Economy: The U.S. economy remains on course for steady growth, something that should help Arizona in the year ahead, The slowing Chinese economy has shaken financial markets here but should not significantly affect what is a relatively healthy labor market, At the same time, Arizona's slower-than-usual recovery from the Great Recovery figures to get incrementally better in 2016. While conditions are significantly better, they remain well behind Arizona's recent past. Spurred by slow but steady employment and housing growth, local and national economists remain cautiously positive about the economic forecast for Arizona.

Arizona Coyotes expected to announce details of a new arena. The Arizona Coyotes are holding a news conference and are expected to announce a deal for a new arena. It has been well known for months that the Coyotes did not plan on staying at Gila River Arena after their 2018-2019 season when their contract with the City of Glendale expires. In July, the Coyotes announced they secured a location for a new arena, though that location has not been publicly revealed. In October, CEO Anthony LeBlanc elaborated on the issue in an interview with ABC15. "I know there's (people on) social media that joke about me, saying I sound like a contractor: 'It'll be ready in two weeks,'" LeBlanc said. "I'm not going to sit here and tell you a time, but I can tell people we will have something out on the market very soon."

A brand new 123,000 square foot Fry's Marketplace on Lake Pleasant just north of Happy Valley is slated to open first quarter of 2017. Grand Canyon hits 6 million visitors, setting annual record. FLAGSTAFF, AZ - Grand Canyon National Park has surpassed its visitation record for the second year in a row. The Arizona Daily Sun reports that the park announced Monday that it had received its 6 millionth visitor, a 9 percent increase over the 5,520,736 visitors from 2015. The park believes its traffic is up this year because the National Park Service is celebrating its centennial and has increased marketing for the event. Last year was also record-breaking for the park: 2015 marked the first time more than 5 million people visited the park in a year. The Grand Canyon hit the 4-million-visitor mark in 1992. The 6 millionth visitors were the Johnson family from Las Vegas, who were at the Grand Canyon for the first time.

Employment/Jobs: In metro Phoenix, unemployment stands at 5.7 percent. By contrast, after the two recessions that preceded the Great Recession, unemployment was less than 4 percent. During this recovery, metro Phoenix has gained more than 200,000 jobs. But that's 100,000 fewer than the previous recoveries had at the same point. This is partly due to tepid population growth compared with years past. The Arizona economy is forecasted to grow in the coming year. The state continues to improve by attracting technology and finance jobs, offering a measure of higher incomes and greater diversity to the state's economy.

How your employment history can affect your mortgage rate. Buying property is one of the largest purchases and biggest financial commitment that most Americans will make. With real estate values rising beyond inflation rates, this has become truer since the late 1990s. For borrowers, it's important to take control of homeownership, including the costs involved. One of the most important factors lenders look at is a borrower's financial history. Perks are available for those who have worked in the same place for many years, or who have been growing their annual income at a consistent rate. In such cases, financial institutions may offer lower interest rates, saving you a considerable sum of money. Changing jobs or quitting during the closing process could derail a home purchase. In such cases, many lenders will not be confident about income reliability and therefore be less likely to provide the best rates.

Arizona votes in favor of Proposition 206, which will increase the state's minimum wage. An increase in the minimum wage is coming to the Grand Canyon State. Arizona voters passed Proposition 206, which will increase the state's minimum wage to $10 per hour in 2017 and to $12 per hour by 2020. Prop 206 will also require businesses with 15 or more employees to provide at least 40 hours of annual paid sick time to employees. New Arizona House Speaker J. D. Mesnard considering lawsuit to block minimum wage increase. The incoming speaker of the Arizona House of Representatives said he is considering whether to file a lawsuit to block an increase to the minimum wage approved by voters last month. Rep. J.D. Mesnard said the increase might run afoul of the state Constitution's requirement that initiatives contain a funding source if they require state outlays. He said he hasn't reached that conclusion and will have Arizona House attorneys analyze the measure before deciding whether to sue. Companies that provide services to the developmentally disabled under state contracts say they may have to pull back or cease operations if the wage increase isn't blocked. The firms run on tight margins and have faced cutbacks in state reimbursements in recent years. The attorney representing backers of Proposition 206 said the initiative exempts the state itself from having to pay the higher wages, so there's no legal issue for contract workers because that's not mandatory state spending that would violate the requirement to identify a funding source.

