Trump big announcement on the Paris Climate Accord	NOTICIERO UNIVISION 630PM	06/01/2017	6:32	2:06	President Trump will make an announcement today on the Paris climate treaty, in typical Trump fashion, officials caution that no decision is final until the president officially announces it. Trump is also facing intense eleventh-hour lobbying from both inside and outside the administration to keep the United States as part of the accord. Under the accord, 190 countries committed to cutting greenhouse-gas emissions, in an effort to combat climate change. If Trump decides to withdraw the United States from the global climate accord, it would be seen as a win for chief strategist Steve Bannon and those aligned with him who have urged the president to pull out of the landmark agreement. But it would also be seen as a loss for Trump's daughter Ivanka Trump and son-in-law Jared Kushner, who reportedly back in February pushed the president to remove language critical of the Paris accord from an executive order related to environmental issues.

Organizers are expecting protests from several thousands of people in New York, Washington, Pittsburgh and more than a hundred cities across the country and the rest of the world with the intention of calling for an independent investigation into Trump's presidential campaign contacts with representatives of the Kremlin in the 2016 elections. The march will be supported by congressmen, actors and progressive groups across the country in order to increase the pressure to thoroughly investigate the possible coordination of Trump's team with Russia to torpedo the options of Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton. Organizers of the demonstration hope to gather up to 5,000 people in New York and a similar number in Washington, where the event will coincide with a rally of Trump supporters to the White House. Proponents of the protest urged that it be given the resources and independence necessary to research the links of Trump's campaign with Russia.
