Presidential Infrastructure Plans Might Neglect Rural Areas

Lincoln, NE – President Donald Trump's plan for investing $1 trillion to rebuild the nation's infrastructure is being met with skepticism on both sides of the aisle. Its critics are concerned that by relying on tax incentives and projects that must produce profits for developers, roads, bridges and water systems in Nebraska's rural areas could be overlooked. Comments from Robert Reich (rhymes with hike), former Labor Secretary under President Bill Clinton.

Intro: During his address to Congress on Tuesday, President Donald Trump called for one-trillion dollars in public and private investment to rebuild the nation's roads and bridges, noting that the six-trillion dollars spent fighting wars in the Middle East could have easily rebuilt America "two or three times over." Former Labor Secretary Robert Reich says Trump's plan to lure investors with tax credits would be a huge giveaway for wealthy developers, but agrees there's a big need for more and better infrastructure for the public.

Cut 14161 :13 "And the only way we get that is if corporations and the wealthy pay their fair share of taxes. We'd be turning over public roads and bridges to private corporations who will charge us expensive tolls."

Tag: Reich says tolls likely would be set by private companies to provide the kinds of returns expected by Wall Street. And he notes infrastructure in rural areas might not get fixed at all if the project isn't seen as profitable. Some Republican leaders, including Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, also are wary of Trump's plans to finance the effort.

Second Cut: Reich says taxpayers could end up footing the majority of the bill under Trump's proposal. He explains for every dollar a developer puts into a project up front – due to tax incentives – they'd actually pay only 18 cents, leaving taxpayers to cover the remaining 82 cents.

Cut 15161 :12 "Rather than taxing the wealthy – and then using the money to fix our dangerously outdated roads, bridges, airports, water systems – Trump wants to give rich developers and Wall Street investors tax credits."

Tag: Reich says the public would essentially end up paying twice – first by subsidizing developers and investors with tax dollars, and again by paying tolls and user fees. President Barack Obama's proposal to tap private investors to pay for infrastructure projects also was opposed by Republicans in Congress during his years in office.

OPTIONAL REPORTER WRAP: uses first soundbite(s)

LEAD: While there's broad agreement on the need to repair the nation's crumbling infrastructure, some are concerned about President Donald Trump's proposal calling for public-private partnerships to pay for the work. Mary Schuermann has more.

Cut 16161 1:03 Outcue...Schuermann reporting.