The 40 employees will be contacted before the new year with an offer to be rehired into their previous position. Jeffries said that he was forced to resign in November after being on the job less than two years. Additionally, five other DES employees — who were close to Jeffries — also lost their jobs in November.

Family Issues:

Arizona promotes healthy parenting among individuals and in communities raising children. Two reports set the stage for the daunting work facing the state task force charged with reinventing the state's child-welfare agency. They confirm in numbers and trend lines the continued issues confronting child safety in Arizona: an increasing number of reports of child abuse and neglect, a growing number of kids in foster care and a revolving door for a quarter of the children caught.

Phoenix Police: Man kills three puppies after family leaves home in fear. A West Phoenix man has been arrested for killing three Chihuahua puppies that were only two weeks old. Court records show that 27-year-old Blaine Lyle Nez was in the home with five children and was heavily intoxicated. Concerned, the children contacted their mother who instructed them to get out of the home. The oldest teenager got his siblings out of the house when their mother pulled up in her car. Police say they were waiting down the street and contacted police when they saw Nez leave home. They returned to the house to get a few items they needed. When they went inside, they reportedly saw writing on the walls and the three puppies dead in the teen's room, one in a pool of blood. Police say they found and arrested Nez down the street from the home allegedly wearing boots with blood on them. Police say Nez tried to kick officers when they tried to remove the boots from his feet. Court paperwork shows Nez is the husband of the children's mother, but didn't specify if he was their biological father or not. Nez has been charged with aggravated assault and multiple counts of cruelty to animals.

Family with foster children fighting to renovate home for kids. They say love makes a house a home, and if that's the case one Valley family must have one of the biggest homes you've ever seen. "Every day I tell myself, this is my own child, I don't care if he's blood related for not, I'm going to love this child as my own," said Virginia Revoir. Revoir has 10 children who range in ages from one to 16. Eight of them are her biological children and she is fostering two of them. Her 11-year-old foster son was the victim of abuse and he needs intense emotional care. He has been in her home for three months and is doing great. "I took him in, they warned me, he's high needs, and I said, 'That's OK I will love him like my own,'" she said. "I wouldn't give up on my own kid." Her four bedroom house just isn't big enough. Two of her biological sons moved into the garage to make room, but state inspectors said that is not allowed. Revoir is attempting to turn her outdoor patio into a fifth bedroom. She said state inspectors have given her until the end of the month to complete the construction project. If Revoir fails to make the deadline, she says her foster son could be placed somewhere else. The Revoir family is determined to give their foster son the best Christmas present of all, a loving, permanent home. More information on Cook Remodeling efforts can be found here.

Crime/Violence: Phoenix police are dealing with a dramatic increase in violent crimes. And, with the department short staffed, the crime outlook does not look good. The caseload is demanding on an already strapped department. Phoenix police have started recruiting and are expected to hire 50 to 60 officers this year, even more officers are expected to retire. The department knows of at least 55 officers scheduled to leave the force by the end of the year. While violent crime numbers are up, property crime numbers are down 3 percent since January. Three hundred officers are expected to be hired within the next three years.

Caught on tape: Brazen thieves steal Valley campaign signs. With a tensions rising ahead of the November election, political candidates and supporters say they are seeing a rise in campaign sign thefts. Arizona state law says stealing, defacing, or knocking down a campaign sign is a class two misdemeanor, punishable by four months in jail or a $750 fine. "People should care because in local races, signs are the way you introduce yourself to the voter," said Thomas Galvin, a candidate for the Central Arizona Water Conservation District. He says some of his signs have been removed or damaged. The signs disappear from street corners and people's yards. After Donald Trump signs kept disappearing from his property, one Paradise Valley man hired an audio-visual company, Theater X, to set up security cameras. The cameras, hidden in bushes, caught two people jumping out of their cars to swipe signs. "They did it in broad daylight with absolutely no conscience at all," said Theater X owner James May. Suspect in deadly shooting of Show Low officer shot, killed during barricade. Authorities say the man suspected of killing a Show Low officer was shot and killed after a barricade situation. The Arizona Department of Public Safety confirmed the Blue Alert issued for 36-year-old Daniel Erickson had been canceled, as law enforcement had him barricaded inside a cabin in the Pinetop-Lakeside area. According to the City of Show Low, Erickson had a 15-year-old girl who he had taken hostage. After six and a half hours of negotiation, Erickson reportedly sporadically fired a gun at officers and officers returned fire, killing him. The 15-year-old girl was safely located and taken to the hospital for evaluation. DPS says a Show Low officer was shot at the Arby's near Deuce of Clubs and Central Avenue. The officer, later identified as 50-year-old Darrin Reed, was hospitalized in critical condition but later died. Reed leaves behind a wife, son and daughter. (11am newscast on 11/08, :57 in length)

