2013-08-29; 5:35, 7:35, 16:45

Eight years ago today Hurricane Katrina roared out of the Gulf of Mexico leaving more than 18-hundred people dead with an estimated 125 billion dollars in damage. Now imagine a series of storms of that intensity parked over the Gulf all the time and you have the setting for a first novel by a young Mississippi author. WBHM's Greg Bass spoke with Michael Farras Smith about his debut novel Rivers; 4:00.

Saying Goodbye To Marty's

2013-08-30; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

Regulars at Marty's in Birmingham's Southside neighborhood will have to find a new bar to call home after August 31st. The institution is calling it quits after two decades of drinks, music, and the passing of the bar's owner, Marty Eagle, earlier this year. Marty's was a second home for many but also a home for jazz in Birmingham. WBHM's Sarah Delia stopped by during the bar's final week as staff, musicians and regulars say goodbye.; 5:00.

Black Women Don't Exercise

2013-09-10;

Have you heard the stereotype that black women don't exercise? African-American women are at an increased risk of obesity and more likely to die from cardiovascular disease than white women. While WBHM Race and Diversity Blogger Javacia Harris Bowser is big on fitness, she's also making sure her mother doesn't become a statistic.; .

The Story Behind Newsweek's 16th Street Baptist Church Bombing Cover

2013-09-13; 6:35, 8:35, 16:55

Among many haunting images from the aftermath of the 16th Street Baptist Church bombing in Birmingham is a Newsweek magazine cover from 1963. It shows Maxine McNair, whose daughter Denise died in the blast, grieving with her sister. That photograph came about in an unexpected way. Birmingham resident Reggie Holder tells how he stumbled across the story.; 3:00.

A Sunday School Lesson From the 16th Street Baptist Church

2013-09-14; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

Verses from a Sunday School lesson taught the day of the bombing at the 16th Street Baptist Church will once again be shared with the church's youth this Sunday. WBHM's Sarah Delia visited the church to hear how those Bible verses resonate 50 years later.; 3:00.

Four Spirits Statue, Memorial to 16th Street Baptist Church Bombing Victims, Unveiled

2013-09-15;

City and civil rights leaders unveiled the "Four Spirits" statue in Kelly Ingram Park Saturday memorializing the victims of the 16th Street Baptist Church bombing, one day before the 50th anniversary of that tragedy. Other than a plaque on the side of the church, it's the first permanent memorial to the victims.; .

The Mystery of Addie Mae Collins' Remains

2013-09-16; 5:33, 7:33, 16:30

While Birmingham marked the 50th anniversary of the 16th Street Baptist Church bombing this weekend, a mystery lingers about one of the victims. Three of the four girls killed in the bombing were buried in Greenwood Cemetery near the Birmingham airport. Thereâs a gravestone for Addie Mae Collins, but her remains are not actually there. ECONOMY

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-07-15; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

Employers have a bit of a reprieve now that the federal government has delayed a portion of the Affordable Care Act. Even though the mandate requiring certain businesses to provide health insurance wonât take effect until 2015, dealing with the healthcare law still brings numerous questions. Weâll try to answer some of them in this week's Magic City Marketplace. ; 4:00.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-08-12; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

It can be fun to see how much the boss makes or it may provoke a little envy. For Birminghamâs top executives they saw their compensation rise in 2012 -- up about a fifth over the previous year. We take a look through those numbers in this week's Magic City Marketplace. ; 4:00.

What does Trinity's move mean for Birmingham's Eastside?

2013-08-16; 6:33, 8:33, 16:45

Construction crews will soon be scurrying about Trinity Medical Centerâs new building on Highway 280, preparing for the hospital to move to that location in 2016. Work on the new hospital, recently named Grandview Medical Center, comes after a four-year legal battle. While Trinity officials say the move is long-overdue, some residents of the eastside Birmingham neighborhood the hospital is vacating worry what the change means for their community.; 4:10.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-08-19; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

Itâs perhaps one of the more unique buildings in Birminghamâs skyline. And after years on the market the 20-story Thomas Jefferson Tower finally has a buyer. We talk about whatâs expected to happen with the property in this week's Magic City Marketplace. ; 4:00.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-08-26; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

Birmingham may be a hub for healthcare, but the city will also be home to two vacant hospitals in just a few years. Carraway Hospital closed five years ago and has yet to be redeveloped. Trinity Medical Center will relocate in 2016, creating another large, empty property. We talk about prospects for those sites in this week's Magic City Marketplace. ; 4:00.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-09-02; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

