Renewed respect

Newport, N.C.
April 17, 2011

TO THE EDITOR:

I have a renewed respect for the news department of WCTI, particularly the weather reporters.

Saturday, as the storms crossed over eastern North Carolina, I sat in my house watching the radar and reporting on WCTI. For six to seven hours non-stop, Skip Waters and his entire crew kept us informed as to where every thunderstorm, strong wind and tornado was located. We received a minute-by-minute, mile-by-mile update as to where the danger was and where it was going.

I had loved ones across the region traveling in the midst of these tornadoes. I was able to tell them by phone where there was danger and which road was the safest for their travel.

I am very thankful we in this area have such a remarkable group of people keeping us informed. I am sure there were other stations doing the same but I was watching this one. Skip and his crew know eastern North Carolina well, and when Skip needed more information he had an atlas in his hand and by referring to it was able to give us street by street and sometimes building by building directions as to where these storms were.

I thank WCTI and its weather department for their devotion to us, the residents they serve. They did an outstanding job.

Thank you for your extraordinary coverage of the dangerous storms that moved through Eastern North Carolina yesterday. (Saturday)

We are especially appreciative that you had the wisdom and good taste to provide continuous, up-to-the-minute storm coverage without commercial interruptions. For many hours, all day and late into the night, your infinitely detailed coverage showed precisely where the many thunderstorms and tornados were, what direction they were traveling, and the speed at which they were approaching areas that were in imminent danger. Undoubtedly your station's expert advice and timely warnings saved many lives in Eastern North Carolina.

Unfortunately, The Weather Channel did not exercise such good judgement. Consequently, because of their many lengthy commercial breaks, they were not able to provide continuous, adequate and timely information about the many fast-moving, potentially deadly storms. We respect your courageous decision to place our safety ahead of fiscal considerations.

We are native Floridians who gave up on Florida in 1982, moved to New Hampshire where we enjoyed every snowflake for 18 years, and have now been in Plymouth for ten years where we are restoring Plymouth's oldest house (1799). We have experienced many hurricanes, (we both were born in 1934) but this was our first tornado – much more traumatic than a hurricane. The service your station provided was truly outstanding.

Waters on the mark with tornado coverage

Comments 1

April 20, 2011 9:00 AM

To the editor:

I must commend Skip Waters, the weatherman at Channel 12, for his coverage of the tornadoes.

I don't know how many hours he was before the camera, because he was there when I turned to the station about 4 p.m., and he was there when I turned the television off for the night.

I don't know how one person could know so many locations in southeastern North Carolina. I understand that he probably has a map to refer to, but it doesn't tell of the stores, churches, landmarks, etc., that he calls by name and knows exactly where they are.

I live in Jacksonville, and because of his precise reporting, I knew that I didn't need to take cover even though it hit about eight miles from my house. He practically named the streets it was hitting.

Once again, I want to thank him — his coverage was outstanding. And I am sure he was one exhausted man when the day finally ended for him.