Tran reportedly admitted he was involved in the laser strikes but didn't give a motive to police. Phoenix police have been investigating burglaries, commercial burglaries, shoplifting, and stolen cars all in the Ahwatukee area where they were all given a similar suspect description. Those descriptions match 18-year-old Samuel Michael Mielke, a man known to police for multiple robberies as a juvenile. His photo was shown to a loss prevention officer at a Safeway store near 40th street and Chandler Boulevard where Mielke allegedly shoplifted some items and then pointed a gun at the officer when he confronted Mielke. Transportation: The number of people killed in vehicle-related crashes on Arizona roads has risen significantly in the last year. The Arizona Department of Transportation reported that preliminary information indicates that roughly 890 died in car crashes in 2015. ADOT officials say the figure far surpasses the 773 deaths recorded in 2014. The agency says factors that contributed to the road-related deaths include speeding, impaired driving and a failure to wear a seat belt. State agencies are urging motorists to consider how they behave when behind the wheel. ADOT officials expect to have a final tally on the number of fatalities in its annual report, which will be released later this year.

PD: 3 dead in apparent street-racing crash along Central Avenue in Phoenix. An apparent street race along a Phoenix road has left three people dead, according to police. Officials confirmed a third person had died following the crash on Central Avenue. Phoenix police have identified the victims as 17-year-old Jesus Aguilar, 22-year-old Jessie Worth, and 18-year-old Marcos Agmayo-Aguilar. Aguilar and Worth were in one of the vehicles, with Agmayo-Aguilar in the second. Police say the two vehicles were reportedly street racing before losing control. One car hit a wall on one side of Central Avenue, and the other slammed into a tree on the opposite side. Rescue crews had to use high-power hydraulic tools to get to one man trapped in his car, Phoenix Fire officials say. Two people were thrown from the car that hit the tree, and that also caught fire. A Phoenix Fire Department spokesperson says the official cause of the crash has not yet been determined by police. "Speed and lack of seat belt usage" appear to be major factors in the deadly nature of the collision, police said Monday.

ADOT: I-17 traffic fixes would be pricey, challenging. A massive 24-vehicle crash on the I-17 southbound caused a massive backup around Black Canyon City. The crash and traffic delays bring up a problem that the Arizona Department of Transportation has studied and would like to fix, but can't afford. ADOT said the I-17 north of the Valley -- from Black Canyon City to Sunset Point -- is one of the biggest problem spots they have due to narrow roads and limited access. "There's a wide range of options (to help traffic flow) and it starts at $125 million and goes up from there," said Ryan Harding, an ADOT spokesperson. ADOT has studied that stretch of road a lot. "Studies, designs...each of those phases costs millions of dollars," said Harding. Every time there's a crash in either direction, cars cram together and slow to a near-stop. But the traffic crush isn't exclusive to crashes -- heavy holiday traffic always cause serious delays in both directions. Harding said widening the road with additional lanes is the most obvious solution, but poses plenty of problems. "Adding lanes, of course, at that point the elevation rises pretty rapidly as you're going uphill, so that's challenging too," he said. Right now, Harding said ADOT will likely continue conducting studies and drawing up plans, but there's nothing concrete in the works to move forward with a fix.

Education: Teachers have been fleeing Arizona in droves, resulting in such a serious shortage of experienced teachers that state officials are warning of serious consequences if the exodus continues. Over the last five years, thousands of teachers have left the state, according to a 2015 report by the Arizona Department of Education, with this past school year being possibly the worst. Why are so many teachers leaving? Educators say reasons include low pay, insufficient classroom resources, and so many testing requirements and teaching guidelines that they feel they have no flexibility and too little authentic instructional time.

Bankrate study: Millennials cite lack of cash, financial education reasons for not investing.
Stream Logistics in Scottsdale is a millennial workplace through and through -- millennial leaders, fresh young faces, and a collaborative work environment. Also, when it comes to enrolling in a retirement plan, not everyone is on the same page. "It's kind of a whirlwind (when you're hired), you have a new job and new responsibilities. That stuff goes out the window a little bit," said Stream Logistics worker Damien Voita. Another aspect, he said, is retirement isn't a subject that teachers or professors spend much time on. The 24-year-old is certainly not alone when it comes to putting off saving. He's actually in the majority of his age group. A recent Bankrate survey showed only 18 percent of Americans between 18 and 25 years old are investing in a retirement account."