With college football season underway many people will now spend Saturdays in stadiums, in front of TVs or glued to their phones to see how their favorite teams are doing. While college football is practically religion in Alabama, it's also a business. For this Labor Day, it's a football edition of Magic City Marketplace.; 4:00.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-09-09; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

A revival of downtown Birmingham does seem to be gaining more momentum as a couple of new high profile deals have been announced in the last few weeks. And while plenty of attention has been given to the effect of a new baseball stadium in the city center, there's more to it. We talk about that in this week's Magic City Marketplace.; 4:00.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-09-16; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

Birmingham hasn't seen an initial public offering for eight years. But one company has announced plans to move in that direction. There's also an indication we could see more of that kind of activity. We hear about that in this week's Magic City Marketplace.; 4:00.

Cindy Crawford: Magic City Marketplace

2013-09-23; 6:35, 8:35, 16:45

UAB is still about a month away from firing up its new cyclotron -- the centerpiece of a 30-million dollar renovation of the university's Comprehensive Cancer Center. But UAB officials and others are already calling the machine a game changer. We hear more about that in this week's Magic City Marketplace. ; 4:00.

EDUCATION

Joseph Walter: Doing Much More Than Surviving

2013-07-09; 06:33, 08:33, 16:30

Pompe disease is a rare and often fatal illness that attacks the heart and skeletal muscles. Many people with the early onset form don't survive past childhood. But just north of Birmingham there's an eighteen-year-old who's not only surviving, but thriving. He recently graduated high school, and as WBHM's Southern Education Desk reporter Dan Carsen tells us, that's just part of the story.; 3:50.

Kyle Whitmire: A Closer Look at Board of Education Meetings

2013-07-10; 16:45, 18:45

Kyle Whitmire with AL.com and The Birmingham News attended this week's Board of Education meeting. Tensions at the meeting were high between state intervention team officials and elected board members. Kyle explains why the state intervention team is there in the first place as well as what needs to be accomplished before it can leave.; 4:00.

Hoover Stakeholders React To School Bus Cut

2013-08-10; 13:00

Hoover school leaders recently made their case for last month's controversial decision to end the system's regular-ed busing program, effective next August. In light of the outcry, the school board set up a public forum, held Thursday night at Spain Park High School, where system leaders explained school finances and heard stakeholders' numerous concerns. WBHM has archived the entire meeting as a matter of public record and broken out 10 key exchanges for listeners. Click above to listen. ; 3.5 hours.

Hoover Cuts Buses, Ignites Controversy

2013-08-13; 05:35, 07:35,

Hoover's school board recently voted to end its bus service, effective a year from now. District leaders say they have to cut costs as enrollments rise and revenues fall. But as WBHM's Dan Carsen points out in a recent national report, many in the hilly, sprawling Birmingham suburb don't believe that's the whole story. Click above for more.; 3:45.

A Turnaround at Birmingham-Southern College

2013-08-27; 6:33, 8:33, 16:45

Classes start at Birmingham-Southern College Wednesday and for students returning to the school there's a very different atmosphere than just a few years ago. In 2010, the college faced a financial crisis, leading to deep budget cuts and layoffs. But now the campus is on the rebound. As WBHM intern Pooja Gajare reports much of the credit is being given to the school's president. ; 4:00.

Veterinarian Glut

2013-09-10; 12:00

In case you missed this recent national story: Lots of young people who love animals want to be veterinarians, but vet school is demanding and expensive. And the work is less cute and cuddly than many realize. Even so, there are more vets than there's work for them to do. WBHM's Southern Education Desk reporter Dan Carsen starts this story from an Auburn University vet camp that may be part of the solution. *With previously unpublished photos. WARNING: Some viewers may find some of the photos disturbing.; 4:45.

Grooming The Next Cyber-Warriors

2013-09-12; 05:33, 07:33

Eric Snowden. NSA code-cracking. Chinese government hackers. It's hard to avoid cybersecurity issues in the news. And many experts think the United States is simply not up to the threats. That's mainly because there aren't enough good guys with the skills to do battle in this expanding arena. But there's a unique partnership in an Alabama school district that's working to change the scenario. WBHM's Southern Education desk reporter Dan Carsen has more, with previously unpublished photos.; 4:00.

