KOKI Local News of Public Interest:

Weather

Firefighters Battle Flames in Frigid Temperatures

Date: 1/2/22 9pm

Duration: 1:45

Spencer Humphrey

Cities and towns across Green Country are struggling with bitterly cold temperatures and winds. This includes crews battling fires. Water turns into ice quickly in this type of weather. Crews must keep pumps circulating to prevent freezes. Fire crews are asking people to be careful as they try to stay warm and avoid any accidents that can lead to a fire.

Protecting Animals from Frigid Temperatures

Date: 1/4/22 5am

Duration: 2:00

Spencer Humphrey

Dangerously cold temperatures are moving across Green Country. Animal shelters and local humane societies are warning pet owners about the danger offering tips about keeping animals safe during these frigid temperatures.

City of Tulsa Prepares for Winter Weather

Date: 1/19/22 5pm

Duration: 1:40

Amy Hybels

Temperatures are expected to plummet during the overnight hours. Crews with the City of Tulsa are driving through the city, treating roads to keep drivers safe. In addition to roads, several organizations are opening shelters to protect vulnerable Tulsans from the dangerously cold temperatures.

The 2021 Winter Storm, One Year Later

Date: 2/9/22 5pm

Duration: 2:00

Michael Grogan

While Green Country has already experienced a fair amount of winter weather, it's nothing in comparison to what we experienced a year ago today on February 9, 2021. Tulsans and surrounding cities endured inches and inches of ice, which created power outages and hundreds of car accidents. While the FOX23 Severe Weather Team looks back at this storm, we are also tracking another line of winter weather inching towards Green Country.

Dry and Windy Conditions Create Perfect Storm for Grassfires

Date: 2/15/22 5am

Duration: 1:45

Amanda Gilbert

A grass fire has burned around 20 acres of land near Coweta. As crews continue to battle the flames, meteorologists are tracking and monitoring the dry, windy conditions that has created the fire danger. Some travel trailers, RVs, and the back of a semi-truck were burned. Thankfully, no one was hurt.

The New Tornado Alley

Date: 2/28/22 9pm

Duration: 2:50

James Aydelott

Oklahomans are no stranger to tornadoes. The Sooner State has been at the center of Tornado Alley for hundreds of years. However, more states across the Southeast are experiencing violent, long-track tornadoes. Meteorologists believe that climate change is the reason for the shift. However, more tornadoes in the Southeast does not mean that Oklahoma will see fewer storms.

First Day of Meteorological Spring

Date: 3/1/22 6pm

Duration: 2:30

James Aydelott

March 1st marks the first day of meteorological spring. Tulsans may not notice big changes at first, but warmer temperatures will ease into Green Country through the next few days. Usually, we begin seeing warmer temperatures on average, but there is a chance that we could experience one more round of winter weather before we officially warm up.

Preparing for a Late Season Winter Storm

Date: 3/11/22 5am

Duration: 2:30

Spencer Humphrey

Tulsans and those around Green Country are preparing for yet another round of winter weather. Crews with the City of Tulsa are treating roads as snow falls Friday morning. However, Tulsa Public Schools, Owasso Public Schools, and other districts in the area decided to have school in person. An Owasso school bus slipped off the road, but thankfully everyone on board is safe.

Tracking Strong Storms on Saint Patrick's Day

Date: 3/17/22 6pm

Duration: 2:30

James Aydelott

Saint Patrick's Day is starting with clear and beautiful weather across Green Country. However, those celebrating the holiday will need to keep an eye on the skies later in the evening. There's a chance that some storms could roll into the area, and some could be severe. There is a possibility of strong winds and small hail.

Proposed Bill Would Allow Parents to Have a Say in Banned Books

Date: 1/4/22 5pm

Duration: 3:10

Tanya Modersitzki

State Bill 1142 would give Oklahoma parents the right to have books featuring sexuality, sexual identity, or similar topics banned from school libraries. If the books are not removed, staff members could be fired. The author of the bill, Senator Rob Standridge, says these type of books doesn't belong in the library but rather in sexual education classes. Advocates against the bill say this is not the right response to teaching sexuality.

State Superintendent Joy Hofmeister Speaks on Distance Learning Amid the Pandemic

Date: 1/13/22 5pm

Duration: 2:10

Tanya Modersitzki

Oklahoma State Superintendent Joy Hofmeister speaks to FOX23 about students returning to virtual learning as cities across the state experience a surge in COVID-19 cases. During her interview, Hofmeister speaks about the substitute teacher shortage, finding healthy staff members to keep schools open, and the best way to protect students from the virus.

City of Broken Arrow to Decide on Letting City Employees Act as Substitute Teachers

Date: 1/18/22 5am

Duration: 1:45

Amanda Gilbert

Broken Arrow Public Schools is one of the many school districts across the state struggling to find enough teachers to keep doors open amid the pandemic. The City of Broken Arrow is considering allowing city employees to step in and act as substitute teachers if needed. Employees could also work in the cafeteria or as a janitor.