Arizona amends education standards, adds cursive requirement. Arizona will require public schools to teach cursive handwriting as one of a number of new education standards approved by the state Board of Education. The move amends the state's current standards, which are based on federal guidelines known as the Common Core. Common Core has become a politicized topic and state Superintendent of Public Instruction Diane Douglas campaigned on a promise to replace it. "We now have new standards that have been worked on by Arizona teachers, parents and been vetted by anti-Common Core experts," said Douglas. In addition to requiring students to have mastered cursive by the fifth grade, the revisions also require lessons about time and money in early grades.

Housing: Housing will be back as force for growth in 2016, Arizona economists say. Demographic factors that for years slowed down Arizona's housing industry finally seem to be turning in the state's favor, one of the reasons economic growth should keep chugging along in 2016. Millennials, the generation whose oldest members are in their mid-30s, are marrying, with many becoming first-time homebuyers. Younger members of the generation are leaving their parents' homes and creating strong demand for apartments. As they grow older and marry, life events will create even more demand for more single-family housing. The Phoenix area should have at least 15,000 building permits for single-family houses this year and at least 18,000 next year.

Immigration: High levels of illegal immigration and crimes committed by unauthorized immigrants are among the key rationales cited by some supporters of a tough new immigration law in Arizona. According to our Governor, Jan Brewer; border violence and crime due to illegal immigration are critically important issues to the people of our state. During the year controversial immigration measure SB 1070 passed, Arizona fell from eighth to 18th on the list of states most popular among people moving from other countries, Pollack said. He blames the stigma that came with the law.

Border mass aims to bring attention to immigrants. The representative of Pope Francis in the U.S. will lead a cross-border mass in an effort to bring awareness to the plight of immigrants and refugees. Archbishop Christophe Pierre, the Apostolic Nuncio to the United States, will be the principal celebrant of the mass that will be held in both Nogales, Arizona and Nogales, Mexico. There will be an altar on each side of the border. The mass is the third one along the Arizona-Mexico border this year and is organized by Dioceses Without Borders, a group composed of church leaders from around Arizona and the Mexican border state of Sonora. Diocese of Tucson Bishop Gerald Kicanas says the mass will focus on immigration, a major issue for the church. Pope Francis has been outspoken in favor of immigration reform and humane treatment of migrants. Prayers will also be held for Border Patrol agents and others who work around the border.

Valley mother outraged over immigration reform; In May of 2014, a wrong-way driver in the country illegally crashed into and killed popular Mesa Police Officer Brandon Mendoza. Mendoza had just passed the exam for a promotion to sergeant. "I can't even believe it's been a year and a half," said his mother, Mary Ann Mendoza. The pain is still evident in her face and in her voice. The anger with lawmakers is there too. "They aren't listening to us," she said. "They're voting based on special interests and what is going to make them popular in Washington." Mendoza just returned from Capitol Hill. The man who crashed into Sgt. Mendoza was drunk, on meth and had previous convictions. Mary Ann Mendoza wants a law that forces the deportation of illegal immigrants convicted of crimes. She also wants to make it impossible for them to buy a car and register it in the U.S., like the man who crashed into her son did. "He created a huge void in my life and in the community," she said. Advocates decry another immigration death at Arizona facility. The weekend death of a Guatemalan woman who became ill at a detention center in Arizona with the most in-custody immigrant deaths in the U.S. is another example of inadequate care and poor practices at the privately run site, advocates for immigrants said this week. The 36-year-old woman died at a hospital near the Eloy Detention Center, which is among the largest immigrant lockups in the country and currently has 1,473 detainees, just shy of its capacity of 1,500. U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement announced Monday that Raquel Calderon de Hildago died Sunday after suffering a series of seizures. It was the third in-custody death for the immigration agency nationwide since October 1. Fifteen migrants have died at the Eloy Detention Center since 2004, ICE data shows. This summer, the center became the epicenter of a large measles outbreak after some facility workers refused to get vaccinated. "For us it's disappointing because this death, like the others, could have been prevented. But unfortunately this administration and (the prison operator) are not held accountable and so we see again someone's life being lost," said Carlos Garcia, the executive director of Puente Arizona, an advocacy group for immigrants.

