020	6:45am	4:17	CT	Early in the pandemic, Xiomy De La Cruz was working at a fast-food restaurant and had her hours reduced. She's since opened a food pantry in her home to serve local families, many of whom are undocumented.
Community Voices	12/9/2020	6:45am 8:39am	5:33	MA	A long-time reporter and columnist in Worcester has said goodbye to his readers. Nick Kotsopoulos worked for local newspapers for 43 years, the last 39 of those on the city hall beat, and now at age 65 he says the time was right to accept a voluntary buyout. He looked back on his decades covering Worcester politics.
Community Voices	12/23/2020	6:45am 8:45am	2:59	MA	Dr. Anthony Fauci recently announced he'd been to the North Pole to vaccinate Santa Claus, so it would be perfectly safe for Santa to visit peoples' homes this year. Commentator Elizabeth Vozzola remembers being reassured about Santa about six decades ago.
Community Voices	12/23/2020	6:45am 8:45am	2:06	CT	The pandemic has disrupted holiday traditions...but some New Englanders are taking the opportunity to make new ones.

TOPIC	AIRDATE	NEWSCAST	LENGTH	STATE	SUMMARY
Economic Development	10/6/2020	6:45am 8:45am	3:18	CT	Connecticut's Bradley Airport has seen a sharp drop in passenger volume since the start of the pandemic. But an airport official hopes a new covid-19 testing option will help bring people back.
Economic Development	10/28/2020	7:50am	5:13	MA	Many New England farms depend on migrant labor, but for immigrants who want to start their own farms, finding land can be close to impossible. NEPM's Ben James---a farmer himself---visited Northampton, where a family from Somalia is reclaiming their traditional connection to the soil.
Education	10/14/2020	6:45am 8:45am	4:18	NH	Among schools offering in-person classes this fall, classrooms have changed dramatically. Some of the biggest changes are in music class: gone are the days of belting out songs shoulder to shoulder, sharing music stands, and swapping instruments. Instead, as NHPR's Sarah Gibson reports, some schools are following new protocols to keep covid risk low.
Education	11/10/2020	5:51am 7:51am	5:43	MA	Westfield State University has had years of leadership crises. Now a new interim president has brought a more harmonious climate to the campus.
Education	11/20/2020	5:45am 7:45am	5:12	MA	The Daily Hampshire Gazette has sought release of all agreements that UMass-Amherst signs with private businesses to conduct many millions of dollars in sponsored research. Public documents obtained by the paper so far show that the research benefits the university's bottom line, while also raising questions of ethics and conflicts of interest. Gazette reporter Dusty Christiansen explains that this public-private research is not a new thing.
Energy & Environment	10/1/2020	7:45am	4:09	MA	The EPA's controversial plan to build a PCB disposal site in Berkshire County will be the subject of several proposals before Town Meeting in Lee, Massachusetts.

TOPIC	AIRDATE	NEWSCAST	LENGTH	STATE	SUMMARY
Energy & Environment	10/30/2020	6:34am 8:34am	5:16	NH	Democrats describe themselves as the only party taking the threat of climate change seriously. And President Trump's continued denial of climate change hasn't made it easy for Republicans to change that in this election. But some New England conservatives think their candidates could be doing more to run---and win---on climate change.
Energy & Environment	11/18/2020	7:51am	5:05	MA	Coastal salt marshes are critical wildlife habitats; they also filter pollution and protect nearby homes from flooding. But they are threatened by sea-level rise. New England scientists are trying to save them with a new technique called "runneling."
Energy & Environment	11/27/2020	6:45am 8:45am	4:53	MA	More than half of US teenagers say they're extremely concerned about climate change, according to a survey last year. A group of Massachusetts teenagers wants to fundamentally change the way climate issues are taught in schools.
Energy & Environment	12/18/2020	6:45am 8:45am	6:10	MA	The E-P-A has approved a plan to clean up a stretch of the Housatonic River. For decades, General Electric's plant in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, dumped toxic P-C-B's into the Housatonic. This latest development coincides with the 10th anniversary of the completion of a detailed "sound map" of the Housatonic by composer Annea Lockwood, using microphones and hydrophones to listen underwater.
Justice, Law & Public Safety	10/7/2020	6:45am 8:45am	4:51	MA	Unchecked crime and corruption, weak laws, and ineffective enforcement are at the heart of a new release from Jennifer Taub. The Northampton, Massachusetts author and law professor says white-collar crime is on the rise in her new book, "Big Dirty Money: The Shocking Injustice And Unseen Cost Of White Collar Crime." She discusses what white-collar crime is, and isn't.

Public Health	11/2/2020	7:34am	5:01	MA	Wearing a mask has become routine as we try to avoid the coronavirus. But masks can make it difficult to understand muffled voices---and the challenge is especially acute for people who are deaf or hard of hearing.
Public Health	11/12/2020	6:21am 8:21am	6:41	MA	It used to be you could walk into a store and buy something---but with a highly infectious virus, things are more complicated. In Massachusetts, masks are required where the public gathers---like retail stores---unless mask-wearing poses a medical risk. But some retailers aren't letting anyone in without a mask.
Public Health	11/13/2020	6:45am 8:45am	4:50	MA	A Covid-19 diagnosis means staying separate from others, maybe holing up in one's room---but for folks without homes in Western Massachusetts, that's nothing like what they may have to go through this winter.
Public Health	12/3/2020	7:50am	2:53	MA	State legislators from western Massachusetts are turning up the pressure for more Covid-19 testing, but as NEPM's Karen Brown reports, they aren't in full agreement over specifics.
