Topic: 8-1-1 Call Before You Dig Program

WATC worked in conjunction with the Georgia Association of Broadcasters to educate viewers about the importance of calling before you dig to prevent injuries. WATC produced a fifteen minute program with interviewer Michael Vallone talking with spokesperson Cliff Meidl about the dangers of not calling before you dig. Cliff's bio is featured below. This program was rebroadcast Wednesday, September 30 at 10:45 a.m. on WATC 57.1 and has also aired in open time slots on WATC 57.2. Cliff's story is listed below

When American kayaker Cliff Meidl led his United States Olympian teammates onto the field at the Opening Ceremonies of the 2000 Sydney Olympic Games, nearly two billion viewers around the world were watching this young man from Manhattan Beach, California. Many of these viewers learned of Meidl's courageous rehabilitation and recovery from a tragic construction accident that occurred in 1986.

Meidl had jackhammered into three buried power lines that sent approximately 30,000 volts of electricity shooting through him. Meidl suffered a cardiac arrest and was "gone" for more than two minutes before medics revived him. That powerful jolt was enough to kill several men, but somehow Cliff Meidl clung to life. "I guess I just had more to do in my life" he recalls.

Meidl endured a total of 15 surgical procedures within a year and spent several years on crutches while he worked toward rebuilding his life. The accident disintegrated one-third of both knee joints and severely burned his back and skull. In addition, the accident nearly forced the amputation of his legs. However, Meidl was able to save his legs through an innovative surgical procedure that graphed portions of his calf muscles for attachment onto the remaining knee joints.

After Meidl's knees had sufficiently healed, he used physical therapy to overcome his injuries. At first, Meidl turned to canoeing and kayaking for the therapeutic value. However, he quickly excelled in these sports and thrived on his ability to compete with others in an equal setting. As a result, he threw himself into an aggressive weight lifting and conditioning regimen that enabled him to compete at the highest level. After years of hard work and dedication to his new sport of flatwater kayaking, Cliff began to make his dream of becoming an Olympian a reality.

In 1995, Meidl won a gold, silver and bronze medal in his kayaking events at the U.S. Olympic Festival in Denver, which became a launching pad toward his Olympic dream. As they say, the rest is history. Meidl made two U.S. Olympic teams, a feat that only fifteen percent of all Olympians accomplish and, more importantly, he has inspired a nation in the process. Today, the 46-year-old financial analyst is enjoying his passion--inspiring audiences. He is now sharing his inspirational story with diverse audiences all across the U.S.

Meidl has served as the national spokesperson for the Construction Safety Council and has recorded several national public service announcements and videos featured on television & radio stations across the United States. In addition, Meidl also served as national media spokesperson for the Electrical Safety Foundation International. Today, Meidl is the national spokesperson for the One Call Centers of America- a national alliance of State "call be you dig" organizations.

Finally, Meidl is the proud recipient of a number of prestigious awards for courage. He received the ARETE Award, the Philadelphia Sportswriters' Courage in Sports Award and the "Patsy Choco Award" from the Los Angeles Marathon. In 2003, Cliff was selected as an initial Olympian honoree of the Olympian Heroes series that features 20 of the most inspirational U.S. Olympians.

Meidl is also involved with his community as a Board Member of the El Camino Community College Foundation and also partners with various community foundations such as the Southern California Special Olympics and Why Can't We Make a Difference.org. Meidl received a Bachelor of Science degree in Finance from Cal State University Long Beach and has an MBA Degree from the University of Southern California. During the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing, Meidl represented the U.S. Olympic Team as Team Leader for Flatwater Canoe & Kayak.