Scottsdale family caught in immigration battle after ICE arrest. The immigration battle came right to the doorstep of a Scottsdale couple, after a recent arrest made by the ICE fugitive arrest team. ICE officials said Stuart Bailey was considered a priority for deportation for over-staying his visa and for two DUI arrests on his record; one of them was an extreme DUI. Where ICE officials saw a priority for deportation, those who knew and loved Stuart Bailey saw a husband, father and philanthropist. Bailey was the owner of Pane-E-Vino Italian restaurant in Scottsdale. His wife, Gillian Bailey, reached out to ABC15 after his arrest and wanted to share his side of the story. Gillian said she had met her husband at the restaurant 20 years ago while working there. She was a U.S. citizen. He was from the U.K and had lived in the United States for more than 30 years. Bailey said her husband never applied for citizenship due to "bad advice" they had received from an immigration attorney, who cautioned him to "lay low" because he had over-stayed his visa. Stuart had also been arrested for two DUIs. His wife said one of them was seven years ago and the other four years ago. The ICE fugitive arrest team is responsible for arresting illegal immigrants with criminal convictions in the United States. ICE officials said both over-staying his visa and the DUIs on his record made Stuart a priority for deportation.

What you need to know about Arizona's rising health insurance marketplace premiums.

Arizonans who paid some of the lowest individual insurance premiums in the nation when policies were first available under President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law in 2014 are about to be walloped. Premiums are going up by 116 percent on average in the state come Jan. 1 for people who buy plans on the federal marketplace. Many people will see much higher increases, especially in rural Arizona. Yuma and La Paz counties are experiencing the biggest increases in the country.

Marijuana initiative falls short as Arizona voters reject Proposition 205. By a narrow margin, Arizona voters have rejected Proposition 205, which would have legalized the recreational use of marijuana in the state. Polls taken before the election indicated the Prop 205 vote would be close. Organizations who both supported and opposed the proposition spent millions of dollars advertising in the state in the months leading up to the election. In 2010, Arizona voters narrowly passed a proposition that legalized the use of marijuana for medical purposes.

City of Peoria: Excessive levels of nitrate found in tap water between November 15 & 17. The City of Peoria issued a release Tuesday that shows a water sample tested recently had an unsafe level of nitrate. The city says a sample from November 15 showed a level of 10.8 mg/L of nitrate. The maximum level that is safe to consume is 10 mg/L. Once the exceeding level was detected, the city says it shut down the area well and the issue was resolved. According to the release: "Infants below the age of six-months-old who drink water containing nitrate in excess of 10 parts per million MCL could become seriously ill and, if untreated, may die. Symptoms include shortness of breath and blue-baby syndrome. If symptoms occur, seek medical attention immediately. Infants cannot process nitrates like adults can" The release also says adults and children over six months old can drink the tap water. However, anyone who is pregnant, or has serious health concerns, may wish to consult a doctor. The city also said that it is always a good idea to give infants under six months old bottled water, and to use bottled water when preparing juice or formula.

Arizona couple sentenced to prison in health care fraud. An Arizona couple who live on the Navajo Indian Reservation has been sentenced to prison and ordered to pay millions of dollars in restitution after pleading guilty to health care fraud involving thousands of medical transports that never occurred. Fort Defiance residents Sylvia Jean Begay and Virgil C. Begay were sentenced to 28 months and 21 months in prison, respectively. The case is the second involving the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System and multimillion-dollar frauds to come to light in recent years. The U.S. Attorney's Office for Arizona said the Begays each owned a company that made thousands of false claims to Arizona's Medicaid program, known as the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System, for non-emergency medical transports. The 44-count indictment that charged the couple, listed numerous non-emergency transports made on weekends and holidays.

You don't have to pay for student debt forgiveness. When schools close there's a lot of confusion about what happens next, and if you have student loans but have not yet earned your degree, that only makes things more stressful. That's why many students of closed schools will be approached by some companies--both legitimate and not--who will offer help get your student loans forgiven. There are a few legitimate federal programs to help students whose schools have closed, but you don't need to pay anyone to take advantage of what they offer. Loan forgiveness can only be given through the U.S. Department of Education. It's called a "closed school discharge." It's granted on a case by case basis, and it is free.

