PROGRAM	How can 43 people disappear in plain sight? In what type of society do police officers fire upon loaded buses? Why hasn't the Mexican Army given an official report on this matter? This pertains to the case in which some students from Ayotzinapa were killed and others have disappeared; students who are witnesses have claimed that soldiers were involved in this matter because they were patrolling the area and they were subdued by them and the soldiers refuse to call an ambulance to tend to a wounded student. These and many other questions are without an answer in the official investigation been conducted by the Mexican government; the same investigation where reports have been made of the exhumation of 43 body remains that were found at clandestine graves; the remains have not been identified because there hasn't been any DNA testing. This edition is broadcast from Mexico City and hosted by Martha Elena Ramirez. Guests: (Pre-recorded Audios) Omar Garcia, Member of Comité Ejecutivo Estudiantil de la Normal Rural, Isidro Burgos, Ayotzinapa, Guerrero; Perseo Quiroz, Director of Amnesty International Mexico, Mexico; Meliton Ortega, Parent; Maribel Gonzalez, Centro de Derechos Humanos de la Montaña, Tlachinollan, Guerrero.

PROGRAM	An exclusive interview with students who survived the gunfight attack by police officers in the city of Iguala, on September 26th. One of the student leaders narrates his life changing experiences from a poor farm worker to an active civic student leader. He says that in the Guerrero Mountains, where the lifestyle is an option between becoming a migrant worker or stay and harvest poppy flowers, every year activists from the school of Ayotzinapa will travel to rural areas and inform young people about the school for underprivileged students and the possibility of becoming rural teachers. Inside the classrooms the students learn about educational theories and outside they learn how to deal and manage with the government and school budgets. Between the boarding school, the taking of buses and the repression, the students grow up like vines intertwine with society. These students work towards building a democratic society. This edition is broadcast from Mexico City and hosted by Martha Elena Ramirez. Guests: (Pre-recorded Audios) Omar Garcia, Member of Comité Ejecutivo Estudiantil; Jose, First Year Student of Normal Rural "Isidro Burgos", Ayotzinapa, Guerrero, Mexico.

PROGRAM	Following the official statement on the case of the 43 missing students from Ayotzinapa, which details how they were burned; the parents of these students have broken apart from the federal government. Meanwhile, student associations protest in the Zocalo in Mexico City and call on people to participate in a national strike on November 20th. Today, after the confirmation of such horrific events in which it clearly states that it was the local police who, kidnapped and executed the students, society is left with many questions, like: how many politicians such as in the case of the former mayor and his wife, are linked to the organized crime? And how can the Mexican people cast aside this type of politicians? These and other thoughts are commented with a prominent human rights advocate from the Guerrero Mountains.