Date: 2/4/22 5pm

Duration: 1:10

Sara Whaley

Oklahoma Attorney General John O'Connor has directed the Oklahoma County District Attorney to determine if embezzlement charges should be filed against Epic Charter Schools. The Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation has recently wrapped its investigation into the school program, as two leaders within Epic are accused of embezzling more than $10 million dollars of taxpayer money. The accused deny all allegations.

Gov. Kevin Stitt Appoints New Member to State Board of Education

Date: 2/15/22 5am

Duration: :25

Michelle Linn

Oklahoma Governor Kevin Stitt has appointed Tulsa native Sarah Lepak to the State Board of Education. Lepak will fill the vacant seat for Congressional District 2. Lepak, a former employee of Stitt's, worked for his company Gateway Mortgage. Lepak worked for Stitt from 2012 to 2017.

Oklahoma Attorney General Will No Longer Investigate Alleged Obscure Books

Date: 2/24/22 9pm

Duration: :30

Sara Whaley

Oklahoma Attorney General John O'Connor says he will no longer investigate books that parents consider "obscene." O'Connor says he began his investigation after receiving several complaints from parents about books in public school libraries. O'Connor recommends that parents take their concerns to the school board instead.

State Representative Calls for Reparation Scholarships for Race Massacre Decedents

Date: 3/2/22 5am

Duration: :45

Michelle Linn

State Representative Regina Goodwin of Tulsa wants descendants of the 1921 Tulsa Race Massacre to receive scholarships for higher education. Oklahoma House Bill 4154 would utilize a 20-year-old scholarship to help descendants of survivors. Goodwin says the scholarships would also benefit those living in the Greenwood District.

Senate Bill 1647, Called the Empowerment Act, Would Give Vouchers to Private Schools

Date: 3/10/22 5pm

Duration: 3:05

Tanya Modersitzki

A proposed bill would use taxpayer money to give vouchers to private schools. Senate Bill 1647, also known as "the Empowerment Act," would give private schools $3,000 per student, if the student transfers from a public school. Advocates for public schools says the bill would hurt public school students. However, supporters say it would help students who would benefit from receiving instruction in a smaller classroom setting.

Parents Concerned, Upset About Mental Health Surveys in Public Schools

Date: 3/15/22 5pm

Duration: 2:20

Tanya Modersitzki

Some Green Country parents are upset about a survey their children have filled out at school, and they are calling the questions inappropriate. Questions include their age, grade, and what sex they were assigned at birth. Parents are calling the survey an "invasion of privacy," while school officials say the surveys are a tool to monitor any possible drug use or mental health issues. The surveys are anonymous.

Turley Man Personally Fixes Potholes in His Neighborhood

Date: 1/4/22 5pm

Duration: 2:00

Alex Cash

A man in Turley, frustrated by a lack of responses from officials, begins personally repairing potholes in his community. One of the potholes was more than two feet deep and nearly three feet wide. The largest pothole was created by the water department digging a hole. While they made repairs, the patch didn't stick. Tulsa County handles repairs in this area and were not aware about the issue. They are now stepping in for more repairs.

Bond Issues in Bixby

Date: 1/12/22 5pm

Duration: 2:35

Amy Hybels

As more students enroll within the Bixby Public Schools district, voters are asked to approve a $110,000,000 bond that would include construction of a new high school. The district is expected to grow by more than 10,000 students within the next decade. If approved, the bond would provide $70 million dollars towards the new campus. The bond will not raise taxes for those living in Bixby.

Oklahoma Natural Gas Customers to Pay More Following 2021 Winter Storm

Date: 1/26/22 5am

Duration: 1:45

Julia Gorman

The Oklahoma Corporation Commission has approved a fuel cost recovery plan for Oklahoma Natural Gas after the 2021 winter storm. Millions of dollars will be spread across 25 years, and customers can expect to see a rise of $7.82 per month. State law allows the plan, and without it, customers could have seen an average of $15 more per month.

Date: 2/21/22 5am

Duration: 1:45

Amanda Gilbert

An Arkansas man is in custody after police say he fired more than 30 shots outside of Tulsa's Hard Rock Casino and Hotel. David Temple allegedly drove his Tesla to the casino and was charging his car when he pulled out an AR-15 and began firing at random. No one was hit, but a van was struck several times. Grove surrendered peacefully to police. He is facing multiple charges.

Proposed Changes Could Impact Oklahoma's Pardon and Parole Process

Date: 3/2/22 5pm

Duration: 3:10

Rick Maranon

A proposed bill that would limit the abilities of the Oklahoma Pardon and Parole Board has passed through a committee. The bill would not allow the Board to grant clemency or pardons for any inmate. Instead, people sentenced to death could request clemency to only the governor. No cases would be overturned. The author of the bill says it's an attempt to prevent mass attention and hearings following the clemency hearing of Julius Jones in November.

Police Search for a Suspect After a Police Chase Enters the Tulsa Area

Date: 3/10/22 5am

Duration: 1:45

Amanda Gilbert

Officers from multiple agencies are searching for a suspect after a police chase moved through Skiatook. The chase ended with a crash, and the suspect ran away from officers. Investigators believe the thief stole the SUV from Tulsa. Osage County deputies, Sperry police and Skiatook police all took part in the chase.