Do you qualify for cheaper health insurance? You may have received a letter that you're being dropped from your health insurer. Some providers have pulled out of the Healthcare Marketplace. But, three providers remain: Blue Cross Blue Shield of Arizona, HealthNet and Ambetter. If you live in Arizona, at least one provider will be available when enrollment begins for 2017. And make sure to check if you qualify for subsidies. Experts say 30,000 Arizonans qualify but did not take advantage of the lowered insurance costs.

Families fight for vacation rental refunds. Here in the valley listing your house as a short-term rental can be an easy way to make some extra cash. But, one Cave Creek homeowner is accused of taking several renter's money, and failing to provide the house. Tom Eaton is one of those renters and came all the way from Washington State to have his day in court. "I think he's cheated me and he's cheated other people and I did not want him to get away with it," Eaton said. Eaton was looking for a home to rent while in Arizona for Spring Training games with his buddies. He found one in Cave Creek and contacted owner Bill Muller. "We agreed on a rental price, sent a deposit check for half and then he never provided anything after that. He cashed my check and didn't provide a contract or even a receipt that he had received my money," Eaton said. For seven weeks, Eaton says he tried to get Muller to provide him a written contract but it never happened. "I tried to contact him and he said he would sign a paper saying he owed me the money and he'd pay it back and we agreed to meet at a Starbucks." That never happened. Eaton had to rent another place, and sued Muller to get his $2,150 back. We caught up with Muller just before the hearing where he insisted that the verbal contract with Eaton was enough. Eaton won a judgment of more than $3,100.

Valley Car Salesman Accused of Rolling Back Odometer. The ad says low mileage...the price is great. You buy that used car only to find out later that 79,000 miles is actually 179,000. It happened to Angie Castro and her husband. They bought a 2004 van to transport disabled parents and future foster kids. They spent all they had: $3,300. But a Carfax report later showed that 100,000 miles vanished. Kenneth Barker was the seller, advertising on Craigslist. Angie says Barker denied the added miles saying she couldn't prove anything. In a letter to investigators with the Arizona Attorney General Office, Barker says "Mrs. Castro was fully aware of what she was buying." And Angie did sign a "not actual miles" statement. It's one of the hurried signatures she says she gave, and admits she was confused. But Barker has been accused before. The Arizona Department of Transportation says Barker was charged with a misdemeanor after three recent odometer complaints. Angie sued Barker and won a judgment, but so far, she hasn't been able to collect. On a judge's advice, she says she gave the van back to Barker. She says she didn't feel safe driving it and felt guilty about selling it anyway. So now, she's without her money, and without a car, still hoping to collect that judgment.

Protect yourself when buying a used car:

- Use a Carfax or a similar history report to show mileage concerns.
  - Don't be hurried. Only sign documents you read thoroughly.
  - Question older cars with unreasonably low mileage. Count on at least 10,000 miles per year.

Are extended warranties worth the money for laptops, phones. Get ready, here we go again. It's holiday gift-buying season. Laptops and phones will be big. But should you buy those extended warranties that are always being offered? Data Doctors Ken Colburn says yes, and no. In most cases, he says "They cover the least likely things to go wrong with your computer." Many only cover hardware issues, when the real problems are usually malicious software and operating system corruption that are not covered. If they do cover software issues, that might be worth a look. On the other hand, Colburn says more mobile devices like phones and tablets might benefit more from service plans. Again, it depends on the plan. Many don't cover abuse or theft, which are the common phone and tablet issues. But we found a couple of plans on Amazon that covered drops, spills and more. Then you have to decide if it's worth the price. Bottom line, don't let a "great deal" pushed by a salesman lure you in. Research exclusions and shop around for costs, before you sign up.

Let Joe Know: Some banks hold bi-weekly mortgage payments. If you want to pay your mortgage down faster, it seems like it would make sense to pay half the bill every two weeks right? Nancy in Phoenix let Joe know when she signed up to do that, the money was not immediately applied to her account and is kept "in limbo until the second half comes in." But if the partial payment isn't applied until the full payment comes in, how are you saving money? Nick Clements, of Magnifymoney.com, said you may not be saving much. "It's [the money] not earning interest for you and it hasn't reduced your mortgage balance," Clements said. He said that by paying to enroll in some bi-weekly programs, you are actually paying them to pay them! But there is a way around it. Sending half your mortgage every two weeks amounts to paying one extra payment in a year. So, instead of paying the bank to do it for you, Clements said, make that extra payment yourself. "Take that payment, divide it by 12 and every month make an extra principal payment on your own," he said. For example, if your mortgage is $1,000 per month you would add $83 to your monthly payment to get a similar benefit to paying bi-weekly. Just make sure you specify that you want the extra money to go directly to the principal.