John Archibald: Race and Greek Life at the University of Alabama

2013-09-19; 6:33, 8:33

Students, faculty and administrators at the University of Alabama are trying to figure out what's next after a march Wednesday calling for an end to racial discrimination in campus Greek organizations. The march comes after the student newspaper published a story detailing allegations of racial bias in sorority recruitment. But the bias seems to be coming from alumna not current students. We talk about the unfolding controversy with AL.com and Birmingham News columnist John Archibald.; 6:00.

INTERVIEW: Tanner Colby, Some of My Best Friends are Black

2013-09-20; 01:00

As Barack Obama campaigned his way to the presidency, self-described lily-white writer Tanner Colby began pondering exactly why he and so many other white people basically had no black friends. The reasons are complex, ranging from school policy to real estate practices to media image-making to church politics, but the former Vestavia Hills resident dives right in from the springboard of his own life, recognizing his ignorance the whole way. The result: 'Some of My Best Friends are Black: The Strange Story of Integration in America.' Our Southern Education Desk reporter Dan Carsen caught up with Colby soon after the author appeared on MSNBC to discuss America's persistent racial separation.; 16:00.

Commentary: Courage in Unlikely Places

2013-09-24; 5:35, 7:35, 16:45

With the new school year in full swing, students and families are back into their routines. But for some, accessing educational opportunities is anything but routine. Commentator Larry Lee tells the story of one mother and the effort sheâs making to ensure her children make it in school.; 3:22.

INTERVIEW: State Schools Chief Of Staff On Decrease In Per-Pupil Spending

2013-09-24; 6:33, 8:33, 16:33

Since before the recession, the number of dollars Alabama spends per student has dropped more than it has in any other state. Percentage-wise, Alabama's decrease was second only to Oklahoma's. Thatâs all according to a recent report from the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities. WBHMâs Southern Education Desk reporter Dan Carsen caught up with Alabama schools Chief of Staff Craig Pouncey to find out why, and what it all means.; 5:20.

GOVERNMENT

Kyle Whitmire: Tension grows in City Council

2013-07-03; 16:45, 18:45

Kyle Whitmire with AL.com and The Birmingham News takes a look at the growing tensions in Birmingham's City Council, the surprising announcement of Edward Maddox's run for City Council, and thoughts on Jefferson County's bankruptcy exit plan.; 4:30.

John Archibald: A Wave of Murders in Birmingham

2013-07-04; 633, 833

Birmingham has seen a violent crime drop in recent years, but a rash of homicides has police and city leaders scrambling to respond. It's a subject that's easy to gloss over if you live in a safe neighborhood or aren't directly affected. But AL.com and Birmingham News columnist John Archibald says it's something that should prompt outrage.; 6:00.

John Archibald: Coal Mine Hardball and Jackpot Justice

2013-07-11; 6:33. 8:33

When you turn on the tap, you probably don't give much thought to where the water comes from. For some Birmingham residents it comes from the Black Warrior River. AL.com and The Birmingham News columnist John Archibald offers an update on a planned controversial mine along the river. He also talks about "jackpot justice" in the BP oil spill claims process.; 6:00.

The Miss Mary Case

2013-07-12; 16:45

When the U.S. Supreme Court issues a ruling, its decisions can carry weight for generations. For instance, civil rights decisions to overturn schools segregation or to uphold the Montgomery bus boycott are just as significant today. But another Alabama case from that era had a subtle effect on how courts treat defendants. WBHM's Andrew Yeager reports.; 3:12.

Kyle Whitmire: The Real Powers of an Elected Local Official

2013-07-17; 16:45, 18:45

Local elections are taking place next month. Candidates are getting their platforms ready and thinking about what they want to accomplish while in office. But before they start making promises to voters, they may want to take a closer look at what power they actually have when elected. Kyle Whitmire with Al.com and The Birmingham News says, local officials are often surprised by what they can and cannot do once they get into office.; 5:00.

John Archibald: A Sideshow over Power Rates

2013-07-18; 633, 833

Government public hearings can sometimes be dry, perfunctory matters few people pay attention to. That not the case with a Wednesday hearing by Alabama's Public Service Commission. The panel is reviewing the rate structure that determines what Alabama Power charges its customers. AL.com and Birmingham News columnist John Archibald explains how contentious the process has become.; 6:00.

