The Greenhouse Show

ISSUE: Environment, Economy
PROGRAM: The Greenhouse Show
DATE & TIME: Saturdays, 8 a.m. – 11 a.m. (Nov. 26)
LENGTH: 3 Hours
TOPIC: Utah-Grown Christmas Trees

November 26th, 6:17am, Michael Kuhns, Extension Forestry specialist

Buying a fresh-cut Christmas tree is a fun way to ring-in the holidays, but most live Christmas trees in Utah are brought in from other states. Here are some ideas on where to get freshly cut Utah-grown Christmas trees.

Land Management Agencies -Christmas tree permits (both for individual trees and for commercial cutters) sometimes are available from Utah's land management agencies. Call your local office of an agency for the best information. Agencies who sometimes have trees available (click for a link) are the USDA Forest Service (click on "By State" box and enter Utah to get Utah National Forest information), Bureau of Land Management (BLM) (click on "Our Offices/Centers" for a listing of field offices), and the Utah Division of Forestry, Fire & State Lands (click on About Us for a list of Area Offices). Click here for a Forest Service news release on 2010 Christmas tree permits.

Tree Lots -You will occasionally come upon tree lots selling pre-cut trees that have been harvested live from Utah's forests. This can be a very good way to get a really fresh tree. Tree species you will find on such lots include pinyon pine, subalpine fir, Douglas fir, and lodge pole pine.

Choose-and-cut Trees -Utah has relatively few businesses that sell Christmas trees that are grown locally. Listed below are several that we know of. Listing, of course, does not mean we endorse any particular grower.

Gale Gorder 710 North Morgan Valley Drive Morgan, Utah 84050 801-829-6529 Hours: Any time 8-5pm. Species: blue spruce, Austrian, Scotch pine; everything is Utah grown!

Meldrum Tree Farm - Choose and Cut Christmas Trees Website:

<http://www.UtahChristmasTreeFarm.com> Location: 2073 West Gentile Street, Layton UT.

Austrian pine, Colorado spruce, Blackhills spruce, Scotch pine. Open Saturdays, from 9 am to 5 pm, weekdays by appointment, closed Sunday.

Neville Farm address approx. 1875 West 1000 South, West Layton Utah Phone: 801-544-9401 or 801-390-4823 Days open (while supplies last): Nov 26 and 27 - 10 am to 4:30 pm; December 4 and 11 - Noon to 4:30 pm. Species: Scotch pine, Colorado blue spruce (extremely limited).

North Pole Pines Website: www.northpolepines.com Phone: 801-731-6466. Species: French Blue Scotch pine, white spruce, balsam fir.

Papa's Pines Phone: 801-440-6607 Email: trjohnson@gmail.com Hours and Dates: Friday and Saturday open from 7 am to 4 pm. Species: Colorado blue spruce, balsam fir, and a few others.

Butch Robinson 6262 West Old Hwy Road Morgan, UT 84050 Phone: 801-876-3190 or 801-528-2909. Species: Colorado blue spruce, alpine fir; all Utah grown! Hours of Operation: Monday-Sunday until dark. Cut your own tree; handsaw supplied; 6 ft. to 14 ft. trees available.

Stevens Tree Farm (New listing in 2011!) 640 North Church Street Layton, UT Phone: 801-544-7628. Species: Colorado blue spruce. Hours of Operation: Fridays and Saturdays from 9 am to 5 pm or by appt. Open the day after Thanksgiving in 2011. Any tree $30; you cut or we cut; bring your own saw or borrow one of ours; 5 ft. to 10 ft. trees available (a few taller).

TOPIC: The Skinny On Solar Greenhouses

December 31st, 8:04am

Solar greenhouses have always been the dream, but they take on many forms depending on how, when and what you plan to grow in them. All greenhouses are solar — meaning they depend on the sun to provide light and at least some of the heat during the day.

What makes a greenhouse solar is the fact that it is designed so you add little or no extra heat. You collect the heat when the sun is shining and try and store it so it is released when the sun is not shining. This week's focus is on a type of greenhouse called a high tunnel. Brent Black and Dan Drost, professors at Utah State University, are doing extensive research on using the high-tunnel system to help gardeners extend their growing season so their produce will command a higher price and be available over a longer period of time.

A high-tunnel greenhouse is an inexpensive structure you can stand up in. Low-tunnel greenhouses, by contrast, are also used to extend the growing season, but they're much smaller, usually about 18 inches high. The advantage of a high-tunnel system is the cost. Cost for the basic construction starts at less than $1 per square foot and can go up from there. Small greenhouses will often run 10-20 times as much because you put so much into them for additional equipment.

High tunnels are essentially passive solar greenhouses. By definition they lack any electrical components and any source of external heat. There are no fans to cool or distribute heat, and temperatures are regulated by raising or lowering the sidewalls of the greenhouse.

The crops grow directly in the soil, which serves as the solar storage for the heat. In other words, the soil gets warm during the day and that helps keep it warm at night. This helps protect plants from temperature fluctuations and light frosts and protects them from extreme moisture fluctuations and wind. While much of the work on high tunnels is focused on commercial growers, the system is adaptable to home gardeners.

The first choice is to look at the crops you plan to grow. High tunnels can extend the season on either end by several weeks using warm-season crops including tomatoes, peppers, squash and cucumbers. They are even better adapted to cool-season crops. Some local growers are using them to produce vegetables during severe winter weather. Imagine picking all the ingredients for a fresh garden salad in January from your backyard greenhouse.

A solar greenhouse construction class will be held Jan. 17, 24 and 31st at 2-4:30 p.m. or 6-8:30 p.m. Take advantage of the sun to heat your greenhouse. Extend your outdoor garden or become more self-reliant! Course topics include choosing a site, energy conservation, low-cost construction techniques, heating, cooling, glazing, hot beds and cold frames. This is the only time of the year that this class is held.

A basic landscape design class will be held Jan. 17, 24 and 31st at 10 a.m.-12:30 PM. Each class is $40 per person. To register, call 801-768-7443 or go online at www.thanksgivingpoint.com.

PROGRAM: The Matt Townsend Show

DATE & TIME: Saturdays, 9 a.m. – 11 a.m. (Nov. 3)

LENGTH: 2 Hours

TOPIC: The One-Sided Relationship: Are you the only one working on your marriage?

9:34 am) Many people feel like they're in a one-sided relationship where their partner doesn't care, won't talk, and doesn't want to work on it. How do we turn these relationships around? Is it possible to impact and create change in a relationship single-handedly? Relationship expert, Matt Townsend, discusses the keys to working on a relationship if the other partner doesn't seem engaged. He has 5 suggestions to single-handedly improve your relationship.

TOPIC: Family Conversations: Finding the time and excitement for talk.

10:10 am) How much time do you and your family spend talking? Nowadays it's so easy to be distracted with other ways of spending our time and also technology is impacting our conversations. However, studies show that conversations are crucial to creating unity, power, and identity. Research shows that parents who have regular meals with their adolescents help lessen the chances that they will start drinking or smoking later in their teenage years. Relationship expert, Matt Townsend suggests five conversations we need to be having together as a family. When we spend time and have conversations with our kids we can start to make positive change.