Company ran off with Cash for Kids. Phoenix Brothers Dimitri and Dante' were born months apart, but share the same genetic disorder, because both boys are severely disabled, their mother Christina Lopez, has to file for guardianship when they turn 18 years old. Legally they will be considered adults and will need their mother to make decisions for them because the boys are not able to. Older brother Dimitri went through the process in 2015. So when time came for Dante', Christina hired the same company called PPG Legal Documents. It is a firm that prepares legal documents and files them with court. She dealt with owner Lisa Perez. "I gave her all the personal information she needed and I expected her to complete the documents and file them in a timely manner," Christina says. She didn't...in fact Christina says Perez did nothing for the $1,200 she was given and stopped almost all communication once she received payment. "Days went by, I didn't hear from her. I started to worry. I sent her an email. Didn't hear back. A week went by and my gut was telling me something is not right," she explains. Eventually she says she got an email from Perez apologizing but says after that she never heard from her again. Soon Christina connected with other families on Facebook with the same story. Apple says 'counterfeit' chargers can cause fires. It's one of the first things we do in the morning--pull the cell phone off the charger. Well if yours is a knock off, it could be a fire hazard. Katie Skerchock found that out first hand when she unplugged her phone from its charger and says she heard an explosion. "I stopped a second, and I look down and see the sparks," she says. She says a metallic covering over her USB cord shorted out. So how can you tell if your charger is really Apple certified? The company says for products made by a third party, the proof is in the packaging. Apple certified accessories always have the "made for" or "MFi logo" on the packaging. Genuine Apple lightning USB cables will show the words "Designed by Apple in California", and either "Assembled in China," "Assembled in Vietnam," or "Indústria Brasileira" (Joe Ducey reported at 6pm on 11/28, TRT 1:27)

But there's one thing you need to do first. "Make sure you have a backup of your personal information," he says. It's especially important for laptops. So put all the important stuff on a memory stick, SD card, or hard drive, then you can really get started. Pina says the easiest way to clean your device is by doing a factory reset. That restores the phone to the original system settings and condition that you bought it in.

And before sharing it with anyone, ask why they need it, how they'll protect it and what happens if you don't give it to them. Shred everything, including receipts, credit offers, applications, insurance forms, doctors and bank statements. Do not give out personal information to anyone you don't know over the phone or online. Protect your computer. It might contain tax returns, Social Security numbers and passwords. So don't click on unknown email links that could allow scammers in. Finally, be aware. Look over each bank and credit card statement thoroughly for suspicious activity. Get your three free credit reports every year through annualcreditreport.com and check them for suspicious activity. When is pet insurance a good idea? And is it worth it? Pets are family too. And when they get sick, the vet bills can quickly add up. Getting pet insurance could help offset those costs, but how do you know if it is right for you? If you can afford a premium of about $32 per month, and don't have the ability to pay for a catastrophic illness, it might be worth a look. Like with all contracts, make sure to read the fine print. Many policies require that you pay the veterinarian directly, then be reimbursed by the insurance company. Find out what exclusions are in the policy. Experts with Embrace Pet Insurance tell me, virtually no companies offer coverage for preexisting conditions. So it makes sense to shop around for the best price while your pet is young and healthy. DeVry University agrees to pay $100 million penalty for misleading ads. Some former DeVry students will get a payday courtesy of the college. DeVry University and its parent company settled a Federal Trade Commission lawsuit for $100 million, according to a news release from the FTC. The FTC alleged DeVry illegally misled people in its ads by claiming that 90 percent of graduates actively seeking employment landed jobs in their field within six months of graduation. In the filing, the agency claimed the numbers are skewed because many of those jobs are outside of the students' fields. According to the FTC: DeVry will pay $49.4 million in cash to be distributed to qualifying students who were harmed by the deceptive ads, as well as $50.6 million in debt relief. Student services and access to federal student loans are not impacted by the settlement, and at no time has the academic quality of a DeVry University education been questioned. DeVry is headquartered in Illinois, but has a campus in Phoenix. (Joe Ducey reported at 6pm on 12/15, TRT :45)