Alabama's Mental Health Shift

2013-07-23; 6:33, 8:33, 16:45

Like many states, budget cuts have forced Alabama officials to take a good hard look at how the state cares for people with mental illness. Since 2008, the Department of Mental Health has lost $40 million in state funds. So they've opted for a less expensive form of treatment -- community-based mental health centers and apartment communities. Les Lovoy reports on the challenges of that options.; 4:35.

Kyle Whitmire: What JeffCo Sewer Rate Hike Really Means

2013-07-24; 16:45, 18:45

The County Commission wants to raise sewer rates even more than originally planned to help Jefferson County exit bankruptcy. Some argue this is what's needed to help Jefferson County while others say it unfairly places a burden on the county's people. Kyle Whitmire takes a closer look at what the hike in rates really means.; 4:15.

John Archibald: Coming Full Circle in Bankruptcy

2013-07-25; 6:33, 8:33

As Jefferson County works toward leaving bankruptcy, the discussion around new sewer rates sounds rather familiar. We talk about coming full circle in the county's financial saga with AL.com and Birmingham News columnist John Archibald.; 6:00.

Kyle Whitmire: How to Define a Reasonable Sewer Rate

2013-07-31; 16:45, 18:45

At the core of Jefferson County's sewer problems is a question of fairness: Are Jefferson County sewer rates reasonable? What defines reasonable? And if they're not, how do we change the sewer rates? Kyle Whitmire with AL.com and The Birmingham News says there's still work to be done when it comes to creating reasonable sewer rates in Jefferson County. ; 4:30.

John Archibald: Has Being Neighborly Become a Business?

2013-08-01; 6:33, 8:33

The Birmingham Water Works board objects to Jefferson County's plan to exit bankruptcy. Also, has being neighborly become a business? And the Birmingham City council fights over just what to name a proposed baseball museum. We talk about all this with Birmingham News columnist John Archibald.; 6:00.

Kyle Whitmire: Who Is Looking Out For JeffCo Ratepayers?

2013-08-07; 16:45, 18:45

This week Jefferson County successfully defended its bankruptcy plan from four objectors in federal court. Bankruptcy Judge Thomas Bennett said the objectors did not have standing to object to the county's plan because they were not creditors. Kyle Whitmire explains what this week's hearing means for ratepayers in Jefferson County.; 5:00.

Kyle Whitmire: Who Is Looking Out For JeffCo Ratepayers?

2013-08-07; 16:45, 18:45

This week Jefferson County successfully defended its bankruptcy plan from four objectors in federal court. Kyle Whitmire explains what this week's hearing means for ratepayers in Jefferson County.; 5:00.

John Archibald: Discontent within the Birmingham Water Works

2013-08-15; 6:33, 8:33

The split between management and workers can be a source of tension in many workplaces. But for employees of the Birmingham Water Works they seem to be particularly unhappy. AL.com and Birmingham News columnist John Archibald talks about a "no confidence" letter from employees, a sign criticism of the water works' leadership isn't just coming from the outside.; 6:00.

Birmingham Plane Crash Updates

2013-08-16;

Federal officials expect to know Friday whether any information can be recovered from the so-called black boxes from this week's crash of a UPS cargo plane near the Birmingham airport. They say preliminary evidence shows no sign of a pre-crash fire or engine failure. The plane, flying from Louisville to Birmingham, clipped trees and power lines before crashing and catching fire in a field close to the end of a runway. WBHM has compiled the latest updates on the story.; .

What do Birmingham Voters Want?

2013-08-20; 16:45, 6:35, 8:35

Birmingham voters go to the polls next Tuesday to pick a mayor, city council and school board members. The election comes at a time when the city is garnering positive headlines for a new downtown baseball stadium and entertainment district. But Birmingham's schools also face the threat of losing accreditation due to a dysfunctional board. WBHM's Andrew Yeager went to a recent candidates forum to hear what issues voters say are most important to them.; 3:14.

Kyle Whitmire: JeffCo to Hire a Receiver

2013-08-21; 16:45, 18:45

This week U.S. District Court Judge Lynwood Smith said the county needs to appoint a receiver. The receiver will select, hire, promote, demote, discipline, or fire Jefferson County employees. Kyle Whitmire with AL.com and the Birmingham News explains what the appointment of the receiver means for JeffCo residents and those employed by the county. ; 4:30.
